U. S. Naval Expert Says Airplane Will Be Co-Factor of the Big Gun Ship in Controlling the Sea

Capt. Yates Sterling Predicts Extraordinary Uses for Aircraft in Connection With Naval Operations in the Future.

By YATES STERLING,
Captain, United States Navy.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.

"THE battleship is dead. The great fighting machine of the future will be the airplane, which will develop rapidly. I have seen the British navy change from sails to steam, from fighting on the water to fighting under and over the water. Now the question is, what is the navy of the future to be? Battleships were dead before the war and I think they are dead now. A battleship costs $40,000,000 and carries 1000 shells containing 100,000 pounds of high explosives, with an effective range of 15 miles, but is vulnerable to aircraft with bombs and aerial torpedoes, and to submarines carrying 15 or 18 inch torpedoes. For $40,000,000 we could build many airplane-carrying ships equipped with airplanes carrying 100,000 pounds of explosives. It takes a battleship weighing 30,000 tons to carry 100,000 pounds of explosives. Ten airplanes of three tons each should carry the same amount.

"ADMIRAL SIR PERCY SCOTT, R. N."

SIR PERCY SCOTT, before the great war, predicted that the submarine would prove a formidable weapon for Germany against Great Britain. The prophecy came true and in consequence the Admiral as a prophet is not without honor, even in his own country. If this new prophecy, a much more radical and bolder one than he has ever made, contains the germs of truth, based upon clear and conclusive reasoning, then the United States must hasten to prepare itself on the sea in order that a new war may not find it unprepared. At all events, coming from such high authority, the opinions demand naval professional investigation at once.

"Battleships Are Dead."

"Battleships were dead before before the war and I think they are more dead now." This seems a most daring statement for Sir Percy to make, for the history of the war leads to other conclusions. The British grand fleet together with our battleship reinforcements proved that battleships and battle cruisers are not nearly dead. The existence of the power of the Grand Fleet prevented the German submarines from accomplishing the purpose set them by the German high command at Berlin.

It is well known that prophets spring up during each decade and espouse the radical weapons of naval war, relegating to the limbo the old and tried-out types of fighting ships. In the late eighties, France under the spell of a naval prophet neglected her battleship construction for that of torpedo boats, which at that time loomed large as a terribly destructive agency. Great Britain was France's traditional enemy on the seas; against Great Britain's battleship a huge fleet of torpedo boats armed with torpedoes was conceived to be more effective than an inferior number of French battleships. Germany, under the spell of Von Tirpitz, thought it could defeat the Grand Fleet with submarines alone.

France saw and corrected its error, while Germany staked all upon the beliefs of its prophets and lost.

Ships to Carry Airplanes.

The fact seems to be that most prophets mistake the "means" for the "end." The end in naval warfare is the control of the sea highway; the means are the weapons employed for the purpose. The point overlooked by France, also Germany and now possibly Sir Percy Scott, is that the weapon, be it torpedoboat, destroyer, submarine or airplane, in order to control the sea highways, must conclusively contribute to the destruction of the enemy's surface warships in order to gain command of the sea. After the complete destruction of the enemy's big surface ships, with what will Sir Percy retain command of the sea?

Sir Percy's prophesy is based upon the existence of enemy battleships. These the airplanes will destroy. The airplane will gain command of the air above the sea. The airplanes for the purpose are to be carried on board airplane ships. The latter are surface vessels of high speed and of considerable tonnage. The airplane carriers of Sir Percy, the same as already advocated by Admiral Fiske, are to all intents and purposes unarmored battleships with airplanes instead of big guns in armored turrets.

These ships will be subject to attack by both mines and torpedoes, by surface ships carrying guns and by airplanes carrying bombs or torpedoes. How will the airplane ship defend itself? If in the conception of the type no guns are installed, then very soon the need for guns will be recognized. The size of the guns will be increased following the law of evolution in exact proportion to the demand for defense against attack, until we shall end with the airplane carrier resembling a battleship but with the addition of airplanes as a part of its armament. The airplane carrier may also find that some armor is needed to give it added protection from gun and bomb attack, or else its speed will be greatly increased to give it immunity from attack.

In fact the airplanes will be merely a new sort of gun and projectile when carried by a surface ship. Instead of having a range of only 15 miles, as has the 16-inch gun, it will have a range of several hundred miles. Instead of the shell carrying 100 pounds of high explosive, the airplane will carry 33,000 pounds of high' explosive. Instead of once having been fired, continuing in a straight line to a previously selected point, it will be controlled by an intelligence almost to the point of impact. Inasmuch as the airplane carrier requires protection from attack to be able to continue its life, it must find that protection in being accompanied by heavily-gunned surface ships or else carry its own big guns. The airplane will not supplant the big gun, it merely will become a co-worker for the same end—the control of the sea.

The sea and the air are practically limitless, and the control of these two mediums of transportation is for any one nation in war a difficult task. Farseeing nations, valueing their commerce, have fitted up strategical localities to be used as points of support for their war and merchant fleets. The supporting points yet will be found necessary in war and the airplane cannot act as such a point, nor can the airplane carrier in the garb proposed by Sir Percy, for it would not be able to resist the attacks made upon it by the well-tried out and reliable types of war ships. A battleship is an expensive vessel, but all money ceases to be of value when defeat comes to destroy a nation's credit.

Navy in Eddy of Progress.

In the consideration of the airplane replacing the battleship today, it is hardly conceivable that the air ever will be used as is the sea, and that great air fleets, war or merchant, will use its limitless spaces upon purposes of war and peace. The medium is too light. The carrying power in merchandise of airships, heavier or lighter than air, in comparison with surface ships, is negligible. Great and unforeseen improvements in air navigation must be expected, but the enemy of air navigation—gravity, cannot be overcome. He stands ever a potent destructive factor.

Common sense and science should teach the futility of hoping for the annihilation of gravity, yet imaginations have worked upon this impossible dream, permitting many to defy nature's law and use the air without fear of destruction through that never-ceasing force.

Sir Percy's prophecy narrows down to a belief in the airplane carrier replacing the modern battleship—a reversion. Why, then, revert when past evolution should teach us that the airplane carrier will not be content to remain stationary, but will gather to itself both guns and armor and will soon return up the rungs of the ladder from which it was hurled?

It is not well to be content with what we have. We ever strive to advance. The navy today is floating in a dangerous eddy in the current of progress. It contains all the modern weapons of sea warfare. The proportions are not exact but that can be remedied if we can arrive at a logical and scientific understanding of the direction toward which the hand of progress points. The navy is cluttered up with many ships, long obsolete for naval war. These absorb the nation's money, yet bring no return to the nation upon the money lavishly spent in their upkeep.

Need of New Weapons.

A time for radical change in weapons seems to be arriving. Our eyes should be turned to the future, and to the past only to understand the course of evolution. A weeding out process in navy material and a concentration of fighting types only are essential steps in order that we may husband our money for experiments, and for building advanced types of weapons. The airplane carrier is no longer a conception; it

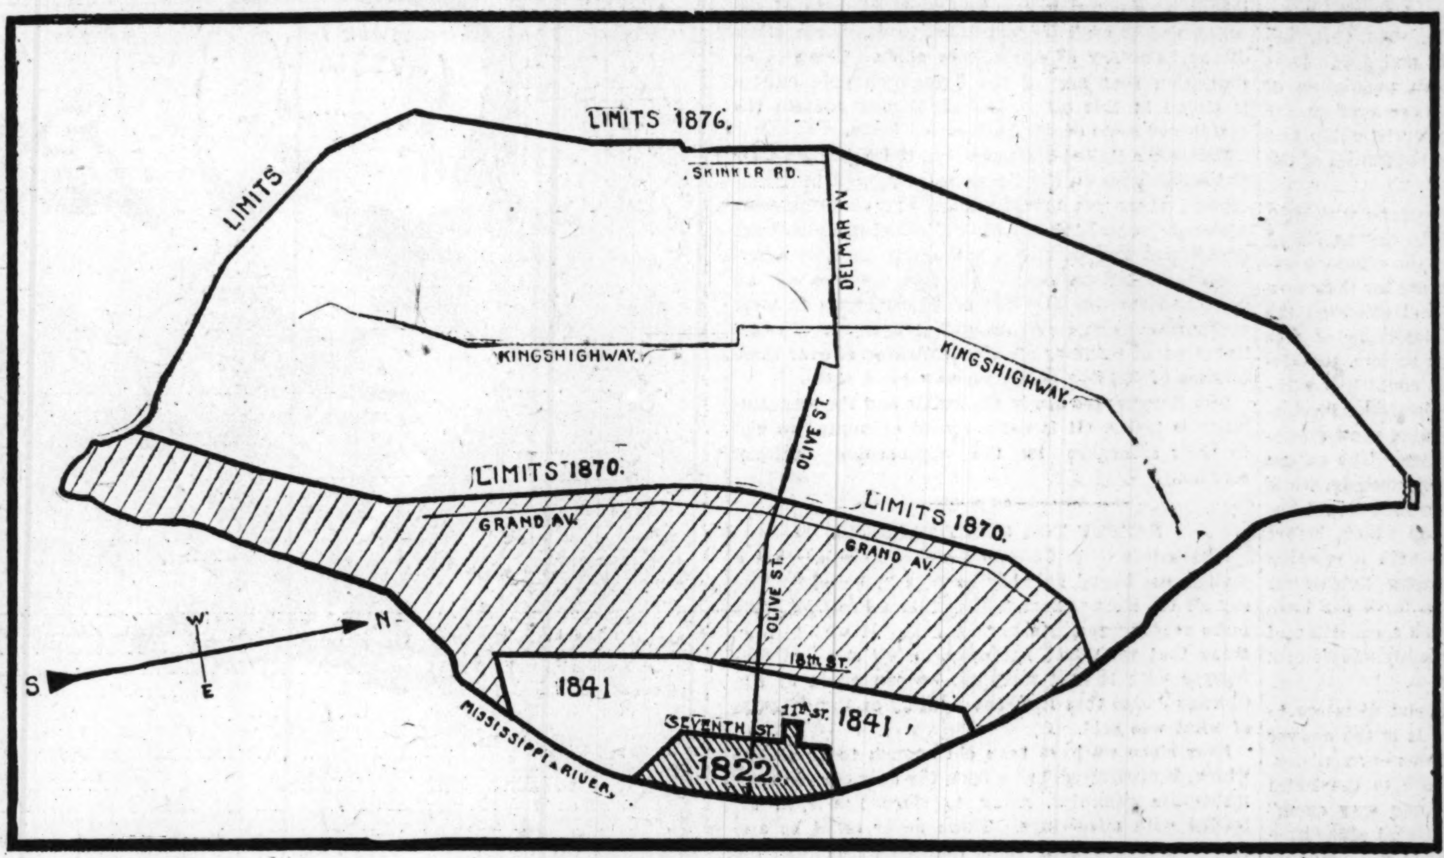
St. Louis' Population Growth Hampered by Same City Limits It Had in 1876

ONE REASON WHY WE MAY LOSE FOURTH PLACE



Map Showing St. Louis' Various Extensions of City Limits

THIS historical map, prepared by Lloyd H. Storm of 3508 Pine street, an advertising man, tells the story of the failure of St. Louis to attain the population figures which it should have, and which would probably make it secure in the position of the fourth city of the United States.

The map shows that St. Louis has not added one square inch to its area for nearly 44 years, the present boundaries being those fixed in 1876.

A tabloid history, which Storm has prepared to accompany the map, shows that the city has grown from a population of 925 in 1803 to one of approximately 800,000 in 1920, despite the constriction of its boundaries. The first corporate limits of St. Louis, established in 1822, extended from a point at Rutger street, south, to the north line, a short distance beyond Ashley and Biddle streets. The city extended west to Seventh street, with a section to Eleventh between Franklin and St. Charles.

In 1841 the limits were extended along the river south to Arsenal street, west to a point between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, and north a short distance beyond Dock street, a territory of 2865.10 acres.

The next extension came in 1870, when the western limits were placed 600 feet west of Grand avenue. South the boundaries were extended to the River des Peres and north to a line crossing Bissell avenue, a total territory of 11,504.75 acres.

The final extension came in 1876, west to a point beyond Skinker road, north to a short distance beyond Coal Bank road, the southern boundaries remaining the same. The extreme north to south distance is 17 miles and the extreme east to west distance 6.02 miles. The city now covers a territory of 61.37 square miles, or 39,276.25 acres. The river front is 19.15 miles and the western city limits line is 21.27 miles in length.

Movement to Be Inaugurated Immediately to Unify County and City for Enumeration 10 Years Hence to Give Municipality Benefit of Having Counted All the People Who Belong to the Community.

RETAKING lost ground is a frequent incident of warfare. It is a task that calls for the best fighting qualities of the soldier.

Consolidating and securing a position that has been taken is another of the most important duties of military forces.

St. Louis will have to do one of these two things, in its contest with rival cities, in the next 10 years.

If Detroit, or Cleveland, or Boston, or all three, show a greater population than St. Louis in the 1920 census, St. Louis will have to fight to regain fourth place. Few St. Louisans will hold that this city should be permanently content with a lower position.

If the St. Louis census showing, which is expected to be about 800,000, is not exceeded by any of these rival cities, the margin in this city's favor will be a narrow one, and the need for consolidating and securing the city's position will be manifest to everyone.

There are two ways of adding largely to the recorded population of the city of St. Louis before the 1930 census. Both ways must be taken. One way is to bring more people to St. Louis by industrial development. This is being done, and the growth in population resulting from the creation of the new northwestern industrial district is expected to be apparent within a year.

All Properly St. Louisans.

The other way is to count the people who now properly belong to St. Louis, in its industry, its trade and its civil life, but whose residences are outside the present city limits, and within the State of Missouri. This means the reunion of the city with St. Louis County, in whole or in part, and this is a matter which St. Louis will have to take up in earnest, the sooner the better.

Arrangements are being made for a conference, to be held probably this week, of representatives of business bodies and of the city government, and with residents of St. Louis County, for the purpose of planning a campaign for the adoption of a practical plan, which shall give the city its due record of population, and which, at the same time, shall be of benefit to the residents of what is now suburban territory.

Two attempts have been made, in the past three years, to obtain State legislation which might make it possible for St. Louis to expand its boundaries. Both these attempts have been defeated by the opposition of some of the residents of St. Louis County, and by the indifference of St. Louis legislators and of the general public.

If the 1919 Legislature had passed the enabling act which, instead, was permitted to die in committee, it would have been very difficult to obtain the desired results in time to figure in the census which has just been taken. The process of incorporating outlying territory, involving important problems of taxation, public welfare and safety provisions, is not a matter to be rushed through in a few weeks or months. Careful study and fair presentation are needed.

Movement Should Be Started Early.

Therefore, it is incumbent on St. Louis to make an early start on the campaign for expansion of boundaries. It is a movement for reunion, rather than for annexation. The word "annexation" has an unpleasant sound to some persons who are proud of community independence. The word "reunion" is correct historically, for St. Louis and St. Louis County were united politically before 1876, and became separated in that year as a measure of independence for the city, rather than for the county. The separation was, in part, the result of a revolt against a county political ring known as the "Sweet Sixteen."

St. Louis County now includes seven incorporated cities—Kirkwood, Webster Groves, University City, Ferguson, Valley Park, Maplewood and St. Ferdinand; the village of Clayton, the town of Bridgeton, and unincorporated communities, of which Wellston is the largest.

Whether the whole county shall be taken under the city government, with provision for the assessment of city lots and farm land on a separate basis, or whether the city shall re-enter the county, and shall add contiguous territory piecemeal, are questions to be worked out before a new plan is presented. The plan should be ready for the Legislature which will convene in January, 1921.

Interviews obtained by Post-Dispatch reporters on this subject, since the publication in the Post-Dispatch last Monday of the news story forecasting a census count of approximately 800,000 for this city, are as follows:

Kiel Favors Vigorous Campaign.

Mayor Kiel: I am in favor of a vigorous campaign for expansion of the city limits, and I will co-operate in any way that I can. I feel that residents of St. Louis County ought to take pride in the standing of St. Louis as a city, and in helping St. Louis to keep its rank among the cities. If the matter were presented to them on this basis, I feel that the opposition in the county might slow down and give us a chance. If we have lost our place as fourth city, we will have to get together and get it back in the next census. If we still hold our place, we must make ourselves secure against being overtaken by our rivals.

We Alone Have Not Extended Limits.

W. Frank Carter, President of the Chamber of Commerce: If we are to keep pace with the growth of other large cities we must take in more territory. I do not mean a false growth, merely for the purpose of a surface showing in the census returns. St. Louis is entitled to more territory than it now includes. Think of it, we have not extended our corporate limits since 1876. There is no other large city in the country which has stood still in this matter during even 10 years. Detroit, Cleveland and Boston, our most-feared rivals in the way of population figures, reach for all the territory in sight, and Chicago has never been backward. So many people living in the county have their business interests in the city, and so many business men of the city have their home interests in the county, that it seems strange the matter should have been so long delayed. Some fair solution of the tax question can be worked out.

Samuel Rosenfeld, President of the Million Population Club: The standing of this city in the census means more than the average person realizes. The enlargement of the city would be of practical value to everyone living in the county, for it would give them fire protection, lessened insurance rates, the advantages of city schools and the protection of our sanitation system. It would afford the county people all the opportunities of the city, and at no greater tax cost. If they will stop to figure, the cost to them of lights, water, insurance, maintenance of county schools, and inadequate fire and police protection, they will know that their tax rate would be reduced. Some of the county municipalities are now paying a tax rate of approximately 3.17 per cent, while the city of St. Louis rate is but 2.35. I have worked very hard for this to be brought about, and I strongly hope that the present movement is to culminate in success. St. Louis will have 1,500,000 when the next census is taken, if this is done.

Unification of County and City Desired.

Ernest J. Russell, chairman of the City Plan Commission: There is no question in my mind that St. Louis needs more room to grow, but I do not think the annexation movements in the past have been entirely equitable. We have heretofore asked St. Louis County to part with what is undoubtedly its most valuable district and I regard the objections of county residents as well founded.

I believe some plan of unifying the county and city is desirable. I have never been able to learn what originally caused the separation, but in my opinion there is no sound reason for the two communities remaining as they are. Both the county and city would benefit immeasurably by re-uniting. Such a reunion would certainly broaden the scope of the City Plan Commission's activities and would enable the commission to undertake constructive work that would save a stupendous sum to the county in its future development.

The commission is now engaged in remedying some of the mistakes resulting from lack of forethought in the building of St. Louis Many sections of the city have been retarded in their development through lack of accessibility. The future building development will be in the county and the mistakes made here should not be repeated there.

Louis P. Aloe, president of the Board of Aldermen: I am heartily in favor of resuming the expansion movement, and I think that the men of St. Louis County who have broad vision will lend us every assistance. I have not given the matter much attention recently and do not care to express an opinion as to which plan should be adopted, but I think the proposed conference is very opportune.

Adjust Taxation Problems Fairly.

Hugh K. Wagner, member of the 1919 Legislature, who introduced the last annexation enabling bill: The movement should receive the support of both city and county, and I believe it will, when once the advantages to both have been explained. Last time the bill was introduced it was too near the end of the decade, and the moment was not psychologically the correct one. I believe that a bill will stand a good chance of passing the next Legislature. The movement should be carried along without a single day of interruption. Taxation problems should be adjusted fairly, and they can be. The rural problems require much study, and should not be dismissed offhand. I am in favor of taking in the entire county, but of course there must be a distinction between lands used for farming purposes and city lots.

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co.: It is a great movement and should be pushed along. Both city and county need it, and both should be wholly in favor of it. Unless St. Louis does extend its corporate limits, the

Gilbert K. Chesterton Says Modern World Would Be at Its Best if It Rebuilt the Middle Ages

Declares Profiteering Was Severely Dealt With in Time of Henry II.—Would Give Spiritualists Their Day in Court.

By JOSEPH GOLLOMB,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Published by Special Arrangement With the New York Evening Post.)

LONDON, Feb. 1.

IF a man's choice of abiding place at all expresses the man, it is not hard to understand why Gilbert K. Chesterton should live where he does. Beaconsfield is both far enough away from London to be out of the turmoil of its modernity and near enough to enjoy its conveniences. But Beaconsfield itself is sharply divided between the old and the new. Near the railroad station the town is bright and up-to-date, almost self-consciously so. You buy picture postcards in shops illuminated by electricity. But the views you buy are not of Beaconsfield but of Aylesbury End, which is a mile away and centuries removed from railroads, electricity and picture postcards. And half-way between the two, its windows looking toward the old town, and a telephone connecting it with the new, on a bit of a hill is "Overroads," Mr. Chesterton's home.

GILBERT K CHESTERTON..

Like the house, the rustic-looking gate is of new material carefully patterned on the charm of the old. A shaggy little garden tries to hide the newness of the pretty two-story stone and brick house — new as things in England go. The lines are almost those of a thatch-roofed cottage and look as comfortable. With gentle tact, however, and exceeding ingenuity the inconveniences of the original have been converted to use and disguised as mere quaintness.

The living room, where we talked, cheery with its chintz patterns on furniture and old platters over the mantel, and the dining room, where we had tea, both depended for warmth on the fireplaces which dominated each room. But although there was more than a hint of raw November in each, I knew that it came from the English passion for open windows and not from any lack of modernity on the part of the heating facilities. When the dusk turned to dark, the lamps shed a comfortable Old World light, but I suspected that at the heart of each antique-patterned one was an incandescent bulb.

It was no mere fancy of mine, this seeing in everything connected with Mr. Chesterton the pattern of medieval past adapted to modern use; the clever assimilation of modern conveniences into the pattern of the old. One of George Bernard Shaw's heroes damns a man's mind as being of the vintage of 1830. Mr. Chesterton aggressively claims for his thoughts the superiority of being rooted in the Middle Ages. All good roads for him lead back, if not to Rome, at least to the Catholic Church's contribution to human culture. If anything in our day has failed or is in a bad way, it is because we have wandered far from the Middle Ages. If there is anything of value developing today—and no one is more shrewd in recognizing it than Mr. Chesterton—it is because something from the Middle Ages still survives. And it is a treat to hear him prove his case.

Talks to Ultra Realists.

I had been talking to several of England's ultra-realists in prose fiction No portrayal of life, they said, could any longer claim to be thorough unless it took into account the teachings of Freud and Jung. Into the cast of characters must come the Subconscious. And if it did not play the hero, it must at least take a leading part. Its contributions of suppressed desires, unholy and ugly passions, its suggestions of dank, subterranean chambers and unseen and often unsuspected tragedies may be far from beautiful. But truth has its own laws of beauty, they said. And for the first time the truth of much of life and character was coming to light through the aid of psycho-analysis. It was a contribution so modern, they maintained, that its pioneering scientists were still alive and teaching. Until its coming all interpretation of human character was mere impression, not scientific; and lacking the light of psycho-analysis, how blunderingly humanity had groped through the mazes of its own motivation, and with what tragic mistakes.

I knew that Mr. Chesterton's mind was too alert to miss the elements of truth and value in this position But here was something apparently new under the sun. Would Mr. Chesterton minimize the worth of psycho-analysis? Or would he find that the monks of the Middle Ages had utilized whatever of value there was in the method, to say nothing of knowing all about it?

The first impression I got of Mr. Chesterton was that we have depended too much on caricatures for a true picture of him. Perhaps he has himself abetted the hoax and chuckled over it. He is not the rotund mountain that cartoonists have made him. One sees scores of comfortable-looking business men every day as solid in appearance as Mr. Chesterton without the least remarking them. I saw nothing of the great tortoise-shell pince-nes with its dependent black ribbon; or the swath of cape coat about him with which cartoonists denote the "heavy" in Continental Bohemia. His gray-blue eyes seemed not in the least to need any aid to vision. And his suit of business cut betrayed no symptom of temperament. So far from looking as though he was uttering Olympian paradoxes, Mr. Chesterton almost blushes as he speaks. He not only does not "pontificate," he offers his remarks with a touch of deprecation of their importance. But there is a Puck-like twinkle in his eyes that says, "What fools these 'moderns' be!" And then there is the Chestertonian phrase in which his very mind seems cast. For, remarkable to state, he talks as he writes; and if a written interview fails to reveal the fact, the limitation is the interviewer's and not Mr. Chesterton's.

"Psycho-analysis?" he said. "Science is so fond of giving new and long names for old and familiar facts! Of what the world has always known as a mood, phycho-analysis seems to have made a monomania.

Known by Old Masters.

"All the old masters took for granted what your newest novelists hail as a discovery. Didn't Shakspeare know all about the Nietzschean nonsense of untrammeled desire? Only he put it into the mouth of a scoundrel, Richard the Third, where it belonged. And if in his portraits of Brutus' wife and of Juliet, Shakspeare did not show up the sinks of iniquity in their characters, it was perhaps because the women did not betray them in their lives. And, after all, it is living that counts, doesn't it?"

"But a part of life does lie in the subconscious," I ventured.

"Ay, yes. Consciously I may be a murderer. But subconsciously I am a lamb."

"Suppose the case to be the reverse. Surely you should want to consider the subconscious then! The hatches aren't always battened down."

"True. But there are hatches just the same. It seems to me that psycho-analyses take only one side of an eternal argument—the wrong one—and present it by itself. And to the extent that there is truth in what they overemphasize, the church has had the treatment for the civil almost as long as humanity itself has had it. If I am afflicted with a perpetual itch to kill my grandmother, the best thing I can do is to take notice of the fact and then talk it out to somebody. But self-examination and confession is as old with orthodox religion as tradition itself. No, it is not medievalism that battened down the hatches, but the moderns. It is not from the formula of the believers in miracles and in the unseen that the world suffers, but from the smug formula of the rationalists and their premature generalizations. The rationalists made up a list of what is possible or 'rea-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Taxes, Taxes, Everywhere.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In the good old days of Benjamin Franklin, when a man could lay aside a nestegg for a rainy day, the old fellow was fond of coining phrases, one of them being, "Money makes money, and the money that money makes makes more money." Of course, not being a prophet, he could not see far enough ahead to foretell the time when money that makes money would make less money, and the only way to get any benefit out of the money you had saved was to spend it (before the tax collector got wind of it and reduced it by a rake-off). The fellow who is lucky enough to have a nestegg nowadays is the fellow who, fortunately, was born far enough in advance of the present period to take advantage of the opportunities that were Franklin's. He has the egg, but it won't hatch, helping him thereby to produce more eggs. The only thing left for him to do is to consume it, which he will have to do sooner or later, if the cost of living continues to advance and taxes increase and multiply as they threaten to do. To illustrate: A has $3000 in bank, on which he receives $90 in interest. The State and Federal income tax of 1½ per cent and 4 per cent, equal to 5 per cent, amounts to $4.95. The personal direct tax of $2.35 a hundred amounts to $70.50, making a total tax of $75.45. Deducted from $90 interest in the bank leaves him a net total of $14.55, or a little less than ½ of 1 per cent. Next year this pittance may be wiped out entirely. Being honest and conscientious, A pays it, but if he is wise in addition he will take it out of the bank and, like Ali Baba, hide it in a cave in the shape of a hole in the ground. Result:

A loses his interest. The bank loses a depositor. The Government loses the tax. The State loses the tax. The city loses the tax. The money is taken out of circulation.

Now then: Is A honest? I say he is! Did he do right? I say he did! Is he dodging his taxes? Not much! What would Franklin say could his shade appear and speak? I think he would say this: Money made money and the money that made money made more money—when I was alive—but that's been a n— of a long time ago.

The Reed Defense.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Will you permit one who has no personal acquaintance nor affiliations with Mr. Charles M. Hay to notice the defense of Senator Reed in the morning paper by Messrs. Arnold and others, by an ostensible attack upon Mr. Hay?

An attempt is made in this five-column article to deceive and mislead the people by an appeal to those who are opposed to the prohibitory amendment, the absurd and ridiculous charge being made that Senator Reed's vote against that measure is the basis of the opposition to Mr. Reed. The 48 Democratic members of the Legislature who condemned Reed, the members of the Democratic State Central Committee, which condemned Reed by a unanimous vote, excepting one vote cast by an Irishman who held a proxy and whom Reed failed to have appointed Postmaster at Kansas City, have never gone on record as favoring the prohibition movement, while the platform of the Third Congressional District emphatically repudiated Reed by adopting the League of nations as a party measure, yet did not indorse prohibition. Neither did the Democratic League of St. Louis, which repudiated Reed, approve of prohibition. The attempt to deceive and mislead in this matter is too palpable to be effective.

The charge made in the article that those opposing Reed are aspirants to his seat in the Senate is too ridiculous to warrant serious discussion.

The effort to boost Reed by reason of the vote he received when elected no more justifies his course than calling to mind the splendid military services of Benedict Arnold will condone his treason at a later date.

A Job for Mr. Figg.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I notice that Mr. Figg, the assistant to the Attorney-General, is still running around the country assisting the profiteers and advising labor to bend its back. For the information of Mr. Figg, I refer him to the report of Secretary Glass, as quoted by the daily press:

"Eighty corporations, after deducting all excess profits and income taxes, made $3 net profit in 1919 for every dollar net profit made in 1916, 1917 and 1918."

The recent confession of Attorney-General Palmer before the Senate Committee on Agriculture, "that the packers clearly violated the Sherman anti-trust law" and his answer to the pointed question, "Do you intend to prosecute them?" was not evaded, but brazenly answered by him, "I do not," seems sharply in contrast with his attitude toward the recent coal miners' strike.

I suggest that Mr. Figg bend his back just a little and study up the net profits of his American Woolen Co., Central Leather Co., Cuba-American Sugar Co., United States Steel Corporation and others instead of running around the country in a nonessential occupation.

BOLSHEVISM'S SUPREME TEST.

The inside view of Bolshevist Russia given by Lincoln Eyre, the Post-Dispatch correspondent, who has made a 10-weeks survey of Russian conditions, shows that Russian Bolshevism is facing its supreme test. Having accomplished its revolutionary work of disorganization and destruction and having gained supremacy by armed force over all Russia, it must solve the problem of economic reconstruction under soviet rule with soviet methods.

It is a gigantic task. The destruction of the old industrial and commercial system was so complete that rebuilding from the foundation is necessary. There is no working system with a shadow of efficiency left. The factories were confiscated by the wage earners, but they could not operate them after they got them. The banks were seized by the Soviet Government, which was unable to supply a working substitute. Old methods of exchange were repudiated, but new methods that would work were not devised. Money became worthless. Transportation collapsed and with the collapse of transportation the practical collapse of industry and commerce was inevitable. With food and raw materials plentiful in rural Russia, the cities starved and the factories were idle. Idleness, starvation and cold, with their accompanying diseases and social maladies, have wrought fearful havoc on the urban population of Russia. Despite the effort to enforce communism, the peasants cling to individual land proprietorship and speculative capitalism thrives on the necessities of the people.

The soviet dictators have more to contend with than destruction and disorganization. The license issued to the ignorant, the discontented and the criminal elements to murder, destroy and confiscate for their own gain has had a profound psychological effect on the working men. Coupled with the lassitude of war weariness, from which all of Europe suffers, the dislike of work and the idea that they could live without work took possession of the proletariat. Production in factories that have been operated show an appalling lack of efficiency in production. The output of locomotive works has decreased enormously, while the force required to produce the decreased output has greatly increased. A locomotive shop which, before the war, turned out 50 locomotives with a working force per locomotive of 20 men, under Bolshevism turned out seven locomotives with a force per locomotive of 120 men. The effect of such a condition of production on prices and wages is readily understood. It means the collapse of industry.

What is the answer of the Bolshevist dictators to the problem of industrial collapse? It is the answer of all class and individual despotisms—compulsion. Trotzky outlined it fully in his speech to the Third Russian Congress. "There is still one way open," he said, "to the reorganization of national economy—the way of uniting the army and labor and changing the military detachments of the army into detachments of a labor army." Already divisions of the army have been detached and put into the factories under the rule of military officers and military discipline. The soldiers are compelled to work, under severe military penalties. The disobedient are tried and punished by courtmartial. Deserters are shot. The soldiers of the revolutionary armies are the slaves of the labor armies.

How does the condition appeal to American converts who have been dazzled by alluring pictures of communism, under which all property is to be confiscated and the wage earners are to own and operate industry?

The experience of Russia with a combination of anarchism and Socialism and the experiments elsewhere in revolutionary Socialism have had an extraordinary effect on Socialism throughout Europe. The leaders are no longer aggressive and confident, but are timid and tentative. Lenine declares that "Marxian Bolshevism" is a proven failure. Edward Bernstein, the German Socialist leader, retorts that "Bolshevism works for the degeneracy of mankind," but admits that revolutionary Socialism has failed. He vigorously urges his followers to give up all idea of overnight revolution and to work through evolution. He says the proletariat is not ready to take over industry and establish the Socialistic state. They must go slow and work for gradual changes.

The dreadful lesson of economic revolution, in which all economic laws have been defied, with disastrous results, ought to be salutary in our own country. The picture of Russia's economic collapse, with its attendant horrors and its ultimate resort to labor slavery, should give pause to the deluded Bolshevist enthusiasts of America.

Under our free institutions we can work any desirable political change through the ballot box and we can democratize industry by giving the working men fair participation in management and earnings, without disaster. To abandon our efficient industrial organization and our free voluntary democratic cooperation under law for the horrors of destruction and economic disorganization ending in industrial regimentation and despotism would be madness beyond compare—madness manifest to the most ignorant,

As far back as 1907 Admiral Sims rapped our navy by comparing our battleships to mudscows. But what was responsible for the condition of our navy in 1907? Was it the Wilson tariff law of 1893 or the Wilson League of Nations of 1920?

ECONOMY OR MORE BONDS—WHICH?

The Congressional Record has the reputation of being the dryest publication in the English language, but it may be confidently asserted that no citizen—especially if he pays an income tax—can fail to find it of absorbing interest at this time, when appropriation bills are being reported and debated.

The measure immediately under consideration is the agricultural appropriation bill, from which we may learn many surprising facts concerning this department. Who, for example, was aware of the necessity for the employment of 743 messengers in the Department of Agriculture at $1000 a year? One would think that all of the other department employes and officials were legless veterans of our past wars. These messengers are so thick in the corridors, says Mr. Blanton of Texas, that one can with difficulty make his way from office to office. Yet his amendment to reduce the number, offered in the interest of economy, was overwhelmingly defeated.

Nor is it generally known that it requires one lieutenant of the watch, two second lieutenants of the watch and 73 ordinary watchmen to watch the office of the Secretary of Agriculture alone. There is no indication that any of the Treasury's gold bullion is stored in this office, though it may contain the samples of some of our high-priced foods.

Before the United States entered the war there were 30,000 employes on the Government payroll in Washington; there are today 110,000, nor does Congress appear to be making any serious effort to compel the department to return to a peace-time basis by denying appropriations, despite the fact that there is an estimated revenue for 1920 of $5,300,000,000 to meet appropriations and deficits of $9,000,000,000. The alternatives of economy are a continuation of over three billions of floating debt or a new bond issue.

The Republicans are in the saddle and the responsibility is theirs. It is not a record calculated to add to their assurance in the approaching national election.

SAFETY FOR SLEEP-TALKERS.

Blessings on the Chicago Judge who ruled that a man is not bound by what he says in his sleep. So say all the sleep-talkers. After this we can all sleep more soundly and talk more loudly. If we tell anything that we would not want to tell and are confronted with it next morning, we can prove by the Chicago Judge that it means nothing or the opposite of what was said.

Ever since we have been old enough to do things which, if discovered, bring upon the doer certain commensurate penalties, going to sleep has been attended with misgivings. There never could be any certainty that waking would not bring reckoning for peccadillos or proclivities divulged in slumber's babblings. General acceptance of the certitude of such disclosures and consciousness of sufficient shortcomings to account for almost any tale-telling asleep has made defense useless.

So when a Chicago woman heard her husband murmur "Sis" in his sleep, she inferred that he was dreaming of his stenographer and that such dreaming implied undue waking interest in the girl who typed his letters and she sought a divorce. She testified to what her husband had said about "Sis," but the Judge said what a person said in his dreams might be just the opposite of what he said or thought in consciousness and ordered the sleep-talking testimony stricken out. Truly a very learned and upright Judge.

MR. BAILEY ONCE OF TEXAS.

The announcement of his candidacy for the governorship of Texas by former Senator Bailey has not occasioned the commotion that possibly was expected.

But a curious objection has been raised to Mr. Bailey's attempted renaissance which to many may seem a peculiarly delicious instance of poetic justice. A citizen of San Antonio has cited the Constitution of Texas to prove Mr. Bailey's ineligibility for the honor he aspires to. The Texas Constitution requires that a candidate for Governor must "have resided in this State at least five years immediately preceding his election." Further, the Texas Constitution defines "residence" so definitely as to leave no doubt that by his prolonged absence of some eight years in Washington he has forfeited his Texas citizenship as regards gubernatorial expectancy.

Now, it may be that an ordinarily adroit and agile aspirant would experience little difficulty in scaling that impediment. But to Mr. Bailey such a provision must be an insurmountable barrier. For the Bailey fame and eminence are predicated almost exclusively on his literal acceptance of the organic law, national or state. With the charlatanry of dialectician, twisting words or phrases to serve the sordid purpose of a political expediency, Mr. Bailey has never shown sympathy. On the contrary, he has excoriated such casuistry in fiery periods. Indeed, it is in behalf of the ancient faith which accepted the Constitution as written that Mr. Bailey quit the calm of his capitolian retirement to engage in the rough-and-tumble of politics.

Does the Constitution of Texas grin sardonically as it observes the solemn figure of the former Texan hoist on his own petard?

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams.

MY OLD DESK.

HERE it is—my dear old desk!
Filled chock-full of scraps—
Clippings, quotations, letters, pictures,
Themes and comments and gleams and hints—
Seeds of a thousand possibilities—
Straws from the currents of the world's thoughts
And undercurrents of my own;
Skeletons—not of vertebrates
But of lucubrations to be.
Here they all are—
The essential microcosm and macrocosm
Squeezed into the drawers and pigeon-holes
Of my dear old desk.

Some time—or some other time—
I'll go through the stuff and sort it
And surprise you with the outcome—
Compilations and anthologies
And wonderful literary mosaics;
And from some of the jottings
I shall fashion a pretty song or sonnet,
And the thought of it shall be sweet as a rose
And the form of it perfect as a cameo;
It shall revivify the time when we were young,
O my best beloved!
And shall image forth
Better than anything hitherto
My immeasurable love for you.
You didn't think, did you,
Such a treasure lies hidden
In this dear old desk of mine?

THE RUM PLAN.

Sir: Everybody nowadays has a plan for something. In fact, Mr. Glen Plumb seems to have started som-thing. As neither the wets nor the drys seem to be able to handle the drink situation, I wish to submit a plan to your readers for their consideration. It is called the Rum plan, and consists of the following provisions:

1. The Government shall buy, seize, confiscate or otherwise obtain and operate all gin mills, distilleries, breweries, moonshiners, brass rails, bartenders, steins, mixers, headaches, dark brown tastes, delirium tremens, pink elephants and all other animals, articles and property belonging to, consisting of and necessary for the manufacture, distribution and consumption of wine, beer, hooch, hair tonic, white mule and all liquid containing more than one-half of 1 per cent pep.

2. An additional officer shall be added to the Cabinet whose duty it shall be to direct the proper distribution of all drinks and see that everybody gets his share. He shall be known as the Secretary of Jazz.

3. Suitable buildings, similar to the post-offices, shall be erected in each city, town, village or hamlet, on petition to Congress of 55 per cent of the population, for the distribution of all or any part of the product provided for in provision No. 1; substations installed in cities of 50,000 or over and a carrier system similar to the postal service inaugurated for the benefit of citizens who are too busy or otherwise unable to get theirs at the main office.

4. A private general delivery window shall be maintained for transients, hen-pecked citizens and hypocrites, who do not desire the carrier service. Rural districts shall be served by R. F. D.

5. All money earned by this plan shall be used to build and maintain bromo-seltzer factories and sanitariums and also to provide old age pensions for the steady patrons.

Respectfully submitted, I. M. RUM,
Hillsboro, Ill.

SORROW AND FRIENDSHIP.

AH, Sorrow, thou dost prove too well that we
Are loved for what we have and not for what
We are. The plenitude of friendship dwells
Not on the cravings of a naked soul,
But only tempers for the festive robes
That shimmer idly on the limbs of wealth.

Sir: While riding along Chouteau avenue this sign struck my funny spot

Express & Halling.

Do I get a number for this? E. S.

Certainly. You are No. 834678008543257435678909754. Sorry you did not get in earlier and secure a lower number.

Let us not settle the contest in business versatility without considering this advertisement from the Salem (Mo.) Monitor. This fellow is no piker:

For Sale—Registered Short Horn bull calves, green pole and cord wood, also bailed hay and straw and one good sow with nine pigs. Pigs two months old. E. C. Orchard.

Sir: A sign just across from Union Station on Eighteenth street would indicate that the proprietor of the little cleaning establishment had a man-sized job:

We Make U Over While U Wait.

And he seems confident of success, in view of the invitation appearing on a small card in the same window:

You are No. 93256709654325678975432. Sorry we cannot do better.

Sir: Having just returned from Fort Worth, Tex., I thought you would be interested in a few signs I saw while down there. One on a grocery store on West Seventh street:

The second is an inscription on a tombstone:

TO A WREN.

I THOUGHT of ev'ry pretty thing
Much sought for things of wond'rous worth,
From buds that come with verdant Spring,
To jewels hidden in the earth.
My memory I searched with care
For such a fitting simile
As might her beauty well declare.
O long for aught as fair as she
I searched that record thru and thru—
A paragon of maids is she,
Words fail to give her honor due.

Wild roses on a morn in June
Are fair as one could wish to see,
A shy brown thrush, its silv'ry tune—
A tall, slim dew-washed white birch tree;
A tinkling fall 'mid moss and ferns—
A gull 'twixt azure sky and deep;
The life to be towards which man yearns—
A wren wrapped in its tiny sleep;
Ah, there I have it, found at last!
The wren awakes and there she is,
A damsel, tiny, fair and chaste.

REVIVAL OF TRADE IN EUROPE.

From the New Republic.

FIRST of all, we must ask ourselves, is there anything that can be done—except by way of charity—which is not already being done through the regular operations of trade? We believe that there is a great deal that could be done if the leaders of industry, trade, finance and shipping would get together in an international conference to determine how just that minimum stimulus can be given to industry, now here, now there, that would raise it from anemic invalidism to self-sufficient vigor. As an example of what could be done we may cite the method by which Dutch traders and financiers are breathing at least a little life into German industry. The Dutch are supplying raw materials with the stipulation that a definite proportion of the finished product shall be turned over to them to make good their advances with a profit. The remainder of the product remains in the hands of the manufacturer and serves the double purpose of paying wages and of supplying consumers who would otherwise have to go without. The Dutch business men who are carrying on so useful an enterprise must, of course, represent a fairly powerful combination. They must have the commercial connections that will enable them to dispose of the products, and influence enough to secure the consent of the German and allied Governments. Manifestly, however, their sphere of action is limited. They would not find it safe to extend their activities far into any field that involved competition with their national industries or those of the allied nations. They have to limit themselves not only by considerations of the soundness of the operations, nor even by their limited financial power, but by a long array of nationalistic jealousies and prejudices as well. That they can do anything at all suggests how much could be accomplished under a plan sponsored by the collective financial and commercial leadership of the Western world.

CITIES TO OWN STREET RAILWAYS.

From the Nation.

IN America the street railway companies have generally milked their business about dry, and are therefore arriving at the stage where they are willing to sell to municipalities, at a tidy figure, accumulated problems of mismanagement together with depreciated tracks and rolling stock. This is true to precedent. When the ferries of New York began to run at a loss several years ago, the necessary routes were taken over by the city, and it appears to be a generally accepted principle that municipal ownership and operation of a public utility shall be undertaken only after it has ceased to be profitable. This, of course, has a double advantage; it enables private owners to sell an otherwise unsalable product, and it affords an example to which they can point in future as proving that municipally-owned public utilities are invariably run at a loss and to the dissatisfaction of the public.

NEED OF ALCOHOL.

LATHROP STODDARD in World's Work for March.

THE London Morning Post utters this caution for those who would deny themselves hard drinks:

It seems to be almost the only certainty in a universe where so few things are certain and even a straight line is more or less an illusion, that human nature in going needs, now some mild stimulant, now some mild sedative. Alcohol comes to man carrying both in its amphora. It can give a fillip to our tired energies. It can give rest to our jagged nerves. True, it is like a mercenary force, which should be employed with precaution and never allowed to assume mastery or to camp. But, used wisely, it is one of man's most valuable servants, and there is as yet no record of a civilization built up without its aid. Let us wait a hundred years and see how dry America fares.

Events in the Social Worl

Lack of Functions Leads to Impression That St. Louis Society Folk Are Keeping Lent Religiously and Taking a Needed Rest From Season's Gayety.

SOCIETY is apparently religiously keeping Lent, as no functions of any size have appeared on the social calendar for some time, and with none scheduled, it appears that society folk are to have the rest needed after the winter season of gayety. But while those here may be quietly resting, the season at the resorts is in full sway and reports of fancy dress balls and gay parties of all kinds are heard from time to time. At a fancy dress ball given by "The Cocoanuts" at the Country Club at Palm Beach recently, Miss Ada Johnson, a debutante of last season, apeared in a costume of an Oriental Princess with Stuart Stickney as an Argentine. At the same place Mrs. David R. Calhoun appeared as "Common Cita" at a burlesque tableau.

There have been very few weddings lately, but since the first of the year an unusual number of interesting engagements have been disclosed which indicates that there will be many Easter and June brides. These prospective brides are no doubt busy selecting and completing their trousseaux and have little time for social affairs unless perhaps it be a small afternoon party, to which they may take their sewing.

Of interest to society is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Anne M. Block, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Block, 4555 Pershing avenue, to Hugh Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, 31 Westmoreland place, which was made at a luncheon given by Mrs. Block on Friday afternoon.

Miss Block received her education at Miss Wright's School, in Bryn Mawr and at a French school in the East. She made her debut this season at the Veiled Prophet's ball, when she was one of the six special maids of honor to the Queen. She also shared honors with Miss Ruth Lionberger at an oriental ball given by Mrs. Neill A. McMillan at the St. Louis Club and which was one of the largest and most elaborate social functions of the season. She was invited into the Imperial this season and is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Scott is a graduate of Yale University and is a member of the Country Club and the Imperial. The wedding will take place in October.

The marriage of Miss Florence Beardslee Jones, daughter of Mrs. Helen Beardslee Jones of 4511 Tower Grove place, to Raymond D. Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hill of 3843 Shenandoah avenue, took place at the Second Baptist Church at 8 p. m. Friday evening, Feb. 20, in the presence of the immediate families. The Rev. William C. Bitting officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Hill will be at home after March 1 at 426 De Baliviere avenue.

Miss Corinne Trembley, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Edward Wilson, entertained a number of her friends at a bridge party yesterday afternoon at the home of her father, Joseph H. Trembley, 236 East Swon avenue, Webster Groves. Small corsage bouquest of sweet peas were presented to each guest together with cards announcing her engagement to Charles A. Barnes. The guests included Mesdames Arthur Trembley, Tom Hawkins, Robert Brown, Walter Haddaway, Louis Wolf, Albert Spiers, Clarence Carrico, Stephen Chamberlain, Willard Wright, Edward Griesedieck, Alfred Wilson, Simeon Tyler, Brodie Hamilton, John Duncan, Edward Wilson, Albert Barnes; Misses Helen Block, Virginia Douglas, Orpha Kendrick, Cora Alt, Helen Kropp, Christine Skinner, Jessie Skinner and Marion Sprague. Mr. Barnes formerly resided in Texas and received his education at the University of Texas in Austin. He lives with his mother, Mrs. A. G. Barnes of Webster Groves. Miss Trembley attended Overland college at Overland, Ohio. The wedding will take place April 27 at the Emanuel Episcopal Church in Webster.

Miss Aline L. Reavis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Reavis, 6028 Maple avenue, has departed for Miami, Fla., for a visit.

Miss Lida Crawford, daughter of Mrs. George Lacy Crawford of the Claridge Apartments, and Charles M. Carr, 4915 Argyle place, have chosen April 10 for the date of their wedding. The ceremony will take place at 6 p. m., at St. Peter's Church, the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips officiating. The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. James R. Leavell, who was Miss Lorna Doone Carr, will be matron of honor, and Misses Peggy Murphy, Lucy Butler, Lucy Ludington and Helen Battle will be bridesmaids. A reception at the home of the bride's mother will follow the ceremony. After May 1 they will be at home at 4947 Laclede avenue.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Olive M. Gibbons, daughter of Mrs. W. G. Gibbons, 5515 Cabanne avenue, and Dr. George Marshall Meyers, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Meyers, 5653 Cates avenue. Dr. Meyers is a graduate of Washington University Medical School and was formerly on the staff at Barnes Hospital. Miss Gibbons came to this country about three years ago from England. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mrs. Frank Obear, 1322 Belt avenue, gave a tea Friday afternoon for her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Davison Obear, who was married Jan. 30. Mrs. Obear's daughter, Mrs. N. R. Fill, assisted in receiving. Misses Emily Kauffman and Mary Orr served at the tea table, which was decorated with spring flowers. Serving were Mmes. Frank E. Kauffman, W. S. Walker and Franklin Ferriss, and Misses Pearl Gehner and Adele Gehner. Miss Isabel Irving of the "Civilian Clothes" Company was without a hat.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Foerster, 3935 Lee avenue, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Antoinetta M. Foerster, to Lieut. Edward R. Gunter of San Antonio, Tex. The wedding will take place some time next month when they will go to San Antonio to reside.

An affair of interest this week is the drawing room conference to be held at the residence of Mrs. J. F. Queeny, 3453 Hawthorne boulevard, Thursday at 2:30 o'clock. The meeting will consider problems connected with supplying St. Louis women workers with suitable lodgings. An effort to unite St. Louis women who have done and can do things into a city-wide support of the campaign of the Y. W. C. A. and the Letmar Club for financial aid toward the two hotels planned for the women who come to St. Louis to work.

Mrs. Queeny will be assisted in receiving by her daughter, Miss Olquita Queeny, and a delegation of South Side and West End matrons, among whom will be included Mmes. George A. Meyer, Sylvester J. Judge, Frank Nielson, Louis Stockstrom, Henry W. Kiel, Henry Gildehaus, William K. Bixby, Harvey G. Mudd, Samuel C. Davis, William A. Stickney, Charles P. O'Fallon, J. P. Tirrill and Miss Olquita Queeny.

Mrs. N. A. McMillan, chairman of the shops of the Board Walk production to be given soon, will depart within a few days for a visit with relatives in the South. Before departing Mrs. McMillan will set under way an inventory of the donations that have been made to the shops. It is reported several pieces of diamond set jewelry and a pearl necklace on which a value of $5000 has been placed, have been given.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard H. Guest of Webster Groves entertained last Saturday night with four tables of pinochle. The guests were Messrs. and Mmes. C. Leeman, C. H. Harris, Bryant Bass, E. Wright, R. Glass and E. P. Moller.

Mrs. J. P. Lean of London, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Emma Brice, 3960 Arsenal street, for four months, left Wednesday to visit relatives in Michigan. She will depart for England next month.

Mrs. L. Kohner, 415 Westgate avenue returned last week from an extended visit to her daughter, Mrs. L. Winternitz, of Baltimore. Mrs. Kohner also visited her sister, Mrs. Sara Emrich, in New York City.

Mrs. M. Louise Thomas of Lenox Hall has issued invitations for a recital to be given Saturday evening at the school. The artist will be Max Gold.

Mnemosyne Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Dienstbach, 5862 Garfield avenue. Responses to roll-call were quotations from Sir Francis Bacon, whose works were the subject of the program. The next meeting will be at Mrs. Frederick Godron's, 3187 Portis avenue, Tuesday, March 9.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Canfield, 3445 McKean avenue announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Gladys Corswhite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Corswhite of Kansas City, to Roy J. Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Wood, of St. Paul, Minn., which took place on Jan. 18 in Little Rock, Ark.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

TERMS USED IN WAR TO DISAPPEAR FROM ARMY BOOKS

New Field Service Regulations Exclude "Liaison" "Over the Top" and Trench Warfare Tactics as Obsolete.

OFFENSIVE SPIRIT TO BE INCULCATED

Training in Future Will Include New Weapons, but Will Be Based on Old Principles of War.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Such phrases as "over the top" and "liaison," which were a common part of the parlance of war literature and conversation, are doomed to disappear from American military phraseology and will not be included in the army text books of the future. The new field service regulations of the United States army and manuals of the various arms of the service, now being prepared by the General Staff, will differ in only minor details from the regulations in force before the world war, and will show practically no traces of the passing vogue of foreign methods.

The formulation of a strictly American doctrine of tactics, and the establishment of a system of uniform instruction in all military schools is the aim of the training section of the General Staff, according to high officers here. So-called "trench warfare" was only a passing episode in military history, in the view of the officers, while the fundamental principles of war are the same as those employed by Napoleon at Jena and by Grant at Gettysburg.

This policy was stated to students of the present class at the Army Service Schools at Fort Leavenworth Kan., by Brigadier-General Hugh A. Drum, director of the line school, who was Chief of Staff of the First Army overseas

No Need to Borrow Tactics.

"Our experiences in the European war have been sufficient and the results so creditable," Gen. Drum said that such terminology as 'open,' 'position,' 'stabilized,' and 'trench' warfare would not be recognized or employed, as the same tactical principles apply to all of those so-called classes of warfare.

Just as Gen. Pershing insisted on training the American Expeditionary Forces for "open" warfare, so at the service schools, Gen. Drum said, "The inculcation of an offensive spirit, which must be the primary object of the course, is best obtained by the study of open warfare offensive situations."

At the same time, it is the plan of the General Staff to make due allowance for new weapons developed in recent years, especially infantry weapons such as the one-pounder guns, automatic rifles and machine guns. These weapons have made necessary the creation of several new units and slight modifications of old infantry formation.

Foreign words will be eliminated from the terminology of the manuals. For example, "information" will take the place of "liaison." "Liaison officers,' 'a war product, will be known hereafter as "information officers."

The service schools will compile their own textbooks, Gen. Drum said, and German authorities studied before the war will be discarded.

While the use of new weapons has caused some changes in organization, it must not be forgotten, officers emphasize, that infantry remains the principal branch of the army and that other services are auxiliary arms. In this connection it was recalled that Gen. Pershing, in a letter to the chief of the Air Service commenting upon the functions of airplanes, said that "an air force by itself cannot obtain a decision against forces on the ground."

"An air force," the General added, 'acting independently, can of its own account, neither win a war at the present time, nor, so far as we can tell, at any time in the future."

LUTHERAN CHURCH TO INSTALL FIELD SECRETARY OF MISSIONS

Pastor Richard Kretzschmar of Emmaus Lutheran Church will install the Rev. William Hallerberg as field secretary of the Western District of the Lutheran "Missouri" Synod at Bethlehem Lutheran Church, Salisbury street and Florissant avenue this evening at 7:30. He will be assisted by other Lutheran clergymen. Pastor [illegible] H. C. Fritz, pastor of Bethlehem Lutheran Church, and president of the Western District, will preach the installation sermon. The Bethlehem choir will sing. Members of Lutheran Churches all over the city have been invited.

The Rev. Mr. Hallerberg was called by the Mission Board, which has charge of the mission work of the Western District, covering all of Missouri, Arkansas and a small section of Tennessee. NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Campaign Will Be Among School Children to Instill Habits of Saving.

National Thrift Week will be observed March 1 to 6 and the savings division of the United States Treasury Department is conducting a special campaign among school children of the country. R. R. Smith, Government director of the Eighth Federal Reserve District, and D. W. Clayton, educational director, have arranged for a big campaign among school children for the 25-cent Thrift Stamps.

No particular amount of sales will be sought, but the campaign will be to arouse interest in the purchase of stamps as a means to cultivate habits of thrift and saving in the youngsters. School teachers and principals all over the country are co-operating in the work.

Thrift Taught in Schools.

While in many of the towns of the district thrift propaganda among children is just beginning, St. Louis school children have bought almost $500,000 of Thrift Stamps. C. G. Rathmann, assistant superintendent of the public schools, announced yesterday that since December, 1917, the total sales amounted to $485,684.72 and that thrift study was a part of the curriculum of the St. Louis schools and one of the most important phases of study. Stephen M. Wagner, a member of the Board of Education, is thrift chairman.

Begun as a war measure, thrift study is retained as a permanent part of the curriculum because, Rathmann states, it has been such a vital means of awakening the interest of boys and girls in forming industrious habits.

Many children earn the money they bring for stamps, the girls by helping with housework after school and running errands and the boys by hauling ashes, shoveling snow and doing general utility jobs. Many bring only a few pennies at a time, which are banked with the teacher until enough are obtained to buy the 25-cent Thrift Stamp. Some children have bought a number of stamps and continue to buy. One boy of extremely moderate circumstances now owns $20 worth.

Instills Patriotism.

The thrift study is a means of teaching children patriotism also, Rathmann states, because they are told that saving and investing in Government securities is an actual help to the United States and that they are stockholders in the Government.

Children of foreign parents are very responsive to the thrift movement and are encouraged by their parents to save and buy the stamps. One school in the city rarely falls behind $100 a week in its sales and returns are mostly in pennies and nickels.

Teachers and principals of the St. Louis schools are heartily in accord with the thrift study and co-operate in every possible way, but special drives and competitions are never put on, as this might arouse rivalry and complications among the children, and it is the thrift habit the School Board wishes to instill in the children, rather than piling up big sales in the various rooms.

CHESTERTON'S PLEA FOR REVIVAL OF THE MIDDLE AGES

sonable.' Then they shut the door on everything that they could not see, feel, measures, test and weigh. Which, of course, barred out miracles.

Proclaim Miracles Now.

"Now come scientists like Alfred Russell Wallace, codiscoverer with Darwin of evolution; like Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir William Crooke, Flammarion, Lombroso, William James, Sir William Barrett and others, and proclaim the miracles of spiritualism—miracles that can be seen, felt, measured, tested and weighed. Tilting tables batter at the doors closed by the rationalists. I don't much like the methods of spiritualism myself. But so many substantial people have testified as to the reliable character of the testimony that in simple justice the witness should at least be allowed his day in court. Nor is it a case only of what a few notables say. Throughout the world and the ages mankind has told a great many stories of the supernormal in normal life. Where so many stories agree there must be some fact.

"So long as men speak of the Middle Ages as 'dark,' just so long will they be blind to the light in their own. We have as permanent models the building they built. The work of barbarians? Could a Gothic cathedral have been built in the dark? Nor was it only on heaven that they had their gaze, these sadly medieval visionaries. Almost in the very beginning of common law you will find that profiteering was very adequately dealt with in the time of Henry II. No, they were no moles. They did a lot of good work and corrected the social and economic abuses of their times in the right spirit and tempo.

Near Healthy Minded State.

"To me it seems that in the brief period about the time of Saint Louis humanity was very near to a perfectly healthy-minded state. Would anyone say that of today? Yet most men of today would rule out of court so competent a witness. It seems to me that the sentiment of brotherhood of man should apply to ages as well as to individuals. The Middle Ages have earned a right to be heard. Their civilization was a vital one."

"Then why did it fail?" I asked.

"That is something I could never quite understand," he replied slowly. "I think perhaps it was partly or largely due to the failure of the Crusades. It took the heart out of the Christian world and let compromise in. When you can't crush your foe, you have to compromise with him. I have always held, for instance, that the Prussian must be crushed. If we had only partly beaten him, we would have had to compound a felonies with him. It was the same with the Middle Ages. They compromised with the heathen, and the compromise entered into the blood of their civilization as a deadly poison."

"Would you, then, have stamped out utterly all civilizations but the Christian?" I asked.

"Well," he hesitated, "one doesn't like to talk these days of 'stamping out' on as large a scale as that. We have become too humanitarian. But I do think that in the early days Christianity might have given the Moslem civilization the knock to good effect. If the Moslems had been heavily deefated they would not necessarily have been wiped out. But it would have been possible to do with them as with the Jews—to make it psychologically uncomfortable to be other than Christian."

Jews Are Sui Generis.

"Which doesn't seem to have kept the Jews permanently down."

"That is so. They are really sui generis, aren't they? But it is the Christian and not the Moslem ideas of patriotism, women, home that have prevailed—because they were right. There are some Christian elements in our civilization today still Even anti-Christian agencies like the Bolshevists unconsciously contain them."

"Subconsciously?"

"Subconsciously, if you will. Certainly the sentiment of the equality of men is so deep a religious sentiment that it is subconscious in most people. The Bolshevists started out with that sentiment, which is one of the most mystical elements in religion. But they have taken all the religion out of the sentiment. Nor are they alone in casting out Christianity. Most of our institutions today seem to have escaped it. In fact, Christianity may well say to twentieth-century civilization, 'Now that you have made the world without me, how do you like it?' Our industrial order is not only detestable but unworkable. And you see its breakdown in the epidemic of strikes for example."

"Then you see civilization declining?"

Civilization Adventuring.

"Neither declining nor progressing. Only adventuring. Man has always adventured. So have ages. Some adventures are tragic. Others comic. The Middle Ages was one of the best adventures."

"Would you measure our progress by the extent that we pattern on the past?"

"Almost all real progress has been made by turning to the past for teaching. Look at the American Declaration of Independence, for instance. It is soaked in classical antiquity. The Renaissance began by digging back. The modern world would be at its best if it rebuilt the Middle Ages."

"What faults had they—if any?" I asked.

"Well, like every other age, the Middle Ages were tangled up in much undergrowth. Conservatism played its part then as now. The bad thing about conservatism is that it tries to keep alive old things after they have had their time."

"The penal code in England a century ago hanged men for stealing sheep," I suggested. "It came down from medieval times. Do you see

Yellow Mustard For Rheumatism

A good hot mustard plaster or poultice is pretty sure to overcome most rheumatic pains and even sciatica and gout, but it's a mussy affair and generally blisters.

Heat is absolutely necessary if you want permanent relief. Begy's Mustarine, made of true yellow mustard with other pain relieving ingredients added, is just as hot, is cheaper, cleaner and more effective than the old-fashioned poultice or plaster and cannot blister.

Besides rheumatic pains and swellings Begy's Mustarine is speedily effective for lumbago, backache, neuritis, pleurisy, bronchitis, sore throat, chest colds and all aches and pains, because heat eases pain—30 and 60 cents at druggists or by mail. S. C. Wells & Co., LeRoy, N. Y.

The Charm of Woman

Is as much a matter of hats as of personality

Consider the mighty power of millinery. It brightens beauty and accentuates comeliness, or sadly mars milady's charms.

Sensenbrenner Fashions show unmistakably the inspiration of Paris. They are individual, yet within the reach of the slim purse.

On Monday we present an incomparable collection of distinctive Spring Millinery Modes.

$5 to $35

Sipper braid is popular, whether combined with cire, taffeta, hairbraid or maline.

Narrow-brim sailors have underfacings entirely of flowers or tailored with cellophane bands.

Raffia hats are the vogue, or with raffia brims and lisere crowns, or vice versa.

Pretty toques of crushed roses or fruits are covered with maline.

Leghorn hats, taffeta hats, and combinations of the two are a feature, while Georgette crepe is employed in many ways.

There are turbans, off-face hats, Napoleonic styles, chin chins, novelty cutouts and many others at a broad price range. (Second Floor.)

anything in it entitling it to survival?"

"Perhaps not today. But at one time it must have had right and justice in it. It must have been a vital thing or it would not have survived. I suspect that at one time sheep stealing struck so hard at the structure of society that hanging was none too severe a penalty. Just as not so very long ago in Texas, say, men were hung without trial for stealing horses. And there are just as monstrous things in our industrial order today as the penal code of the Middle Ages."

"What solution do you suggest?"

"The guilds of the past and the democratized property that went with them."

Tea Ends Discussion.

Tea put an end to our discussion, but there I noted several additional items of interest about Mr. Chesterton. Up to a few days previously, he had never heard of Selma Lagerlof and "Gosta Berling." Until I told him of Nicholas Vachel Lindsay, he had never heard of the poet whose whole manner is described by an American critic as having been inspired by Mr. Chesterton's own poem. "Lepanto." Most interesting of all, however, was the discovery that Mr. Chesterton can paint griffins, fairies, knights in armor, saintly ladies and piquant dancers. Mrs. Chesterton, who is herself something of a poet and artist, took me acrss the road to see their studio. Here in a pretty brick structure I saw a single room with a vast fireplace, a good-sized stage heavily curtained and a tiny gallery for part of the audience. And all around the room ran a border of frescoes by Mr. Chesterton calculated to bring delight to the child in any one, young or old.

It was evening when I left the Chestertons and wandered up to the old village. I found myself in a big market place, the boundaries of it barely discernible in the dark. But there were child-size little shops. I caught glimpses of homes built in another age. In a doorway for a moment revealed against the light I saw a woman sweeping with a besom. Then suddenly I heard a cascade of the most melodious church bells in all the world, it seemed to me. But they were not of the world of today. And in their song I thought I caught something of what it was that drew Mr. Chesterton's heart to the Middle Ages.

is a concrete reality. Let us proceed to develop that type and know now before a new war what protection such ships will require by surface ships of all types, and what protection should be in the type herself.

In our study we many find that in the future we can omit the battleship. Who can say?

All prophets to attain their ends make claims far outstripping their own beliefs. This is necessary in order to startle and surprise the public. Sir Percy will have done the United States a great service if, by his prophesy, he forces us to focus our attention on the course upon which the navy is now steering, and leads us to find out if that course aims for the goal at which we want to arrive.

BRITAIN'S CONTROL OF SEA NOT SECURE DESPITE VAST NAVY

Writer Asserts That Development of Submarine May Render Superdreadnought Useless.

By P. W. WILSON.

(Mr. Wilson is a former member of Parliament. For a considerable time he represented the London Daily News as Parliamentary reporter and is now that paper's American correspondent.)

WHEN the war broke out in August, 1914, nobody knew what would happen on the high seas. Great Britain had a navy which in tonnage was three times that of Germany, but, as Admiral Jellicoe confesses, our sea lords in their arm chairs were nervous.

During the Anglo-German panic of 1908 I asked Mr. Reginald McKenna, then First Lord of the Admiralty, how he would describe a battle between the rival fleets in mid-ocean. "Such a battle," he said, "would last 15 minutes and cost $15,000,000"—meaning, of course, sterling.

The idea then was that fleets would approach in an armada-like formation—first, destroyers to locate the enemy; next, cruisers to hold him to action, and finally, battleships which would pass through the advance guards and deliver the final blow.

All this, however, was mere speculation. No great battle has ever been fought with iron ships. At Shushima, Japan had wiped out the Russians only because the Russians were unpracticed and ill-equipped. In the war with Spain it would be insulting the American navy of that time to suggest that in Manila Bay or at Santiago the contest was scientifically on equal terms. And what I have now to say is this: That with Britain engaged, the greatest war in history has closed without that long-expected Trafalgar of the metal battleships ever being fought. The skirmish at Jutland only revealed two fleets cautiously avoiding a major conflict. And the rest was surrender.

Faces Restrictions.

At first this looks as if once more Britain rules the waves. German sea power has gone the way of Spanish, Dutch and French sea power. I have to state that, on the contrary, in the very hour of her supreme triumph on the ocean, Great Britain faces certainly a restriction, possibly a loss, of her command of the sea. In future there will be many waves over which Brittania will never rule.

Let us suppose, for a moment, that the submarine had never been invented. Let us return to the old arithmetical comparison between dreadnoughts, cruisers and destroyers. Even so it stands to reason that Britain's supremacy depended upon the acquiescence of other Powers. Lord Fisher knew this, and 15 years ago he concentrated our navy in the North Sea.

AIRPLANE CO-FACTOR OF BIG GUN SHIP IN NAVAL OPERATIONS

Ten years ago it was found that in the Mediterranean, where lies the route to India and the fortress of Malta, Britain could only maintain the one-power standard. During the war the duty of patrolling distant waters fell to an extent not always realized upon Japan. And it is obvious that the great development of the United States navy ends forever the predominance, whatever it may have been, of Britain in the Pacific and the Western Atlantic. Everyone in England knows this.

On the surface, I admit that it does not look like this. The naval estimates presented last year to the British Parliament amounted to $800,000,000 or three times the expenditure voted before the war. Allowing for pensions, higher pay and increased cost of construction, this is a huge outlay, and represents a tonnage of 2,500,000, compared with nearly 1,000,000 for the United States. In addition, Admiral Jellicoe has laid before the British Dominions a program as follows: Australia, $30,000,000; New Zealand, $10,000,000; Canada, about $50,000,000.

The entire Canadian construction is to be devoted, significantly, to the Pacific, Britain looking after Canada's naval interests on the Atlantic. Moreover, the British naval station at Singapore may have eight modern battleships, eight battle cruisers, ten light cruisers, 4 destroyers, and 40 of the latest and largest submarines. This certainly looks like a momentous transference of naval power to the Far East, and the problem there is, of course, Japan. But I have this word of caution to offer: Labor is gaining ground in Britain. It is by no means certain that these huge programs will survive criticism And apart from H. M. S. Hood, costing $30,000,000, Britain has not one battleship on her building schedule, which she is scrapping war ships of every kind by the hundred.

Must Consider New Weapons.

It would be obviously absurd to regard the future without including in our estimate the new naval weapons, the submarine and the torpedo, which have transformed, indeed, annihilated, the strategy of Admirals. And here let me say that, without condoning for an instant the murderous attacks by U-boats on unarmed commerce, of which such tragic films have been shown here in New York, the fact remains that, as in the case of poison gas, this terrible precedent has been established—it is a possibility which really means a certainty of future war—and it means, therefore, Admiral Mahan's famous principles of sea power must be, if not abandoned, at least fundamentally revised.

Submarines are being built larger, of a wider radius of action, more heavily equipped with offensive weapons and with more powerful engines than any at the disposal of Germany. The proposition which we must face is, therefore, this: That the submarine of the future may make the oceans impassable on this assumption. Not only will battleships be unable to operate, as Sir Percy Scott foretold just before the war, and as Lord Fisher now repeats, but no army can in future cross the ocean. Neither munitions nor food will be thus transportable. And each section of God's earth will be isolated save for aircraft.

The proposition is startling, but it fills the mind of every authoritative strategist. What are the facts. Germany never had more than about 200 submarines. Of these, a mere handful operated at one time. Yet with what results? The actual cost of U-boat activities to the United States and the allies was about $20,000,000,000 taking in all the expenses involved. For each U-boat sunk the cost, inclusive of all items, was $100,000,000. Yet these U-boats can be built at a figure which is negligible compared with such tremendous liabilities on the other side. When the war started Germany had 86 U-boats only. If she had had 1000 available and had employed them it is hard to see how the allies could have avoided grave disaster.

Only 205 U-Boats Sunk.

The next question is whether the scientific ingenuity of the allies (which term I will employ for brevity as including the United States) resulting in putting the U-boats out of business. The fact is that with 2500 vessels patrolling British home waters, safety for commerce could not be guaranteed, and in the last week of the war nine tankers, on which class of vehicle the Germans happened to be concentrating because they realized the supreme importance of oil, were sunk. It is not an extreme thing to say that the war was won on land and without much time to spare.

Immense efforts were made to combat the submarine. In New

Kill the Cold Stop the Flu

Do not fool with depressing, annoying colds this year. A cold today may lead to influenza tomorrow.

Dr. C. W. Waggoner, health commissioner, Toledo, says, "Cure colds the first day and it is unlikely you will contract pneumonia or influenza." Play safe. Kill your cold now. Turpo, the only turpentine ointment, has really wonderful qualities in relieving colds and congestions.

Buy a jar of Turpo now—use it according to directions and secure quick relief from colds and congestions. Snuff a little Turpo up the nostrils several times a day and the flu germ will have little chance of getting a lodging or breeding place.

Go to your druggist now while he has a supply of Turpo on hand.

This is only one of the many letters advising us of advancing prices that we receive almost daily from furniture manufacturers throughout the country. It clearly outlines prevailing conditions. A year ago we said "Buy now or pay more later." We say the same thing now. If you value economy you'll heed this warning and act quickly.

HUNTINGTON WEST VIRGINIA Feb.23, 1920.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We are enclosing our price list of February 24, which covers all the patterns we are making.

We more than regret the necessity for advancing prices, but there seems to be no limit to the prices we are forced to pay for materials of all kinds. Lumber, which is of course our principal item of supply is excessively high and some kinds practically off the market. Mirror plates are also excessively high and the supply short. In fact the uncertainty of supply of materials and prices forces us to state that these prices can not be guaranteed for any specified length of time, but must be subject to change without notice.

If you have an order on file with us subject to change of prices or prices prevailing at time of shipment, we will assume that it will be satisfactory to you to have the goods shipped at the prices prevailing at time of shipment unless you advise us to the contrary.

We appreciate your business and will do every thing possible to merit your continued patronage.

BOPP SAYS UNDERTAKER PARTNER BURIED PROFIT

Sheriff Wants $7919 Exhumed for His Share From Kirkwood Undertaking Business.

Sheriff Bopp of St. Louis County says that Ray L. Houser, his partner in the undertaking business at Kirkwood, appears to have buried most of the profits for the last three years, and Bopp is undertaking to have them exhumed, by means of a suit filed yesterday at Clayton.

When he was holding the office of Coroner, prior to 1916, he could carry on his business conveniently, but upon his election as Sheriff, he decided that he would need help, so he sold a half interest to Houser for $4000. It was agreed, he states, that each should take $100 a month salary, Houser looking after the business while Bopp attended to his own official duties, and that they should divide the profits.

It never occurred to him that the business was not doing well, he said, until a few months ago, when he remembered how much custom the influenza had made for them, and he was impelled to wonder why the profits had not increased. When Houser went over to Galesburg, Ill., for Christmas, Bopp went over the books.

He says in his petition that he found that Houser had not been content with taking his $1200 a year salary, but, in the three years, had taken $10,811. He also says that Houser had collected large amounts which are not shown by the records to have been deposited. He wants Houser to dig up $7919. In 1917 alone, he says, Houser drew out $2372 and also collected $1987 for which no record of deposit appears.

The law provides that when the Sheriff, who ordinarily serves such papers, is defendant in a suit, they shall be served by the Coroner. When the Sheriff is plaintiff this does not apply, but Sheriff Bopp said today that he will ask Coroner Denny to serve these papers anyhow, as he wants to avoid any further unpleasantness.

Houser walked into the courthouse yesterday afternoon, saying that he had seen an account of the suit ni the Post-Dispatch, and declared his readiness to accept service.

"If Bopp hadn't filed this suit, I would have done so," he said. "He is no more anxious to dissolve the partnership than I am. I can't get along with him."

Houser denied that he ever had collected any money and failed to deposit it. He asserted, on the contrary, that he and Bopp went over the books together Wednesday and Thursday nights, and that it was shown that there is a surplus profit to be divided. The undertaking firm is still a live concern, he said.

AIRPLANE CO-FACTOR OF BIG GUN SHIP IN NAVAL OPERATIONS

York the Submarine Defense Association, to which all the leading British and American ship owners and insurance underwriters doing business in the threatened areas, intrusted the duty of analyzing and developing proposed devices for minimizing the menace, had unlimited funds and 100 per cent facilities at its disposal. Yet in four and one-half years, with 600 destroyers and 6000 other vessels on the waters, only 205 submarines were sunk or captured. If, as seems likely, the super U-boat is associated with small submarines capable of flying as hydroplanes the prospect will be worse.

Submarine Unpopular.

If big battleships like the British Hood are still being built we must remember that spending departments are conservative and love extravagance. Ten years after the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac, which inaugurated iron war vessels, navies were constructing obsolete wooden battleships. The submarine is unpopular with sailors. It is an uncomfortable place in which to spend one's professional life. It obliterates the picturesque which has counted for so much on the ocean. At the same time, it is for the taxpayers on both sides of the Atlantic to say how far they intend to foot the bill for vast superdreadnoughts which may be and have been useless in the grim game of naval warfare.

One thing is certain—whatever happens to the battleship, the submarine has come to stay. It can be constructed quietly, far from the coast, on inland waterways like the Elbe, the Volga or the Danube. With improvements in internal combustion engines, the need of the submarine to rise at intervals to the surface will be diminished. That again will make the underwater boat more deadly.

In a sentence it will mean stalemate on the high seas. Contrary to the entirely correct view of Admiral Mahan, in his day, land contact alone will count on a showdown. If we are to assume that the oceans can be made and therefore will be too dangerous a way for vessels for traverse, either with troops, cargoes or munitions, then it follows that in Britain a supply of food and essential raw materials sufficient for a period of one year should be accumulated as far as circumstances permit. The Channel tunnel, securing contact with France, would be a military asset and not—as hitherto it has been regarded—a military liability.

In the Far East, an invasion of the Philippines or of Australia or New Zealand by Japanese becomes automatically impossible. Even China might rapidly evolve a scheme of coast defense which would make her impregnable against direct military aggression. Obviously, the United States would have the power completely to isolate herself from approach by sea.

CITY LIMITS OF ST. LOUIS UNCHANGED IN 44 YEARS

next census, that of 1930, is going to prove a shock, for other cities are not backward in absorbing everything about them.

Mrs. Edna Fischel Gellhorn, president Missouri League of Women Voters: I believe in the principle of self determination and it should therefore be left to the people of the county to decide whether they wish to be annexed or not.

From an outsider's point of view, it would seem that the tremendous advantages offered by the educational opportunities of the St. Louis public school system would more than outbalance any minor objections of additional taxes, etc.

As to the intimate political issues of the question I am not well enough informed to know just what the arguments may be for and against annexation.

As to the advantages of increased population for St. Louis, the arguments would all be in favor of annexation. This has been proved by all of the largest cities of the country.

Views From the County.

Judge G. A. Wurdeman, of the St. Louis County Circuit Court: Annexation of the whole or a part of the county to the city can be accomplished, I believe. It should include the whole county, and leave to each of the municipalities, in a measure, local self-government. There is a question in the minds of many lawyers whether annexation can be legally accomplished without a constitutional amendment, and therefore it should be brought about in that way. The construction of sewers ought to be under the supervision of the city, because natural drainage cannot be governed by artificial lines. Police, fire and health protection from the city should also be extended to the annexed territory. The city should have the power to establish and maintain a park system in this new territory along the Missouri and Meramec rivers, many parts of which will lend themselves readily to such a plan. The county, as a borough, should still have its general business affairs carried on at Clayton and no city ordinance should be enforced in the annexed territory except with the approval of the County Court. I believe something of this kind may meet any objections that have been raised, and other details, such as taxation, can be worked out by experts.

Members of the St. Louis County Court said they would send a written communication to the Million Population Club, stating the position of the members of the court. John Wiethaupt, presiding Judge, said that he believed it was a question which must be voted upon by the people at large, and therefore not a question for the County Court to either commend or reject. He said he would not attend the meeting wherever held.

Increased Taxes Not to Be Feared.

August Heman, Mayor of University City, and acting chairman of the League of Municipalities of St. Louis County, said that he understood the principal objection to annexation came from a dread of increased taxation, but that this objection would not hold water. He said that, as the county was constantly growing, it was necessary to build new schools, and that all this meant increased taxation, and that before long the tax rate in the county would exceed that in the city. He said so many city residents were moving into the county that sentiment there was rapidly changing, and that he believed obstacles now remaining could be easily removed.

Sam D. Hodgdon, Probate Judge of St. Louis County, who actively opposed former efforts at annexation, said that his position remained unchanged. "The City of St. Louis left the county," said he, "when the county was sorely in need of aid for development. Now that it has developed, the city wants to grab the desirable portions and leave the rest to its fate. To take in a part of the county would be a rank injustice to the remainder. If the city is sincere, let it ask to again come into the county. Then we will favor it, but I am sure there will be strenuous objection to any other plan."

U. S. STEEL PLANS HOMES AT COST FOR ITS EMPLOYES

Easy Payment Proposal Will Be Recommended to Concern's Subsidiaries.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28. — The United States Steel Corporation has completed plans for the erection of homes for its employes on a cost and easy payment basis which it will recommend to each of its subsidiary organizations as a model for a housing program at every plant, it was learned here today.

The proposed homes include wood, brick, stone and stucco structures, with prices ranging from $3000 upward. These will be sold to workers at 10 per cent down and the rest in installments extending over a 10-year period. Outright purchase or payment of larger installments will be allowed. Absolute title to the property will go to the worker on his final payment.

Adoption of the plans will not be compulsory, it was stated. They are merely a suggestion for plant welfare in an effort to promote housing projects at mills and keep them uniform.

MILLION FOR WATCH ON BORDER LIQUOR SMUGGLERS REFUSED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The House unanimously refused today to appropriate $1,000,000 for use until July 1 in attempting to prevent the smuggling of liquor over the Canadian and Mexican borders. Provisions for the appropriation had been inserted in the general deficiency bill by the Senate.

Chairman Good of the Appropriations Committee, said the expenditure would be "useless."

"If we are to patrol the Canadian frontier of 3000 miles and 1800 miles of Mexican border to search travelers for liquor," he said, "it will take millions of dollars and require three searching shifts a day."

Representative Cannon, Republican, declared that "nothing short of the army, the navy and the coast guard could stop the smuggling of liquor into this country so long as there was a demand for it.

Good-bye Dyspepsia

No More Gurgly Brash, "Lump of Lead," Bad Digestion, Heartburn or Such Troubles.

The man who can't help making faces at his stomach, the man or woman with a grouchy digestion, or with downright dyspepsia need fret no more.

The heaviest, richest dinners, the most unspeakable quick lunches, all can be taken care of without inposing on the stomach. A scientific digestive can do the digesting where the stomach either did not do it before or did it very imperfectly.

This is why the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has become so universal among those who suffer from indigestion and dyspepsia.

Take one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after your next meal and if you are given to belching, sour risings, fermentation, heavy lumpy feelings in the stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, loss of appetite or other such digestive derangement, you will find at once a remarkable improvement.

They arouse the gastric juices and give the stomach the rest it needs before it can again be healthy and strong.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

THE QUICK WAY TO STOP A COUGH.

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Influenza, Colds, Sore Throat

Said to Yield Quickly to Antiseptic Oil Treatment.

Many are finding relief from Influenza, Colds, Sore Throat and perhaps preventing pneumonia, it is said, by the use of Miller's Antiseptic Oil (known as Snake Oil), which contains Turpentine, Camphor, Capsicum, Oil Eucalyptus, Coal Oil and other valuable oils. Its great penetrating pain relieving qualities insure almost instant relief when applied freely on the chest and throat, well greased when first symptoms arise. The oil penetrates through to the affected parts and tends to open up the air passages, making breathing more easy, relieving the pains. And for the cough, a few drops on a little sugar usually bring prompt relief. Don't fail to have a bottle on hand when the attack comes on, and if used according to directions results are assured.

Keep liver active by taking Lifsey's Never-Fail Liver Pills. They are different: "they never fail." 25c bottle, leading druggists. On sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

ADVERTISEMENT

Lady Druggist's Advice Taken

"My sister-in-law is a druggist. She told me of several bad stomach and liver cases which were benefited by taking Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and advised me to try it. I had numerous bad attacks due to bloating and had almost constant pain in my stomach before getting your remedy. I am feeling fine now." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

NEW SPECIAL EXHIBITS OF ART AT MUSEUM

Feature Is Young Englishman's System of Broken Planes and Lines in Water Colors.

Two new special exhibits are on view today at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. One is a collection of paintings and drawings by Stephen Haweis, the other an exhibit of stage models and designs for stage settings and costumes, loaned by the Bourgeois Galleries of New York City.

Haweis is a young Englishman who was trained to paint in the conventional manner, but who found irksome the restraints imposed by academic rules. During trips to the Fiji Islands and to the Bahamas he developed original and, at first sight, somewhat startling methods for depicting the brilliant tropical life and landscape of those places. Among the 70 or more examples at the museum are paintings and drawings which prove that Haweis can work with more than ordinary skill in the conventional manner when he chooses. But the distinctive feature of the exhibition are the pictures, principally in water colors, in which he has adopted a system of broken planes and lines in an effort to express in a more forceful manner the life and motion of his subjects.

Broken Plane Types.

Typical of the latter class are the paintings "Na Aissama, a Fijian Village," "Moala," "Bacchanal," "Hooked Barracuda," "Tongan Boy" and "Killing the Barfacuda." These will serve to illustrate the broken plane treatment by which the picture is divided into various patterns of different colors. When the boundary lines of these patterns happen to cross a human figure, a tree or a house, a displacement is produced quite analogous to the aberration caused by viewing an object through a defective piece of glass. That a certain feeling of motion is produced cannot be denied, but it is very disturbing to see an arm or a head severed from its trunk or a house boldly cut to pieces and the various sections slightly displaced, as well as rendered in different tones of color.

In the colorful paintings of tropical fish in their native haunts, such as "The Younger Grouper" and "Vigilant Cay," Haweis has found a more suitable subject for his unique style. One can readily understand the displacements and refractions produced by the swirling waters at the bottom of a tropical sea, as the fish disport themselves.

Fijian Dance Pictures.

Another phase of Haweis' art is seen in a number of pictures of the native Fijian dance, "Vakamololo," which are designs for friezes. Here, in an effort to produce the illusion of the rapidly rotating arms of the performers, the artist has taken the liberty of representing each of them as having three arms.

The exhibition of stage models and designs which the museum is showing contains nine models by Michael Carmichael Carr, Norman-Bel Geddes, C. Raymond Johnson, Lee Simonson, J. Blanding Sloan and John Wenger, together with about 90 paintings, sketches and photographs of stage settings. The stage models have been installed in a darkened gallery and illuminated with colored lights.

Both exhibitions will remain on view at the museum for about six weeks.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATH OF GIRL BY AUTO

Grand Jury Directed to Investigate Fatal Accident at Grand and Laclede.

The grand jury will be directed to investigate the case of Cora Friend, 13 years old, 4264 West Pine boulevard, who died Thursday from injuries suffered at 11:15 p. m., Wednesday, when knocked down and dragged by an automobile at Grand and Laclede avenues, following the failure of the Coroner's office to establish the identity of the persons who were in the car.

Deputy Coroner Dever has accepted the police theory, expressed at the time of the accident, that the automobile was occupied by men who had stolen it. The Detective Bureau, at the instigation of the Circuit Attorney, is delving into that phase of the case.

A Coroner's verdict of homicide at the hands of unknown parties was returned yesterday after Irving Lee, 3852 Cottage avenue, owner of the automobile, had testified that he had no idea who was in the car when the girl was struck.

He said that he was in a cafe in the basement of the Beers Hotel, Grand avenue and Olive street, with David Creely and two other men when his car was stolen from in front of 3630 Olive street. He said that he was in the cafe from 9:30 p. m. until 12:15 a. m., and that he learned of the accident when he reported the theft of his machine.

Lee produced a bill of sale showing that he had purchased the car Jan. 3 last from I. B. Hopkins, 5092A Easton avenue, "by Dave Creely, agent."

The police say that I. B. Hopkins is a woman, Ivy B. Hopkins, and that Dave Creely is her friend. Creely, the police say, has been arrested several times in connection with automobile thefts.

In response to questions from Assistant Circuit Attorney Oakley and George C. Wilson, an attorney representing the Friend family, Lee said that he was not south of Olive street the night of the accident.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 Per Cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by all good druggists, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson Stores.

See Prettiness of Youth Return After Doing This

The beautifying sensation of the day is the "tarkroot treatment." No discovery in the field of beauty culture has ever before met with such enthusiastic approval. Nothing else gives the face such a naturally youthful appearance. One need merely mix a little lemon juice with a teaspoonful of powdered tarkroot, smooth this soothing emulsion over the face, then watch the girlhood beauty return. One can scarcely believe her own eyes. Even very aged faces are wonderfully rejuvenated.

The emulsion quickly dries, forming a thin film-like mask, which brings the blood to the surface and rests the facial nerves. This action is the secret of its remarkable efficacy in restoring to faded cheeks and lips their natural color, clearing and softening the skin, and even putting "life" and sparkle into tired-looking eyes. The mask is to be washed off entirely in a half hour and therefore is not to be confused with any cosmetic or make-up. Any druggist can supply powdered tarkroot in the original package.

HOUSING FILM SHOWS GIRL SEEKING LODGING

"No Address" to Be Shown in Campaign for $500,000 to Build Hotels for Women.

The story of a typical girl who works, in her search for a proper rooming place in St. Louis, is told in the completed film, "No Address," which has been prepared by the Y. W. C. A. and Letmar Club in their joint campaign for $500,000 to erect two hotels for employed women and girls. The active campaign will last a week, March 22-27, but downtown headquarters have been opened opposite the Federal building on Eighth street.

The film, in which well-known men and women play most of the roles, will be shown at several motion picture theaters. The first showing is expected to be given at the luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Statler Wednesday.

Mrs. Willard Bartlett, 4257 Washington boulevard, has been in charge of the film. Winston Johns, 5510 Pershing avenue, plays opposite as a young man seeking to find his fiancee.

Scenes From West End.

Many of the scenes in the photoplay, which was prepared under the direction of Robert Hanna, 4453 West Pine boulevard, were filmed in West End homes, some were taken in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce and others at the Union Station, Mayor's office, Y. W. C. A. and on the streets.

A young woman comes to seek employment in St. Louis. Hunting accommodations at the hotels she is appalled at metropolitan prices. At the Y. W. C. A. she finds every available space is filled, girls even sleeping on cots in the lobby.

Finally in despair, after having spent an entire night on street cars, she is forced to seek shelter in an abandoned boathouse and it is here that her fiancee finally discovers her. When the story of her trials is told at a board meeting of the Y. W. C. A. it awakens the interest of the women to such an extent that a campaign to raise funds with which to erect proper hotels and dormitories for employed women is begun.

Miss Nancy Walker appears as the "Y" girl, surrounded by the comforts which the Y. W. C. A. offers. The life there is shown, including the girls' rooms, reception rooms, cafeteria, reading rooms and swimming pool. In the swimming pool scene Miss Eppes Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, is featured in exhibitions of fancy diving and swimming. Other young women who are shown in the pool are Misses Elizabeth Niedringhaus, Bernice Kohn, Virginia Price and Marie Moncelle.

Board Members Appear.

Women who appear as board of trustee members are Mrs. Charles Pope O'Fallon, Mrs. W. K. Bixby, Mrs. J. P. Tirrill, Mrs. Thomas Francis and Mrs. Lon Hocker.

Miss Dorothy Walker has the part of a young hostess who is entertaining a number of young women friends in her own home, contrasting her advantages with those offered the girl who works and who is without a proper home

Assisting Miss Walker in this scene are Misses Erwin Hayward, Elizabeth Benoist, Isabel Mauran, Anne M. Block, Nancy Chase; Mmes. Lewis A. Dozier Jr., John A. Scudder, August A. Busch, and Robert Bagnell.

RETURNS HOME AFTER 40 YEARS AND FINDS HIS ESTATE SETTLED

Shipman (Ill.) Man Learns He Was Adjudged Dead 16 Years Ago.

Henry Tunstead of Shipman, Ill., north of Alton, has returned home after an absence of 40 years to find that he had been adjudged dead, his estate administered and settled, but his wife had never remarried.

In 1880 Tunstead went to California to "seek his fortune." He did not communicate with his family, and in 1904, Mrs. Tunstead, believing him dead, petitioned for letters of administration in the Macoupin County court. She was appointed administratrix and closed up the estate and at the end of two years was discharged.

Tunstead, when apprised of what had been done 16 years ago, went to Carlinville and arranged to join in the deeds which had been given to property, thereby confirming his "widow's" acts.

MILLINERY WORTH $345,693 IMPORTED IN THIS DISTRICT

Customs Collector's Annual Report Shows Art Goods Importations at $57.

The annual report of Fountain Rothwell, Collector of Customs, issued yesterday showed that in 1919 art works valued at $57 and hats and hat trimmings valued at $345,693 were imported through the St. Louis Custom House District, which includes the custom houses at Kansas City and St. Joseph.

Among the goods free of duty received during the year were raw furs valued at $6,783,734. This was St. Louis' largest item of imports.

Of dutiable goods chemicals and drugs led the list with a total valuation of $862,364. Sugar imports were valued at $583,076 and zinc ore imports were $411,350 and spelter exports were valued at $614,511. The total value of free goods imported was $8,213,431 and the value of dutiable goods was $4,134,812. The amount of duty collected in 1919 was $1,146,697.73 and collections of the local Customs Office from other sources was $17,499.20. Total collections in 1918 were $790,445.79.

THIRD WIFE, GIVEN $5 A WEEK FOR TABLE, SUES FOR DIVORCE

Israel Grollnek, 1535 Walton avenue, manager of the Van Buren Clothing Co., Sixth and Morgan streets, was sued for divorce and alimony yesterday by his third wife, Mrs. Bessie Grollnek. They were married Dec. 15, 1912, and separated Feb. 23 last.

Mrs. Grollnek alleges that her husband, although he is worth about $30,000, allowed her only $5 a week for the table and then accused her of "bleeding" him for his money. At the time of their marriage, she alleges, he had six children by his first wife and one child by a second wife. The children failed to show her proper respect, she claims.

As a result of her husband's refusal to allow her more money, Mrs. Grollnek alleges, she was forced to borrow $5000 from her son. The petition also alleges that Grollnek had a violent temper, ordered his wife's friends from the house, drove her out in her night clothes on one occasion and forced her to serve his meals before her own.

Why Women Grow Old More Quickly Than Men

Greater Percentage of Anaemia—Lack of Iron in the Blood—Among Women Makes Them Lose Much of Their Youth, Beauty and Former Attractiveness and Become Fretful, Nervous and Run-down—

What Women Need Is Not Cosmetics or Stimulating Drugs But Plenty of Pure Red Blood, Rich In Iron

Physician Explains How Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron, Enriches the Blood, Strengthens the Nerves, Builds Up Physical Power and Often Makes Weak, Pale Careworn Women Look and Feel Years Younger.

Look for the woman who appears younger than a man of the same age and you will find the exception to that vast majority upon whom anaemia—lack of iron in the blood has fastened its grip and is gradually sapping the health, vitality and beauty which every woman so longs to retain. In most cases men safeguard their health better than women by eating coarser foods, being more out-of-doors and leading more active lives, thereby keeping their blood richer in iron and their bodies in better physical condition. The very moment a woman allows herself to become weak, nervous and run-down she is placing a drain upon her whole system which overtaxes the power of the blood to renew wasted tissue and keep active the natural life forces of the body. There are thousands of women who are ageing and breaking down at a time when they should be enjoying that perfect bodily health which comes from plenty of iron in the blood, simply because they are not awake to their condition. For want of iron a woman may look and feel haggard and all run-down—while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in her blood she may still be young in feeling and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age. But a woman cannot have beautiful rosy cheeks or an abundance of strength and endurance without iron, and physicians below have been asked to explain why they prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to help supply this deficiency and aid in building a race of stronger, healthier women.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital says: "Many a woman who is run-down, easily tired out, nervous and irritable, suffers from iron deficiency and does not know it. I am convinced that there are thousands of such women who, simply by taking Nuxated Iron, might readily build up their red corpuscles, increase physical energy, and get themselves into a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us. I consider Nuxated Iron one of the foremost blood and body builders—the best to which I have ever had recourse."

Among other physicians asked for an opinion was Dr. George A. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital, New Jersey, who says: "What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the springtime of life into their step is not cosmetics or stimulating drugs but plenty of rich pure blood. Without it no woman can do credit to herself or to her work. Iron is one of the greatest of all strength and blood-builders, and I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy, red-blooded women as Nuxated Iron."

MANUFACTURER'S NOTE: Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Welpert Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Store, Enderle Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and [illegible]'s 3 Stores, East St. Louis, and all other druggists.

Alton Men Fined Under Dry Law.

Clarence Hale and Louis Overath, both of Alton, were before Judge Fitzhenry in the United States District Court at Springfield yesterday, on charges of selling liquor in violation of the prohibition act. A fine of $300 was imposed on Hale and one of $200 on Overath.

Is Acid-Stomach Sapping Your Strength?

Have you any idea of the great number of ailments that are directly traceable to Acid-Stomach? Few people have When they are bilious, have severe headache, or an attack of indigestion, rheumatism, lumbago or sciatica; or when they begin to feel run down and are nervous and mentally depressed; or have dizzy spells, vertigo and pains around the heart—little do they think it may have its origin in an Acid-Stomach.

You know how it is with acid-mouth—how the acid which is created as a result of fermentation of particles of food lodged around the gums, literally eats through the enamel of the teeth and causes them to decay.

How, then, can anyone expect so "feel right" when Acid-Stomach is making digestion more and more difficult, causing food to sour and ferment in the intestinal tract, filling the system with poisons?

And then there are thousands -yes, millions —of people who, without having any well defined ailment, are always complaining. They can't say exactly what is the matter with them. All they can tell you is that they "don't feel right," are "all in, tired, sickly."

Is it any wonder that there are so many people who, while not downright sick, show plainly in face, figure and action that they are anything but well? They are despondent, weak, listless, unfit. Aches and pains in practically every part of the body. Lacking in physical strength and mental vigor. Little or no inclination to be up and doing. Just dragging out a weary existence.

A wonderful remedy now makes it possible to get rid of Acid-Stomach without the slightest discomfort. It is called EATONIC—a compound in tablet form- good to eat—like candy. EATONIC brings amazingly quick relief from bloat, heartburn, belching, food-repeating, sour, gassy stomach and the pains of indigestion. Olive and Locust from Ninth to Tenth to provide a display tomorrow such as is seldom seen in St. Louis

Wonderful Hand-Embroidered Designs; Marvelously Intricate Patterns, Skillfully Executed

THIS is another shipment that has just arrived, secured recently by one of our buyers while traveling through the Orient. His stories of that land of mystery and idolatry arouse our imagination and cause us to wonder that handiwork of such a character could be produced by a people having so little opportunity for contact with the art treasures of the world.

The story of each is told on a card attached to the article. All possess that perfection of workmanship, that rare blending of gorgeous colors, that distinctive atmosphere of the Orient that make them highly desirable to all who know and admire the artisanship of the far East.

Tomorrow, a large portion of the Fourth Floor will be devoted to the display of these treasures, which are made more rare because each one possesses a distinction of its own, and it cannot be duplicated.

Embroidered Table Squares of Silk, $6 Up to $127

Many of them padded and lined with silk in wonderful colors; hand-worked designs in bright silk, gold or silver thread.

Old Chinese Mongorian Wooten Curtains $40 and $53

These make very desirable rugs. There are two designs, in soft Oriental shades and typical designs. These are said to date back almost a century.

Gorgeous Wall Hangings, $16 Up to $190

Robes that were formerly worn by some high priest of the Chinese religion, or large squares and oblongs that were used to adorn some Buddha's altar or the wall of a temple, these make up one of the most interesting parts of this worthy display.

Many other pieces include Obi Cloths ranging up to 4 yards in length; small squares, ovals, oblongs that may be used to set a lamp upon; in fact, the variety affords a wide range of useful pieces. Pillow tops, piano scarfs, table squares and scarfs, wall hangings and panels, these are but a few of the uses to which they will be put.

Chinese and Japanese Kimonos Range From $18 Up to $200

Characteristic of the land from whence they came are these beautiful Kimonos. The designs, carried out in fine silk thread or silver and gold on bright colored satins and silk crepe, artistically portray maple trees, storks, cherry blossoms, bamboo and plum trees, butterflies, mandarin ducks, dragons, landscapes, etc. Usually a single motif adorning a whole garment, but sometimes a combination of flowers and birds or butterflies will be found.

Of particular importance is the fact that the prices quoted or marked on all this merchandise are extremely moderate. The quantity is limited, and no article can be duplicated at any price.

Entire Display Will Be Held on the Fourth Floor, East Side.

ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBIT OF ARTISTS' GUILD OPEN

New Scottish Rite Temple and Workmen's Homes Shown—Display Free to Public.

A striking presentation of the new Scottish Rite Temple to be built on Lindell boulevard, examples of workmen's homes such as are to be built by the St. Louis Housing Corporation, suggestions for a plaza at Union Station and a municipal buildings group, together with other things St. Louis architects are doing and proposing, appear in an exhibition now open at the galleries of the Artists' Guild, at 812 Union boulevard.

Another feature of the display is a scheme for a great railroad terminal on the water front east of Third street, intended to create an approach to the city from the east and counteract the tendency of retail trade to spread toward the west.

Exhibit Open to Public.

The Guild established the architectural exhibition last year, and will henceforth make it an annual feature of its gallery displays, which are open to the public, free, every afternoon including Sunday. It is the design of the Guild to bring the public into better contact with the aspirations of architecture, to which the city must chiefly look for both beauty and utility in time to come. The Guild believes that no great city can approach either its physical or spiritual ideals except architecture is encouraged and cherished as an art.

This idea lies behind the annual architectural exhibition, which is this year better and more interesting than it was a year ago. More architects are participating in it, and the exhibition is more prophetic of the architectural future. Thus, one easily makes out that some of the great eyesores of the city are not always to offend the friendly eye, since the architects are persistently working to make pleasing what is every day obtruding, not its ugliness alone, but its uselessness as well.

Plan of Guild.

It is the plan of the Guild to provide what the architects think should be as familiar to the community as some of the annoyances they seek to correct. That, thinks the Guild, must in time give the city a better water front, a more ornate group of municipal buildings and something more presentable about Union Station than the present unarchitectural environment of lean-tos and shacks.

Not the least interesting feature of the exhibition is the work done by students in the Architectural School at Washington University. The varied treatment of a ladies' chapel by three of these—Herbert, Leimkuahler and Pelton, the latter a woman—and the suggestion for an entrance to Forest Park by Maguolo, are especially interesting.

The exhibition will close on March 4 at the Guild and will then go to Central Library, where it will remain a month.

MRS. MARIE AKINS SIMPSON AND RAY P. PREWITT ARE MARRIED

Daughter of Former Postmaster Weds Insurance Man at Home of Episcopal Minister.

Mrs. Marie Akins Simpson, daughter of former Postmaster Thomas J. Akins, and sister of Miss Zoe Akins, noted poet and playwright, was married Thursday night to Ray P. Prewitt, an insurance man, of 5290 Waterman avenue.

The ceremony was performed at the home of the Rev. W. F. McMillin, an Episcopal minister, of 3911 Castleman avenue, the only attendants being George Reynolds of 4238 Lindell boulevard and Miss Nancy Saunders of 5562 Clemens avenue.

Prewitt is 33 years old. His bride is 26. She obtained a divorce last May from Edgar R. Simpson to whom she was married in 1914. Her three-year-old son is with his grandparents, the Akinses. She alleged, in her suit, that Simpson treated her coolly, told her that he didn't love her, regretted the marriage, and desired a divorce. It was not contested.

Prewitt was graduated from Princeton in 1903. He is a member of the St. Louis Country Club and other clubs, and is general agent for an insurance company. He resided with his mother, Mrs. Theodore Prewitt.

LEAGUE SECRETARY SAYS NEGRO CAN FILL NEED FOR WORKERS

Asserts Their Fitness for Skilled Labor Was Proved by Work During War.

The demand for skilled workers can be met, according to G. W. Buckner, executive secretary of the Urban League of the St. Louis Provident Association, if employers will give the negro worker an opportunity to demonstrate his fitness.

Buckner said that the negroes proved their fitness for skilled work during the war when they replaced the regular worker and in some instances proved to be superior workers to those they replaced.

The negro woman, he says, also has assumed her position in industry and instead of being considered only in the light of a domestic servant, has come to be a valuable textile worker.

The Urban League of the St. Louis Provident Association is affiliated with the National Urban League, which has for its purpose the uplift of the negro worker.

Clothiers to Meet Here in 1921.

The 1920 convention of the association was held at Kansas City Thursday, Friday and yesterday. Nationally known speakers and economists will attend.

CUTS LIVING COSTS FOR MILL WORKERS

American Woolen Co. Opens Retail Stores for Its Operatives in Lawrence, Mass.

LAWRENCE, Mass.—The American Woolen Co. has inaugurated a system of retail stores at its four mills in this city in an effort to reduce the cost of living for the 15,000 operatives. Staple commodities are sold at a price below that of local merchants, in line with the assertion made recently by William M. Wood, president of the company, that living costs here are higher than they should be.

A central warehouse from which each of the mill stores draws its stock is administered by representatives of the company and a committee elected by the operatives, who cooperate with individual mill committees. Ultimately, according to a statement by an official of the company, it is planned to have the workers finance and operate the stores themselves.

The warehouse is now distributing groceries, shoes, underclothes, sweaters, canned goods, overalls, socks and other staples. The prices, it is said, are substantially those at wholesale, plus a charge for overhead expenses. At present distribution is in bulk, the workers in each mill dividing case lots.

There is said to be no present intention by the company to extend the plan to others of its 54 mills.

COAL OPERATORS ADMIT EXCEEDING PRICE FIXED BY U. S.

Retailer at Their Mercy—If He Has Contract U. S. Rate Doesn't Apply; if He Hasn't, He Gets No Coal.

MINE OWNERS BLAME ROADS FOR SHORTAGE

Demand for Fuel Greater Than Output and St. Louis Dealers Have Choice Between Paying or Waiting.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Operators of coal mines in Franklin, Williamson and other southern Illinois counties upon which St. Louis and East St. Louis principally depend for their supply of high-grade domestic coal, admit that they are selling their product there at prices in excess of the price fixed by the Government, as charged by the retailers in those cities and published in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch. They also admit that they are not shipping the normal amount of coal and that they are refusing to ship to some dealers who refuse to pay their price.

However, they declare all this can be satisfactorily explained. The shortage, they say, is mainly due to the shortage of cars. The retailers to whom they are selling coal for more than the Government price are those with whom they have contracts, they say, and contracts are exempted from the fuel administration's price restrictions.

The core of the whole situation, the Post-Dispatch correspondent learned, is that the operators practically have the retailers at their mercy. The retailer either can admit that he has a contract, in which case the operator can charge any price he chooses, or the retailer can deny that he has a contract and insist upon the Government price being observed, in which event he must wait for coal until the operator is ready to let him have it, and those retailers who have taken the latter alternative have found the waiting long and empty.

Demand Greater Than Output.

The operators are very bland and polite about it. They can afford to be. The demand for that grade of coal is greater than the output and if the retailers in St. Louis and East St. Louis don't want to pay the operators' prices, then there are others who will, and the operators aren't particular who buys.

The retailers, on the other hand, assert that the operators are misinterpreting the Fuel Administrator's orders, and are violating the Lever act in charging excess prices.

Meantime, the office of United States District Attorney Burnside of East St. Louis is still "investigating" the situation, and has taken no action upon the complaint filed by the retailers, and no decision has been made, Assistant District Attorney Baird said, upon whether any will be taken. Baird says he doesn't want to do anything radical."

This is the "messed-up" condition left behind by Dr. Garfield when he retired as Fuel Administrator. It came about in this way:

When retailers tried last summer to make contracts with the operators, they say, the latter refused to name specified prices in the contracts, but simply bound themselves to ship amounts of coal at "price current at time of shipment." Prices at that time were going up, and the Government restrictions had been lifted. The coal strike came, and the restrictions were reinstated, the price at the mine of that grade of coal being fixed at $2.65.

On Nov. 12, however, Dr. Garfield made the exception, that the order restoring restrictions "shall not be applicable to bituminous coal shipped under a bonafide contract enforceable at law, entered into prior to Oct. 30." The retailers declare this order clearly was meant to apply to those operators and dealers who had contracts in which specific prices were named. Tonnage contracts containing the phrase "price current at time of shipment," or its equivalent, are not exempted, and the only "current price" now is the Government price, they assert.

Price Provision Evaded.

The operators take the position that if a tonnage agreement is a contract, it is exempted; if not, they are not bound by it.

F. C. Honnold is secretary of the Franklin County Coal Operators' Association. He also is secretary of the operators' associations of Williamson, Saline, Perry, Jackson and Gallatin counties, which, with Franklin, comprise what is known as the "Southern field," and which produce practically the same high grade of coal.

Replying to the accusation of the St. Louis and East St. Louis retailers that the Franklin County Association is a trust, Honnold said that it was formed only after repeated consultations with Department of Justice officials in determining how far the operators could go.

Honnold declared that the Southern field mines are running at only 40 per cent capacity because of car shortage, and that St. Louis and East St. Louis are not being discriminated against. As for the contracts, he said, it was a legal point to be decided in the courts. He added that those operators who were

To Remove Discolored, Coarse or Chapped Skin

If your skin is chapped, rough or harsh, dab a liberal amount of mercolized wax on the face and allow it to remain over night. When you wash off the wax in the morning, fine flaky, almost invisible particles of cuticle come with it. Repeating this daily, the entire outer film skin is soon absorbed, but so gradually there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the ugliest complexion yields to this treatment. The underlying skin which forms the new complexion is so fresh and youthful looking you'll marvel at the transformation. It's the only reliable way to actually discard an aged, faded, freckled, blotchy or weather-beaten complexion. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store, is sufficient in most cases.

A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Mail coupon. Make this pleasant test. Then look at your teeth and see what it means to you.

They Save Teeth Now

In a New Way—By Ending Film

All Statments Approved by High Dental Authorities

Millions of teeth are now cleaned in a new way. You see them everywhere—white, glistening teeth. Perhaps they are teeth you envy. Then make this simple ten-day test and find out how to get them.

The great tooth wrecker is a viscous film. You can feel it with your tongue. It is ever-present, ever-forming. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

The tooth paste does not end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. So it stays—much of it—and may do a ceaseless damage. Most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Why Teeth Discolor

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. All these troubles are constantly increasing, despite the wide use of the tooth brush. And the reason lies in that clinging film, and brushing leaves much of it intact.

Dentists long have known this. They urge periodic dental cleaning to remove film and tartar. And dental science has for years sought a way to constantly combat film.

That way has now been found. Able authorities have proved its efficiency by convincing tests. Now leading dentists everywhere are urging its adoption.

For daily use the method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a modern, scientific tooth paste. Millions have already proved it. And a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who asks.

A Way to Fight Film

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

But pepsin must be activated, and the usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. So pepsin long seemed impossible. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. Convincing tests have proved this. Now pepsin in this form can be every day applied. And in a tooth paste which conforms to every modern dental requirement.

Now you are urged to try it. Let it argue for itself. Compare the results with your present methods. Let your mirror tell the story.

There are few things more important. Bad teeth cause endless troubles. And teeth cannot be kept white, safe and sound if you leave that film.

For your sake and your family's sake, find out the way to combat it.

Results Are Quick and Apparent

You can see very quickly what Pepsodent does, and our book will tell you why.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Once learn what clean teeth really mean and you'll always want them.

Try This for Rupture

No Expense to You. Sent on 30 Days' Trial.

Mr. Jay E. Brown, 630 N. 8th St., Garden City, Kansas, in a sworn statement taken under oath before a notary public, says: "I am glad to state to you that the EASYHOLD has helped me. I was ruptured on both sides, but I believe I am healed up now. I certainly was in bad shape until I got the Easyhold. You should call it SURE EASYHOLD. I fire five boilers now with ease. I am past 61 years of age and I would not take $100.00 for my Easyhold if I could not get another." The Easyhold is a new invention of a Kansas City physician which has met with marvelous success. It was tried out by a few and found successful. In less than 6 months over 6000 were being worn. Sensible, scientific—has no leg straps—no steel body bands. Comfortable and easy to wear. If you are ruptured send for booklet. Then if you want to try one we will send it on 30 days' trial at our expense and let you be the judge. EASYHOLD CO., 194 KOCH BLDG., KANSAS CITY, MO.

Community School Association Announces Series of Lectures by Medical Teachers.

A series of four lectures of interest to mothers will be given under the auspices of the Community School Association at the school, De Mun and Wydown boulevard, by well-known specialists of the city on "How to Keep Our Children Well."

Three members of the Pediatric Department of Washington University Medical School, Doctors Borden S. Veeder, Philip C. Jeans and Adrien S. Bleyer, are included among the lecturers. Dr. Veeder will speak on "The Physical Life of the Child." Dr. Jeans will speak March 11 on "Food and Nutrition," and Dr. Bleyer on March 18 on "Infectious Diseases."

On March 25 there will be a double lecture, one by Dr. John Green on "The Care of the Eyes," and the other by Dr. Bland W. Pippen on "The Care of the Teeth." The services of the doctors for these lectures is complimentary and the proceeds will go to the Community School. Tickets are $3 for the course or 75 cents for single lectures, and may be obtained from Mrs. George Hitchcock, president of the board of directors of the school, 5363 Waterman avenue.

COAL OPERATORS ADMIT EXCEEDING PRICE FIXED BY U. S.

charging in excess of the Government price had obtained able legal advice before doing so, and felt entirely secure against prosecution.

He said his reports showed that 44 per cent of the Franklin County coal sold in St. Louis during January was sold at the Government price of $2.65 a ton. Most of the remainder, sold under contract, brought $3.25.

All Out of Same Mines.

The reporter asked Honnold what difference there was in the cost of producing the coal sold at $2.65 and that sold at $3.25. "There is none, of course," he said. "It all comes out of the same mines on the same days, and is the same coal exactly. However, the Government price is too low. Our contracts are keeping us alive. If we had to sell all our coal at the Government price, every mine would have to close down."

Reference has been made to the activities of Hinton C. Clabaugh, former head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice at Chicago, who left that office to become assistant to the president of the Peabody Coal Co., one of the largest operators in the country.

Clabaugh frankly stated the facts, and said he saw nothing improper in his course. While in Government service it became his duty to conduct an investigation of the Franklin County Coal Operators' Association, of which the Peabody Coal Co., his present employer, is a member. No prosecutions resulted. In December of 1918 he left his job with the Government, which paid $4500 a year, and went to work for Peabody at a salary which he said is in excess of $15,000 a year.

"It was simply a chance to better myself," he said. "I had investigated lots of other organizations, for that matter, in my official position. I resent any inference that I capitalized my office to get a better job; I didn't do it."

Price Cut by Fuel Administration.

When the coal strike threatened last autumn, Maj. A. A. Sprague, head of the Illinois Fair Price Commission, appointed a subcommittee to fix the price of coal, both retail and at the mine. Clabaugh, still in Peabody's employ, was made chairman of this committee. It fixed the fair price of Franklin County coal at the mine at $3.25 a ton. This was immediately cut to $2.65 when the Fuel Administration was re-established, a few weeks later.

"The price we fixed was a fair price," Clabaugh said. "I know that every pound of coal sold at the Government price is sold at a loss."

Questioned about a recent visit which he made to the offices of Assistant Attorney-General Vance J. Higgs in St. Louis and Assistant District Attorney Baird in East St. Louis, after complaints against the Franklin County operators had been filed with those officials by E. J. Wallace, Clabaugh said that he did so to make counter charges against Wallace. He said that Wallace, in filing the complaint in behalf of the St. Louis, East St. Louis and St. Louis County retailers, had not acted in good faith.

Methods Found Above Censure.

Honnold related the workings of the associations, of which he is secretary. They operate for the purpose of furnishing the members with "exact information" concerning costs, prices, labor and trade conditions, he said. Members file daily, weekly and monthly reports of what they are doing. The Department of Justice had made thorough investigations of these methods, and have held them to be not in violation of the anti-trust laws, he said.

The whole controversy apparently will be aired in the trial of the suit brought by the Devoy & Kuhn Coal Co. in the Federal Court in St. Louis against the Chicago, Wilmington & Franklin Coal Co., of Franklin County, in which, it is alleged, the operator refused to deliver coal under a tonnage agreement to furnish four cars a day, except at a figure in excess of the Government price.

A. J. Maloney, vice president of the company, said that the company took the attitude that the agreement was exempt from restrictions, under the order of Nov. 12. He said his company is not selling any coal in St. Louis or East St. Louis at the Government price, because it hasn't any to spare after filling its contracts. The company operates the Orient mine, the largest coal mine in the world.

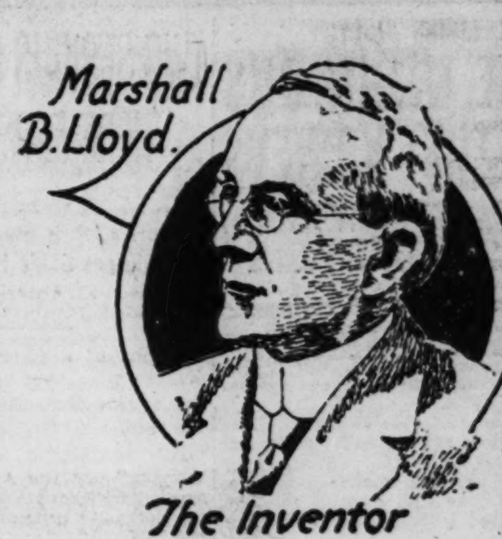
LLOYD LOOM WOVEN BABY CARRIAGES

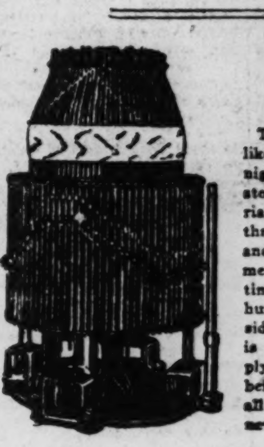
Marshall B. Lloyd.



The Inventor

This is the man whose name is destined to live through the centuries. What Howe and his sewing machine have meant to the weary fingers of women, Lloyd and his method of weaving will mean to the pallid cheeks of babies. There are one million three hundred thousand babies born in America alone every year. But before these magic looms can ever rest, there must be a Lloyd Carriage in which every baby can take his health ride in the sun—rich or poor. One within the money reach of every one.

The Loom



This is one of the human-like machines that is working night and day to supply your stores with Lloyd Baby Carriages for you. As you see it thrusting and pulling, picking and choosing, under the Lloyd method of weaving, you sometimes wonder if there isn't a human brain somewhere inside. No magic of the Orient is more wonderful. You simply watch a baby buggy grow before your eyes. And does it all with a fineness that fingers never knew.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if back hurts or bladder bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning anl in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

TWO SERIOUS DRAMAS HERE FOR THIS WEEK

Mme. Kalich Is Star at Jefferson; Frances Starr Heads Cast at American.

Drama of a serious sort will be presented on two downtown stages this week. Mme. Bertha Kalich, at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater tonight, will appear in "The Riddle: Woman." At the American tomorrow night Frances Starr will head the company presenting "Tiger! Tiger!"

Mme. Kalich has not appeared in St. Louis for several years past. At the time of her last appearance here, the late Ripley D. Saunders, then dramatic editor of the Post-Dispatch, wrote and sent to her verses, in which he pictured her as an exponent of the sufferings of the Jewish race. The verses were headed "Kalich, Inheritor of Tragedy." They are:

Kalich, thou of dark and brooding face,
Born into tragedy by birthright of race,
The sorrows of uncounted years arise
And plead for utterance in thy mournful eyes.
And on thy lips, so poignant sweet with pain,
God's stamp of suffering marks thy calling plain.

So stood Rachel, of thy blood, in her day,
So Bernhardt, of that blood, holds now her sway.
And thou, full sister of these mighty two,
The same blood-heritage claimest as thy due.

Valid thy claim. The centuries' seal is set
Upon its warrant. Tears and blood have wet
Its ancient and its modern countersigns.
Sorrow unspeakable breathes between its lines
Where, down to Kishinev's cruel days, is told
A nation's woe that dates from Egypt old.

To thee descended—Lo, how dread the cry
That rises from thy throat! How tense and high
With strain of agony! Not alone the part
That now thou playest thus doth wring thy heart.
But all thy people's grief, accumulate,
Sounds in thy voice, till, with race anguish great,
Thou speakest not even one little broken word,
But tragedy's supremest note is heard.

This, then, the price of glory to thy name—
How dire the cost, how bitter high the game,
O Kalich, on whose soul the forfeit lies
Of genius born from world-old sacrifice!
We yield us to the magic of thy spell.
With our applause the playhouse echoes swell.
We sound the praises of thy tragic power—
Yet still how bare, how empty, thy full hour!

What wonder, then, that even at Fame's full flood,
Thy eyes still bear mute witness to thy blood.
Somber with persecution—its wan sign
Still resting on those piteous lips of thine,
O Kalich, thou in whom all Israel's woe
Concentrate, makes the genius-gift we know!

The play in which Mme. Kalich is now appearing, and in which she appeared in New York throughout last season, is a sex drama, made by Dorothy Donnelly and Charlotte Wells from a Danish play by C. Jacobi. The production is declared to be a sumptuous one as to furnishings and costumes, particularly the star's gowns. The supporting company includes Charles Millward, Frank Burbeck, Jack Roseleigh, Adele Klaer, Paget Hunter, Alice Haynes and Lottie Salisbury.

A Play of Passion.

"Tiger! Tiger!" was written by Edward Knoblock, author of "Kismet" and "Marie-Odile." It got its zoological title from the lines of William Blake, "Tiger, tiger, burning bright." The attraction of sex is the tiger, and its exponents in the play are a British member of Parliament and a London woman of no social position. They meet in a public square, "and he knows at once," the announcement of the play declares, "that this is the woman who has been his since the world began." Their attachment lasts two years, the woman refusing to accept any money or material help from the man, and continuing her hard and menial work. The end comes through pressure caused by their social difference, and through the war, in which the man loses his life.

An epilogue shows a later visit of the woman, now married to a man of her own station, to the man's rooms, and the final utterance is her reading of his last words, written for her:

I know but this, that far beyond the strife
Of mortal passion looms another life,
Where slavish might fades evermore away
Before the freedom of an undreamt day.
There shall we meet again; no earth-born lie
To set the union of our souls awry.
There shall the true in us flame on as one
Eternally in Love's immortal sun.

David Belasco, the producer, declares that "Tiger! Tiger!" is one of the three most potent sex plays of his remembrance, the others being "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" and "The Easiest Way." Because "Mrs. Tanqueray" depends too largely on coincidence, and because the woman in "The Easiest Way" is a poor sort of creature, he considers "Tiger! Tiger!" to excel the others.

Frances Starr, who has been seen here in "The Easiest Way," and "Little Lady in Blue," has the leading role in "Tiger! Tiger!" Lionel Atwill, who has both a stage and a screen reputation, plays opposite Miss Starr, and other members of the cast are Frederick Lloyd, Wallace Erskine, Whitford Kane, Thomas Louden, Mary Moore, Helen Andrews and Daisy Elmore.

Man Seeks Three Sisters.

A letter has been received by the Post-Dispatch from John Hennessey of Lusk, Wyo., in which he asks for aid in his search for his three sisters, Mrs. John Smittley, formerly Miss Annie Hennessey, and Katie and Maggie Hennessey, and an aunt, supposed to be in St. Louis, Miss Nellie Hickey. Hennessey says he is sick.

ST. LOUIS ORCHESTRA DISCUSSED BY CRITICS

Chicago Appearance Evokes Praise and Hope Is Expressed That Visit Will Be Repeated.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Karleton Hackett, in his review in the Evening Post of the concert given by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in Orchestra Hall Thursday night, said:

"There was the sense of substantiality about the orchestra as if it had been carefully constructed by a man with ideals and practical experience. Mr. Zach is a conductor who strives to express the purpose of the composer and not to impress his own personality upon the audience by striking displays of virtuosity in the handling of the orchestra. His attitude was objective to bring out the meaning of the music according to the directions set down in the score rather than give new readings. He had a strong melodic sense and the main themes were always brought out with clear outlines and mellow tone.

"The more brilliant colors of the orchestral tone palette he used but sparingly, evidently preferring the softer grays. Also he was rather cautious about the display of emotional intensity which is becoming so much the modern fashion. The men were held down with a tight rein and but seldom permitted to swell forth into full power. Mr. Zach would build up a big climax as in the opening movement of the Chausson symphony and when it came the tone was rich and finely balanced but he did not believe in an over-indulgence in such stimulants.

Musicianly Ideals Shown.

"The Chausson symphony was given an interesting interpretation, one based on musicianly ideals of firm structure and melodic grace. To me there was a lack in poetic feeling. The Tschaikowsky "Romeo and Juliet" with which the program closed was given a more buoyant reading which doubtless was precisely what Mr. Zach intended. The tone was richer in color, the melodies had a broader sweep and there was a stronger play of light and shade.

"The soloist of the evening was Michel Gusikoff, the concertmaster of the orchestra, who played the Bruch violin concerto. It was possible for me to hear only part of the slow movement and the finale, but this was sufficient to prove that Mr. Gusikoff is a distinguished artist. His tone was rich and he gave the slow movement with poetic feeling. The final movement he played brilliantly, with clean technique, strong rhythms and fiery spirit. He made a distinct success with the audience and was compelled to bow many times in response to the applause.

Orchestra Worth Hearing.

"The concert was a welcome one. It is a misfortune that traveling costs so much as to make such visits a rarity, since artistically it is much to the benefit of all concerned for these symphony orchestras to show forth their powers. The St. Louis orchestra was well worth hearing and we hope that now they have found the way here they will come again. The audience was most cordial in its applause for Mr. Zach and the men and did all in their power to persuade them to another visit."

Maurice Rosenfeld in the Chicago Daily News says:

"Another symphony orchestra, the St. Louis organization, visited Chicago for the first time last evening and gave a representative program at Orchestra Hall under its conductor, Max Zach. One of the oldest symphony societies in the country—it is said to be in its fortieth year—the St. Louis orchestra, in its present status, is now making serious music. Mr. Zach has been at the head of the society which formerly had also a chorus since 1907. The string division has good tone body and the lower brass section is resonant and of voluminous power. The reeds are weak except the flute, which has a good tone quality, and the French horns need more mellowness as well as power.

Incisive Rhythmic Accent.

"In the bigger moments of the composition presented last evening a sonorous tone body was produced. There was precision and often incisive rhythmic accent, and the dynamic shades from fortissimo to pianissimo were accomplished with smooth gradations. The orchestra, however, plays with more than necessary deliberation, looking rather to safety than to speed, and bears out the saying "go slow, but sure." Thus there is a certain rigidity in tempo, which never varies from the beginning of a movement to its close.

"In the Chausson B-flat major symphony, as well as in the Goldmark overture, 'In the Spring,' these things were most noticeable. Strange to say, in the more romantic program—music of Tschaikowsky's Overture—Fantasia, 'Romeo and Juliet,' there was considerable elasticity and freedom in tempo, variations and in bigger tonal masses, and it proved a very well-rendered piece, with the exception of the beautiful horn motive, which was rather short-breathed.

"On the whole, we find in the St. Louis symphonists another symphonic orchestra of commendable parts.

"Michel Gusikoff, the concertmaster of the orchestra, appeared as soloist, playing with good tone and with finished mechanical means the Bruch G minor violin concerto."

WAR VETERANS TO MEET HERE

At a special meeting of the officers of the American Volunteers of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, it was decided that the 1920 convention of the organization would be held in St. Louis the week beginning July 4. SECOND WIFE GETS DIVORCE FROM A. J. POULIN, GROCER

Payment of $60 a Month Alimony Ordered by Court; Association With Other Women Alleged.

A divorce was granted yesterday by Circuit Judge Calhoun to Mrs. June Poulin from Albert J. Poulin, manager of the Mercantile Grocery Co., with alimony of $60 a month. She resides at 5602 Kingsbury boulevard and Poulin is directed to assign the lease on that apartment to her. He also is ordered to give her $200 for the payment of bills. One of the allegations was association with other women.

The Poulins were married in 1916, one month after Mrs. Poulin had obtained a divorce from August McCourt. Poulin previously had been divorced from Mrs. Pattie Parks Poulin.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

How do you like our present railway express service?

When you send in the coupon for the Cut Glass set illustrated above, please give me, on a separate sheet, some of your recent experiences relating to the railway express. If every one of our two hundred and fifty thousand customers responds, I ought to have something worth while to present where it may do good.

Until there is a change for the better—and this can be brought about only by a general house-cleaning—use the parcel-post for all shipments under fifty pounds, even if it does cost a little more. It is safer and quicker, and the shipment will be delivered, promptly and safely, at the consignee's door.

By the way, did it ever occur to you when the postman called,—faithful servant that he is and member of the most efficient business organization, public or private, in the world,—did you ever think to give him a bit of a jolly and tell him how much you appreciate him? A little thing to do, but the flower of such little things is fragrant and perennial.

ELMER E. STEVENS, Pres't.

4500 CIGAR LIGHTERS YET TO BE DISTRIBUTED

One Thousand Former Thirty-Fifth Division Men Received Them With a Dollar Bill.

More than 1000 souvenir cigar lighters, each of them accompanied by a folded $1 bill, were given yesterday to ex-members of the Thirty-fifth Division, A. E. F., by members of the Relatives' Auxiliary of that division, in the rooms formerly occupied by the Third National Bank, Broadway and Olive streets.

There are remaining 4500 lighters to be distributed and it is expected that the work of distributing these will not be finished until the end of the week. The rooms will be open each day from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., and ex-members of the division named may obtain their lighters upon presentation of their discharge papers. Mrs. Harold Haill is in charge of the distribution, assisted by more than 200 women, members of the Relatives' Auxiliary.

Each lighter is of bronze, two inches wide and two and three-quarters inches long. One side bears the figure of St. Louis mounted with the inscription "St. Louis to the Front." This inscription surrounds a reproduction of the emblem of the division, "Thirty-fifth Division, 1918, France, From a Grateful City to Her Gallant Sons." The other side of the lighter bears two female figures separated by a sword, on the hilt of which rests a hand. Between the figures are "U. S. (United States) and "R. F." (Republic of France). Below is the inscription "Allied for Liberty."

The turning of a small wheel on the lighter causes a spark which ignites either of two wicks as desired. One is a wick saturated with gasoline, carried in a chamber. The other is a larger, long wick, which runs through the body of the lighter and extends several inches below it. It is specially treated and requires no fluid. The lighters were made in France.

The lighters cost approximately $12,000 and were purchased with money contributed by St. Louisans in a tag day collection. When all of the men have been given the $1 which accompanies the lighters it is expected that the fund will be reduced to about $1000. It was originally $17,000. Any funds remaining will be distributed pro rata among the members of the Thirty-fifth Division.

For the relatives of men who were killed, 200 medals have been provided of the same design as that on the cigar lighters.

ADMITS OWN MISTAKE, CLEARS LAWYER OF SWINDLING CHARGE

Gov. Gardner Refuses Requisition Papers in Cleino Case on Illinois Grocer's Statement.

Arthur Payton, a Taylorville (Ill.) grocer who caused the indictment of Henry Cleino, a lawyer of 4518 Newberry terrace, on the charge that Cleino swindled him out of $16,000 in 1910 by showing him one farm and selling him another, admitted yesterday to Gov. Gardner that it was his own mistake, and Cleino was not present. The Governor denied requisition papers, and the case will be dropped.

Cleino took Payton to Rolla, Mo., to look at the farm. Payton at first said that Cleino showed him an attractive farm, which he agreed to buy, and that he later found that the deed called for another farm, on which the only productive element was a rock quarry. At the hearing yesterday he said that he hired a horse and buggy, went out to see the farm without Cleino, and looked at the wrong one.

It developed that Gov. Hadley in 1911 refused to honor requisition papers in the same case. Cleino has been living and practicing law here for six years. He was arrested Tuesday at his office in the Railway Exchange Building.

"Y" SECRETARIES HEAR TALKS

Philemon Bevis, general secretary of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. and C. C. Robinson of New York City, member of the International Committee of the Association, yesterday addressed a meeting of the executive secretaries of the "Y" at the Metropolitan offices in the Railway Exchange building. Robinson described the "Find Yourself Campaign" conducted by the Association during the past week. About 100 young men were given vocational advice by men who volunteered to assist the young men to choose the right life work.

Bevis told of the recent national conference of city secretaries held at Washington, which was the first of its kind ever held. The educational program, the "Y" as a positive evangelistic force, and other problems were discussed. Bevis announced that the auto school at Central Y. M. C. A. is the largest in the city and one of the largest in the United States

CHECK FOR TAXES HELD UP

Company Offers Payment for Three Months, Owing for Six.

The Pierce Oil Corporation yesterday sent to the City License Collector a check for $7080.80, in payment of the license tax of one-half cent a gallon on all gasoline sold at its St. Louis filling stations in November and December, 1919, and January, 1920.

It was decided to hold up the check and refuse to accept it until the company sends in the full amount due. The ordinance became effective Aug. 3 last and the company has made no payment for August, September and October.

The Standard Oil Co. is the only one doing business here which has paid the tax in full to date.

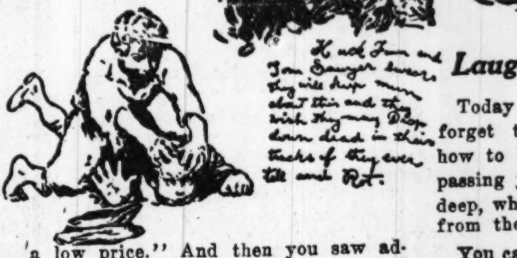
"Come with Us, and Be a Boy Again!"



Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer swore they will keep mum about this and they wish they may drop down dead in their tracks if they ever tell and Rot.

One More Chance!

When you were a little boy you dreamed of the day when you might own a whole real set of Mark Twain—and then you waited and waited and grew up—and found that a whole set of 25 volumes — stretched in a row—looking like a whole library in the bookcase — cost about $150. And you said, "I'll wait until I get rich." So you waited and were glad you did, because one day your heard how Mark Twain had said, "I don't like the idea of expensive books. Sell my books at a low price." And then you saw advertisements that made you laugh and almost made you cry — you felt so young again.

And you said, "Here's my chance at last. I'll get these books at a little price that I won't mind. I'll go back and be a boy again with Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer."

Laugh and Grow Young

Today our great men know that to forget their cares, they must know how to laugh. Not the laughter of a passing jest or a pretty folly, but the deep, wholesome laughter that wells up from the heart.

You can forget the cares and burdens of your day if you knew the laughter that bubbles and twinkles through the pages of Mark Twain.

Everybody loves the man who laughs. He is at peace with the world—at peace with himself. He is a success in life—in business and at home.

MARK TWAIN

25 VOLUMES: Novels Boys' Stories Biography History Travel Essays Humor

In a little town on the Mississippi a ragged, barefooted boy lived and dreamed. Day after day, as he stood on the cliff above the sweeping river, he looked with wistful eyes at the pilot boats that steamed away into the unknown world beyond. One day the longing to see that magic world became too strong—and so he ran away and became a pilot. Far away, indeed, did the river carry him—to fame undreamed—to greatness unsurpassed. For that humble, neglected boy was Mark Twain, whose memory all the world now reveres.

His shaggy white head was the head of a prophet and a seer. To the darkest corners of the earth his vision—his genius—has brought joy and the deep peace that comes of understanding. But to us—the plain people of America—he is something more precious, something more rare and beautiful than just a genius. To us he is the simple, unassuming man who never for a moment forgot that he was once a boy—a boy who knew what it meant to yearn and to struggle. That is why Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn are the two most human, most popular, best beloved boys in all the world. That is why there is no other man of whom Americans are so proud—no other man whom we love so much to have for our own—near at hand to take us back to the golden days of long ago—the days that no one else can show us how to recapture.

LETZ QUARTET ENTERTAINS WELL

Plays Bethoven Work and New Kreisler Composition in Fine Style.

The Letz Quartet furnished a rare and enjoyable evening of chamber music at Sheldon Memorial last night. These four players—Hans Letz and Sandor Harmati, first and second violin, respectively; Edward Kreiner, viola, and Gerald Maas, 'cello—are surpassed in real artistry by few similar organizations which visit St. Louis.

Their interpretations are replete with musical understanding, and their tones, individual and in the ensemble, are of surpassing sweetness and clarity. The principal offering was the F Minor Quartet of Beethoven, than which there is nothing more engaging to the lover of chamber music.

Their presentation of it was in exquisite taste, the marvelous harmonies coming in easy, flowing cadence, while the more rapid parts were marked by precision and daintiness. An unfamiliar work to St. Louis, the new Kreisler Quartet in A Minor, was included in the program, and won approval, both for its own merits and by the manner of its rendition. Between these two quartets was the Aandante con moto known as "Death of the Maiden," from Schuman's D Minor Quartet.

THYRSUS CLUB'S PROGRAM

Play by Clarence Stratton to Be Presented.

Among four plays to be produced by the Thyrsus Club of Washington University before the expiration of the current school year is one by Clarence Stratton, head of the English department of Central High School, entitled "Bombito." It is one of three scheduled for the evenings of March 15, 16 and 18, comprising the monthly group of one-act plays. The others are "Charming Leandre," by H. V. Banville, and "Riders of the Sea," by John M. Synge.

Justin McCarthy's "If I Were King" has been adopted for production as the annual play by the club, the date and place of presentation to be determined.

PUBLIC LIBRARIES OPEN NIGHTS

Erroneous Impression to Contrary Blamed for Smaller Attendance.

The evening attendance at the public libraries has been smaller than usual during the past two months, because of a probable misunderstanding of the closing time by the public, according to Librarian Bostwick.

The libraries were closed for a short time at night because of the fuel shortage two months ago, and proper announcement that the former hours have been resumed has not reached the public, he said. The misinformation has not interfered with the circulation, but more books have been issued during the day.

NEW GRAND CENTRAL GRAND & LUCAS

She flew straight into his arms, this slip of a girl he had never seen and she was crying in a voice that broke between sobs and laughter.

"Derry, don't you know me? Aren't you glad to see me?" she was asking.

He felt the soft crush of her hair against his face and a wild exultation seized him.

Then he heard McDowell's voice saying he would leave them alone. The thrill passed and her heart was left dead.

For Keith, the Outlaw, knew this great love was not for him—the masquerader, but for Conniston, the Mounted Policeman who had died in the Arctics and whose identity Keith had taken.

The unforgetable story of John Keith will seem like something you yourself are living. You will stand with Keith in a lonely cabin in the Arctics beside a dying man whose duty it is to have you hanged. You will receive from him, in his gratitude, a name and a history not your own. Drilled by him, you will return to face the law which demands your life. You will feel the shock of things which death prevented him from telling you. And you will meet and love a woman from whom you are strangely barred.

HIGH PRICES FOR "FOLLIES" NO BAR TO RESERVATIONS

Demands Reported as "Unprecedented" Despite Increase of Admission to $4.40.

The people must have their amusement regardless of what they must pay. The high price of tickets to the Ziegfeld Follies, at $4 plus war tax for parquet seats, has not lessened the demand for seats, according to the management of the American Theater. The mail order business is unprecedented, and a considerable share of the purchasers are from outside of St. Louis.

Some of these out-of-town orders are from persons who will be in St. Louis on business next week, but others come from those who are coming here principally to see the show. This is shown by the fact that writers request the theater management to make hotel reservations for them for the day for which the tickets are assigned to them. Up to Friday noon, it was stated at the theater, 5672 mail orders were received and filled, and hotel reservations were obtained for 120 persons.

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

Take plain bitro-phosphate, is the advice of these physicians to thin, delicate, nervous people who lack vim, energy and nerve force, and there seems to be ample proof of the efficacy of this preparation to warrant the recommendation. Moreover, if we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by Judge & Dolph, Enderle Drug Stores, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Georgia Hamilton, the wonderful "movie" girl, who was once thin and frail, says: "Bitro-Phosphate brought about the magic transformation. gained 15 pounds and never before felt so well."

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere are now recognizing its merits by its use in ever-increasing quantities. Fredrick Kolle, M. D., editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says: "Bitro-phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital to increase strength and nerve force and to enrich the blood."

Joseph D. Harrigan, former visiting specialist to Northeastern Dispensatory, says: "Let those who are weak, thin, nervous, anemic or run-down, take a natural, unadulterated substance such as bitro-phosphate and you will soon see some astonishing results in the increase of nerve energy, strength of body and mind and power of endurance."

Bitro-phosphate is made entirely of the organic phosphate compound referred to in the National Standard Dispensatory as being a preparation which has recently acquired considerable reputation in the treatment of neurasthenia. The standard of excellence, strength and purity of its substance is beyond question, for every Bitro-phosphate tablet is manufactured in strict accordance with the U. S. Pharmacopoeia test requirements. Bitro-Phosphate is therefore not a patent medicine, and should not be confused with any of the secret nostrums, so-called tonics or widely advertised "cure-alls."

CAUTION—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

Quick Relief From Indigestion, Gastritis and Stomach Acidity

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

Owing to the great variety of stomach ailments and the hundred and one "specifics" for their treatment, it would indeed be a mere chance if the average layman selected a remedy for his own case that would give substantial and lasting benefits; even granting that the selected remedy possessed real merit when administered for a specific condition. It is therefore not surprising to find the sufferer from stomach irregularities buying and trying first one "cure," then another, in a vain endeavor to obtain relief. Recent investigations of the treatment of a large number of cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and conditions prove that there is nothing more effective in the treatment of these ailments than ordinary serathol, which can be obtained from any good druggist at trifling cost. Many a sufferer from these complaints has been agreeably surprised at the almost instantaneous relief and subsequent permanent benefit from its use. Serathol is a harmless and tasteless white powder, a teaspoonful of which should be taken in a full glass of water immediately after meals. In many cases of hyper-acidity a single dose produces almost magic effects. For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and all good druggists.

200 UKRAINIANS ATTEND MEETING

Two hundred Ukrainians attended an Americanization meeting at 1523 Hickory street Friday night under the auspices of the industrial department of the Y. M. C. A. Moving pictures were shown. Patriotic singing was led by Fred J. Fowler.

B. B. Maticka spoke on the importance of foreign-born residents learning to read and write the English language and to understand the elements of citizenship. These subjects are taught in classes for foreign-born persons by the "Y." Miss Frances Leslie has a class of women who meet twice a week at the Ukrainian Hall for educational work. Another Americanization meeting will be held at the same place the third week in March.

You Cannot Hide Your Fat

The Basis of Public CONFIDENCE

Leadership in any line of merchandising is never a matter of chance or luck.

Back of every permanent success is the adoption and strict adherence to certain policies that experience has shown to be peculiarly adapted to a particular business in promoting just and equitable relations between a house and its customers.

Conroy's was the first piano company in the country to establish an absolutely fixed price policy in selling its instruments, thereby eliminating the barter system, which had been characteristic of piano selling from time immemorial.

Before the advent of fixed prices, the case rather than the mechanism was relied upon to accomplish the sale, and many a shrewd trader in furniture, but no judge of piano values, found to his misfortune that he had acquired a beautiful piece of polished wood, rather than a reliable musical instrument.

At Conroy's every player or piano is tested by a corps of experts as to tone value, construction and finish before being offered to our customers, and to every one is attached a tag showing the exact selling price marked in plain figures, and this price is the lowest at which instruments of such value are obtainable.

Conroy's was one of the first musical institutions in the country to eliminate from its lists all instruments of doubtful origin; that is, all assembled pianos or players.

Every step in the manufacture of Conroy's Pianos or Players is controlled by the maker, from sounding board to string pin.

Responsibility for imperfections cannot be evaded by shifting the blame to some unknown manufacturer of piano parts.

These policies have resulted in establishing the confidence of the public in the Conroy methods, by knowing that their own youngster can obtain as good an instrument, at the price they wish to pay, as a professional pianist.

Not alone have Conroy's policies won a large and ever-increasing measure of public appreciation, but they are enthusiastically commended by eighteen of the most celebrated American piano manufacturers who have accorded to Conroy's exclusive representation for their products. Among these famous makes are the Knabe, the "World's Best Piano," and the internationally-known Ampico Reproducing Piano in the Knabe, Haines, and Marshall & Wendell makes.

Designed and built by the foremost piano experts, endorsed by the most famous pianists of the day, sold on just and equitable terms. Any one of Conroy's Pianos or Players will give you a lifetime of musical satisfaction.

PAINTERS DEMAND 25 CENTS MORE PER HOUR

Proposal to Be Taken Up Tuesday—New Scale for Building Laborers.

An increase of 25 cents an hour, demanded by 2200 union painters, is to be considered Tuesday at a meeting of the Master Painters' and Decorators' Association. Ordinary painters, now receiving 75 cents an hour, have asked for $1 an hour. Sign painters, now getting $1 an hour, have demanded $1.25.

The new scale of wages for about 4000 building laborers, agreed upon Friday night at a conference between representatives of the union and an arbitration committee of the Building Industries Association, which becomes effective tomorrow and continues for a year, was fixed on the following basis:

	Old wage, per hour.	New wage asked for.	New wage granted.
Concrete workers	69c	90c	80c
Open well workers	69c	90c	80c
Blockmen	75c	96c	85c
Foremen	83½c	$1.00	90c
Powder men	83½c	$1.00	85c
Rock drillers	75c	95c	85c
Stonemason laborers	75c	90c	80c
Building laborers	57½c	78½c	67½c
Building laborers' foremen	69c	88½c	77½c
Marble and tile setters' helpers	57½c	80c	67½c

The scale for excavators and wreckers was not fixed, but was left to the Wreckers and Excavators Association.

It was agreed that overtime was to be paid at the rate of time and one-half for the first two hours each day, except Saturday, and double time after the first two hours. On Saturday double time will be paid for work done after noon.

DEATH OF MAN STRUCK BY CAR VIEWED AS ACCIDENT BY JURY

Morris D. Lipstman, 70, Died Several Hours After Being Injured by Laclede Street Car.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the case of Morris D. Lipstman, 70 years old, 1416 North Sixteenth street, a buyer for the General Paper Stock Co., who died at the city hospital Friday evening, several hours after he had been hit by a Laclede street car on Laclede avenue, about 150 feet east of King's highway.

Motorman Francis Russell, 3007 North Newstead avenue, and Conductor Alfred Doss, 1958 Potomac street, who were arrested following the accident, were exonerated by the testimony of witnesses.

Lipstman, according to witnesses, had jumped from a motor truck, eastbound on the south side of the street, and ran across toward the north sidewalk directly in the path of the car, which was a few feet behind the auto and moving at moderate speed. Russell sounded his gong and applied the brake, but failed to stop the car in time to prevent the accident.

Lipstman was knocked 15 feet and was unconscious when picked up and taken to the hospital.

Russell testified that Lipstman crossed the tracks with his head down and apparently did not see the car approaching.

WOMEN'S CAMPAIGN AGAINST PRICES TO BE STARTED AT ONCE

Headquarters Opened in Century Building, in Charge of Miss Mary Semple Scott.

Mrs. John R. Leighty, 4963 McPherson avenue, recently elected president of the organization of women formed to fight the high cost of living, announced yesterday that an active campaign for this purpose would begin at once.

Headquarters were opened yesterday at 610 Century building, with Miss Mary Semple Scott in charge as executive secretary. Mrs. Leighty said that start of the campaign had been delayed because of her own illness and that of several others active in the organization, and also because she wished first to consult with leaders of similar movements in other states.

She said that a meeting of heads of various State patriotic societies would be held this week, at which the policy of the campaign in Missouri would be outlined. She is opposed to the boycott because she believes this has a tendency to cut down production on the farms. She declared that the plan of having housewives report profiteering had not proved successful where tried.

The campaign of the women's organization will be conducted in co-operation with the Fair Price Commission of the Department of Justice.

NO FEAR OF VOTERS IN "LITTLE CONGRESS"

Secretaries Said to Reflect Real Sentiment of Chiefs in Debating Questions.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Hanging like the sword of Damocles over the head of many a Congressman is the fear that unwittingly he will say or do something to offend his constituency and retire him into political oblivion.

Not so with the members of the "Little Congress," where perfect freedom of speech is the rule. The "Little Congress' is a new Washington institution formed of about 50 of the secretaries of Senators and Representatives. These embryonic statesmen meet every Saturday night in a large caucus room and discuss current issues with which their chiefs have to deal. The organization is a replica of that of the House of Representatives and debate is conducted according to the House rules. Bills and resolutions are introduced, referred to committees, debated, and finally passed or rejected.

Some of the questions up for discussion lately have been the anti-strike section of the Cummins bill, the anti-sedition bills and the league of nations.

Members declare that the secretaries reflect the opinions of their chiefs more accurately than the Senators and Congressmen themselves. For the "Little Congressmen" know what is in the minds of the legislators and are unconsciously influenced by it. Being without constituencies, they can go as far as they like without fear that some opponent in a future campaign will plague them with the ghost of an unguarded utterance summoned from the Congressional Record.

The league of nations caused a stormy debate. Don Hunt, secretary to Senator Reed, introduced a resolution putting the "Little Congress" on record against the league in any form whatsoever. By the use of approved parliamentary records, Hunt, who is as keen against the league as Reed himself, succeeded where his chief thus far has failed. He got his bitter-end resolution through by the margin of one vote.

He agrees to work six months without wages for the firm winning the raffle. There was no immediate rush of firms to accept.

GRAVE OF ST. LOUIS BOY FOUND IN FRENCH MILITARY CEMETERY

Burial Place of John Conway Adjoins That of Victor A. Fromme, Also of 138th.

Mrs. H. E. Conway, 208 Terry street, has received a letter from Dudley Lewis of Vosges, France, in which he tells her that the grave of her son, John Conway, who died from wounds, has been found in the military cemetery at Girardmer France. And by a strange coincidence the grave of Conway is adjacent to that of Victor A. Fromme, a St. Louis boy, the story of the finding of whose grave was told in the Post-Dispatch last week.

In his letter to Mrs. Conway, Lewis, who is connected with the Y. M. C. A. in France, says: "You will be interested to know that Mme. Trucot, who nursed both your son and Victor Fromme and remembers both of them well, sailed for America this week and will locate at Battle Creek, Mich. Mme. Trucot's daughter married a Lieutenant in the American army, who was gassed and died soon after. She and her daughter will make their home with the family of Mme. Trucot's son-in-law."

Lewis says that in the military cemetery at Girardmer there are scores of graves of Missouri boys, as the majority of the members of the 138th killed in France were buried in this cemetery. He says that the graves are splendidly cared for and that the French people of that section give them every possible attention. A list of the St. Louis boys buried in this cemetery was published in the Post-Dispatch last Sunday.

PILES CURED WITHOUT THE KNIFE By Dr. Henrich's Method TO STAY CURED

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Time. Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

It is a few weeks now since I first talked to you in regard to my Mild Medical Method for the CURE of Piles and other Rectal diseases. Up to now you have not replied to my advertisement, and I was wondering if you are enjoying temporary relief from this affliction. I hate to discourage you or make you feel badly, but unless you have been cured—absolutely CURED—of your Piles, then you are liable to have them return at any time. And they do not get any easier to endure in each succeeding attack. You probably are aware of this fact.

The reason why Piles must be cured before you can obtain any lasting relief is that it is a diseased condition of the veins underlying the mucous surface of the rectum. The veins are diseased and hence Pile tumors form in and around the mouth of the rectum. My treatment is applied directly to the Pile tumors; it goes right down through the growth to the diseased veins, removes the cause of the trouble and gives Nature a chance to reassert herself. When the cause is thus removed the Pile tumors disappear and a perfectly healthy rectum is the result.

Cutting, which never cures, is thus avoided, as is all danger attendant upon a surgical operation. My Mild Medical Method cures Piles without the knife—cures them to stay cured. Let this fact sink into your mind. It has never failed yet where the case is at all curable, and you can find out whether or not your case is curable only by a personal consultation with me. It is unlikely that your case is incurable, for only a very few cases are incurable. The chances are you have used the wrong treatment. The right treatment, such as I use, will surely cure you.

Being a Specialist, you may consider that my fee may be higher than you can stand. Dismiss such a thought from your mind. I treat so many cases that I can afford to make low rates on each case. The high-priced specialist treats so few cases that he must charge a big fee for each one. My advertising brings me into touch with so many more sufferers that I can afford to make a low price for CURING rectal diseases, and remember this—whatever fee I name you, will cover everything connected with the treatment; no hospital or sanitarium bill to follow; no operating room fee; no anesthetic; no nurse's bill; no medicine bill; no extras of any kind—the one low fee which I will name only after the personal examination will cover all expenses connected with my treatment, so if you hesitate because of the danger of the knife or the high cost of the treatment, hesitate and delay no longer. Write right away saying when you will arrive and it will be one of the best decisions you will make in your life, for it will mean so much health for you—freedom from suffering, and my treatment is very rapid, painless, and all of my patients can be up and about their work in a few days with the old bother and pain and ill health from this cause GONE FOREVER.

Let me hear from you by return mail saying when you will come.

VALLEY EXPOSITION AT COLISEUM TO OPEN TOMORROW

Displays Will Include Manufactured and Agricultural Products of Middle-West and Some From Abroad.

MEXICO TO HAVE MINERAL EXHIBIT

Gold and Silver From Fabulously Rich Mines of Chihuahua to Be Shown, Also Samples From Peru.

The first Mississippi Valley Exposition will open at the Coliseum at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. It is expected to become a permanent annual event, to be held in the fall, for the purpose of exploiting the industries and natural resources of the Mississippi Valley. The enterprise has received the indorsement of the governors of the 21 States in the Valley, and the mayors of the principal municipalities and Chambers of Commerce. Robert L. Burch is Director-General.

The first exposition includes manufactured products representing many lines of industry and comprehensive exhibits of the natural resources and agricultural products of four of the principal Mississippi Valley States—Louisiana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

The movement is receiving the indorsement of the Federal Government, in that the United States navy is making a comprehensive display and the State Department has co-operated with the Director-General in sending out literature announcing the enterprise to all of the foreign consuls, who in turn have advised the exporters and importers of their respective countries of the exposition and of the advantages and resources of the Mississippi Valley.

The enterprise has received publicity in the papers of Madrid, Spain; Shanghai, China; Lima, Peru; Chihuahua, Mexico; Batavia and Wetevreden, Java, and in the press of London and other foreign capitals.

Two Exhibits of Minerals.

There will be two foreign exhibits. A mineral exhibit from Chihuahua, Mexico, includes a display of gold, silver, copper, zinc, lead and also vanadium and tungsten. Some fabulously rich gold and silver samples, assaying thousands of dollars per ton are included. There are also average samples showing what may be expected from the large so-called low grade camps.

In connection with the minerals exhibited will be shown, by means of panoramic photographs, what is actually being done in the mining and smelting of Chihuahua's minerals.

The program will include special days such as "Missouri day," March 3; "Good Roads day," March 5; "Manufacturing day," March 6; "States of the Valley day," March 8; "Exports and Latin-American day," March 9; "Mississippi Valley Waterways day," March 10; "Greater Production day," March 11.

March 3 to Be "Missouri Day."

The program for "Missouri day," which will be devoted entirely to the exploiting of Missouri and St. Louis particularly, will be Wednesday evening, March 3. The city will be represented by Mayor Kiel, the Chamber of Commerce by W. Frank Carter, and the State by former Senator X P. Wilfley, personal representative of Gov. Gardner.

Participating in expositions is a part of the advertising campaign. The salesmen exploit the land values, land production, home making, educational advantages and opportunities offered by North Dakota to those seeking homes or business locations. South Dakota, Minnesota and Louisiana will also have comprehensive exhibits.

New Orleans will have an exhibit showing the advantages of transportation facilities for foreign export and import trade. New Orleans recently completed 14 miles of wharf and warehouses, and has a harbor which receives ocean-going steamers. Other river cities and Chambers of Commerce will have special booths. The Southern Pine Association's exhibit will show the various uses of pine.

The exposition will be open every day excepting Sunday from 12:30 to 10:30 p. m.

Heat Worse Than Shells.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In describing the evolution of the army tank, the Tank Corps pointed out that in many engagements operators of the "Treat-'Em-Rough Limousines" were put out of action by the intense heat generated by the engine, the discharge of the machine gun and the rays of the sun. In the new variety of tank, the Mark VIII, measures have been taken to remedy these conditions. The motor was placed in the rear and separated from the fighting compartment by an airtight bulkhead. A fan has been attached to the engine to draw in fresh air and force it into the fighting compartment.

New Hair Remover in Demand, Say Druggists

(Phelactine Removes Roots and All)

Since the virtues of phelactine as a hair-remover became generally known, druggists in this country have been having a really extraordinary demand for this remarkable product. The fact that it actually removes the roots—before one's very eyes—as well as the surface hairs, is of course mainly responsible for its large and increasing sale. The new method is not to be compared at all with the usual depilatory, electrical or other processes. It is entirely safe, non-irritating, non-poisonous, odorless—and instantaneous. A stick of phelactine, used in accordance with the simple instructions which accompany it, is certain to satisfy and delight the user.

3 Million Dollars Bought Real Music

No finer example of courage is known to the world of science than Thomas A. Edison's work in perfecting the phonograph. The skeptics rose in full chorus when he proposed a better phonograph—an instrument "that could produce music as human as the artists who first gave it utterance."

Mr. Edison's experiments exhausted the entire field of research in sound reproduction and cost three million dollars. The result was the ultimate perfection of

LHEVINNE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SOLOIST

Organization Will Give First Local Presentation of New Converse Composition.

What is believed to be the first genuinely American symphony is to have its second performance by any orchestra at the Friday and Saturday concerts of this week given at the Odeon by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. This is billed as a symphony in C minor by Frederick Converse, the Boston composer, but is in reality a symphonic picture of this country at war—voicing the real American spirit, the deep-rooted vigor of thought and action, the serious yet joyous response to the innate sense of duty, the romantic patriotism, the energy and industry, which characterizes America in whatever it does.

The symphony was written shortly after the war ended, and was the result of the emotions and experiences of its composer in his work for the war. It had its premiere in Boston in January, being played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its concerts of Jan. 30 and 31, and created a profound impression.

Described as "Absolute Music."

Edward Burlingame Hill, himself a composer of note, said in his review of the symphony in the Boston Transcript:

"Mr. Converse's symphony has no 'program' in the ordinarily accepted sense of that term. It pictures no definite series of events, no precise personal ties; it does not attempt to illustrate. With the possible exception of the dramatic finale it may be listened to as 'absolute music.' Its architecture, emotional content and orchestral effect are self-sufficient. First of all, then, this music stands the test along all critical lines. It is obedient to the basic principles of symphonic form; its musical style is purely symphonic and does not at all encroach upon the domain of the symphonic poem. It remains a symphony and achieves its end as such. None the less, in composing this music Mr. Converse kept in mind certain generalized moods. He bethought himself of the common experience of thousands of young men and women during the past few years, and the consciousness of their existence vitalized his musical thought. The main themes of the first movement symbolize the ardent and self-sacrificing youth eager to answer the call of his country, and the young girl equally bent upon having her lover assert his patriotism even at the expenes of their mutual happiness. The slow movement voicing the calm and penetrating sentiment of the thoughtful night, suggests also an intimate dialogue of lovers facing the future with a resolute acceptance of duty.

"The scherzo is a typical movement of play, such as were found in hundreds of instances behind the lines, or in the many camps in this country. It suggests the few minutes snatched from responsibility to enjoy muscular exertion to the utmost. The last movement presents the march to battle, a complex and titanic struggle, with the overmastering triumph of a victorious return. These vivid and searching imaginings served to quicken his musical invention through the visualization of a dramatic picture. They also rest securely in the background with the listener, since the intrinsically mystical qualities of the symphony are their own justification. Certain features of the thematic manipulation, however, do gain in poignancy as the general emotional drift of the symphony is kept in mind."

Frederick Converse is best known in St. Louis as the composer of the music for the Masque of St. Louis, although he has become known also through other of his works played by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society. If, as his contemporaries believe, he has composed the only genuine American symphony, the fact that this city is the second to present that work will bring much credit to the local orchestra in after years.

Josef Lhevinne Soloist.

The soloist of the concerts of this week will be the eminent Russian pianist, Josef Lhevinne, now making a long-deferred tour in this country. Lhevinne was booked for an extensive American tour in the season of 1914-15, but being in Berlin at the outbreak of the war, was interned and forbidden to leave the confines of the city until after the armistice. He was engaged for a pair of symphony concerts in St. Louis at that time. The present engagement is a fulfillment of the former one.

Lhevinne, who is one of the few living pupils of the great Rubinstein, will play the fifth concerto of that composer in his St. Louis appearance and the only other number of the two programs is a first-time overture ("In London Town") by Elgar. The program in detail follows:

Symphony in C Minor..............Converse
(1) Adagio misterioso; allegro moderato; allegro appassionato.
(2) Adagio tranquillo molto e rubato.
(3) Allegro vicace scherzando.
(4) Allegro maestoso molto con fuoco e marziale.
(First time.)
Concerto in E Flat Major for Piano and Orchestra, No. 5..............Rubinstein
(1) Allegro.
(2) Andante.
(3) Final; allegro.
Overture, Cockaigne (In London Town)..Elgar
(First time.)

Attractive "Pop" Offering.

This afternoon the orchestra will make its bow to its own public after what is probably the most important tour in its history, and will present its young leader of the 'cello choir, H. Max Steindel, as soloist. Steindel has chosen the Saent-Saens Concerto for violoncello and orchestra, and will play the work in its entirety.

Rupture Kills 7000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

NAVAL RESERVES TO BE CALLED FOR SERVICE

Officers and Men Must Perform Two Weeks' Duty on Shipboard After July 1.

Officers and men of the Naval Reserve Force on inactive duty will be required to perform at least two weeks' active duty for training on a naval vessel each year after July 1, according to circular letters received recently by members of the reserve from Great Lakes Naval Training Station. At least 4000 Missourians are affected by this order, it was said at the navy recruiting office yesterday. Transportation and other expenses to and from the coast will be paid the men, in addition to the regular pay for active duty of $32.60 a month.

A letter from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, received at the recruiting office yesterday stated that the men would probably be allowed to select their own time of service to avoid conflict with their business interests, and that vessels would shortly be assigned to the Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Naval Districts for the training of naval reservists. Shore armories for the same purpose would probably be established, it said, and men who performed active duty during the war will not be exempt from service. It also stated that reservists may be discharged from the naval reserve force in time of peace upon their own request in accordance with instructions existing at that time. No instructions have been issued, Commander Oates said yesterday.

Nearly all ex-service men wanted to get the benefit of the two weeks' service, he said, as he had already received inquiries from several men discharged from the regulars, asking if they might enroll in the reserve for that purpose. Any former enlisted man with a creditable record may enroll in the naval reserve, and be put on inactive duty at once, he said.

Officers and men of the navy, who have been confirmed in their ranks and ratings, have always been obliged to serve aboard ship for two weeks, each year, and have always received two months' salary a year. Examinations for confirmation in rank of officers are given at the recruiting station, and the applications are sent to the Navy Department. If the officers's record justifies it, the rank is confirmed. Enlisted men, desiring confirmation in rating, must go to Great Lakes Training Station at their own expense and take an examination.

Commander Oates said yesterday that hundreds of ex-service navy men are only awaiting a favorable decision of Congress in regard to increases in pay, to re-enlist. A letter from chief petty officers, R. W. White and C. H. McDonald, who are in Washington lobbying for the bill, stated that the recent report that immediate action would not be taken on the bill was erroneous, and that a joint meeting of the House and Senate Naval Affairs Committees would be held shortly at which a decision would be reached. He said he was so certain that the increase would be granted that he has had every preparation made for notifying the men affected.

Tuesday at McKinley High School, and a second will take place Thursday afternoon at the same hour at Cleveland High School. Both events will be open to the public after the pupils and teachers who desire to attend are seated, with a slightly larger charge of admission for outsiders than for the school children. Fifteen cents will be the charge to children and teachers and 25 cents to outsiders.

The program in each case will be orchestral, with a closing choral number given by the children accompanied by the orchestra. Conductor Max Zach will conduct the orchestral numbers, and the choral numbers will be conducted by Glenn M. Tyndall and D. H. Two more concerts will be given on March 16 and 18 at Yeatman and Soldan High Schools.

Schumann-Heink Club.

The members of the Schumann-Heink Club for their recital at the Heink Conservatory in the Studio Building next Saturday afternoon have arranged an attractive program. Among the numbers are several American compositions, such as Hawley's "Gay Butterfly" and Nevin's "The Wedding Morn" (Miss Allie Schmidt); others are: Schubert's "The Inn" and Arditi's "Love in Springtime" (Miss Dorothy Fulton); Salter's "The Cry of Rachel" and Arditi's "Bolero" (Mrs. W. E. Emig); Lieut. Mueller will play Kreisler's "Schoen Rosmarin" and Labitzky's "The Dream." The following locally well-known performers also will participate: Mme. de Arman, Madge Meyer, Dorothy Kalbfell and Margaret Busch.

That Little Thin Spot Will Soon Grow Larger

Thinning hair is a sure sign that your scalp is inactive and the roots of the hair are not in a normal condition. Don't neglect your scalp. Dust, excess oil, perspiration, dandruff and other impurities clog up the hair ducts, prevent the natural growth of the hair and soon it falls out.

A few minutes brushing every day with a good stiff brush, and a shampoo once a week with Coconol will keep your hair and scalp clean, stimulate the circulation of the blood in the underlying tissues, and promote a thick growth of lustrous, beautiful hair.

Cocoanut Oil Shampoo
Coconol

Cleanses the Hair—Nourishes the Roots

Coconol is made from the purest cocoanut oil. It is mild and antiseptic. The soothing, creamy foam penetrates the hair ducts, cleanses them thoroughly, and supplies the nourishing cocoanut oil that promotes the growth of the hair. Try this perfect shampoo and prevent that little thin spot.

Only 25 Cents a Box—At All Dealers

Each box contains 12 snow white cubes of pure, mild Coconol, and only costs 25 cents. Each cube is sufficient for a shampoo. Simply dissolve it in hot water. It is cleansing, soothing, refreshing and nourishing. Don't forget—don't delay—order Coconol today. Your dealer has it, or will get it for you.

Proper Way to Keep Your Hair in Curl

If you want your hair to grow and thrive, don't curl it with a hot iron. The regular use of this barbarous instrument is bound to keep the hair dried and parched looking, with broken, uneven ends. It's a lot more sensible to adopt the simple silmerine method, which will not interfere in the least with the growth and health of the hair. Moreover, it means a far more beautiful curly and wavy effect, with no evidence of having been artificially acquired.

A few ounces of liquid silmerine—which can of course be found in any drug store—will last a long time. Just try a little of this harmless liquid tonight. Dip a clean toothbrush into it and draw this down the full length of the hair. Silmerine, by the way, is neither sticky nor greasy; you will be simply delighted with it.

EWMAN TAKES NEW TEMPORARY QUARTERS

hile plans and specifications for w building are being prepared, arry Newman Incorporated announced last week that on March 1 y would occupy as temporary arters the two-story building at 1 Locust street.

The Newman organization during war period concentrated on the ndling of commercial cars.

Just prior to the Automobile Show was announced that they would ain enter the passenger car field, ving secured the franchise for the Louis territory for the R. & V. ight, the only American-built sixinder Knight-motored car on the rket; the Commonwealth Four, a htweight popular priced line, and Leach, a California custom-built r embodying many of the ideas hich have recently become so popur on the Pacific Coast.

Complete details regarding the new ilding and its location will be announced later.

NEWELL TO MAKE 40 DUPLICATES OF SHOW CAR

The special Larchmont model of the Paige, which was designed by L. E. Newell, as a special show car for their display at the automobile show, was sold to Milton B. Strauss, president of the Strauss Motor Car Co., one of the local Ford distributors.

The original idea was to only put out one of these special cars, but due to the interest manifested at the show, Mr. Newell last week announced that he had made arrangement for the special equipment for 40 cars, which will be offered as soon as deliveries can be secured.

The car, which lists at $3800 delivered, is equipped with nickel-plated disc wheels, an extra one being hung midship on both sides. The regulation fenders and footboards are replaced by cycle fenders, front and rear, with a Rolls-Royce type aluminum steps. Other special equipment include special nickel-plated lamps and spot lights, auxiliary wind shields and a special luggage box in the rear.

NEW BUILDING TO BE ERECTED BY BISHOP

Negotiations are in progress for the construction of a large building adequate to house the various interests headed by Frank Bishop, namely the Briscoe Motor Sales Co. and the Bishop Truck and Tractor Co.

The former occupies the two buildings at 2925-27 Locust street, and 3031 Olive street, and the truck department has quarters at 2814 Locust street. It has been found necessary either to lease another building or to erect one suitable for the concentration of the entire business under one roof.

This move will be the fourth in four years. The business was originally opened in 1913, when the Briscoe franchise was secured, with a small building on Washington avenue. The next year the company moved to larger quarters at 4160 Olive street. This was followed in 1917 by leasing the show room at 3141 Locust, and last year a new building was constructed for Mr. Bishop at 2925 Locust. This soon proved inadequate, with the result that other leases were taken to provide additional floor space.

Mr. Bishop is one of the pioneers in the automobile field in St. Louis, having first entered in the automobile accessory field in 1905, and has been actively connected with the industry since that time. At the present time he controls the distribution of the Briscoe and Liberty passenger cars, and the Stewart and Briscoe commercial cars, with a dealer organization of 72, which covers Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri.

The St. Louis Tire Dealers' Association held a meeting at the Elks Club last week to discuss closer harmony among tire dealers.

HOLD USED CAR SHOW MARCH 8--13

Dealers' Offerings to Be Concentrated for Convenience of the Public.

Approximately 300 carefully inspected and certified used cars—cars that have been traded in by dealers on new car sales—will be exhibited at the Used Car show at the Southern Hotel Building all next week. The Used Car Sales Show will open to the public at 11 a. m. Monday, March 8, to remain open afternoon and evening, until Saturday night, March 13.

Up to Saturday 26 dealers in automobiles had signified their intention to exhibit used cars at the show. Each of these dealers is a member of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, and that association is responsible for the show as well as for the certification of the cars exhibited.

Every car, before it is permitted in the show, will be carefully inspected by the association's mechanical expert, W. L. Patterson. Patterson will start the engine, run the car a block, inspect the tires, the top, the wheels and the differentials and other gears. If found satisfactory the car will then have attached to it a tag, sealed on with a lead seal, certifying that it has been inspected and passed for the show.

The dealers who are to exhibit promise that they will display a great number of cars that are in prime condition. In most instances these cars of late models have been traded in on new cars of the current year, so that there will be shown many automobiles of a year old or less. This arises from the fact that money has been so plentiful that many car owners have traded in their 1919 or 1918 cars on the current year's model, although the older car was in perfect condition.

The committee in charge of the show is George Weber, chairman; James E. Newell, J. D. Perry, Lewis and P. H. Brockman. Robert E. Lee is manager of the show.

WINTON LATEST CLOSED MODEL IS RECEIVED

The Winton sedan which the Von Arx Automobile Co. had hoped to display at the Automobile Show will reach St. Louis Monday, having been delayed in transit.

The model is officially termed the "Limo-Sedan," and is a combination of the sedan and limousine type. The driver's compartment can be completely shut off as in a limousine by the raising of a plate glass partition which is controlled from the rear compartment. The upholstering in both the driving and rear compartments is identical, so that with the glass partition lowered the car resembles a standard sedan.

This new type body is on the smaller six chassis which has 132-inch wheel base. The coupe, which left the factory in a different shipment, reached St. Louis in time to be exhibited at the show.

STANDARD AUTOMOTIVE HOME READY APRIL 1

It was announced last week by the contractors that the new building of the Standard Automotive Corporation, being erected at 2936 Locust street, would be ready for occupancy on April 1.

At the present time the company has temporary quarters at 2824 Locust street. The new building will have a 50-foot frontage and 140-foot depth, 40 feet of which will be utilized for display purposes, leaving ample room in the rear for a service department.

The showroom will be finished in a light cream color and special lighting fixtures will be installed.

The Standard Eight, which is represented by the company, is one of the newcomers into the St. Louis field and many saw the car for the first time at the Automobile Show, where it attracted much attention.

12 MONTHS SERVICE PLAN FOR TEMPLAR

A special service policy has been adopted by the Mid-States Motors Co. in connection with the marketing of Templar cars in St. Louis. Each purchaser signs an agreement to turn the car over to their service department for one full day each month for a year.

The car is thoroughly inspected, minor adjustments being made at no charge. H. D. Levinson, in explaining his idea of the new service plan, said it was their desire to do the owners' "amateur work" for the first year.

The same policy has been adopted by three other Templar distributers, with the result that in Denver, with 82 cars on the street, only $10.20 worth of parts was sold in the eight months since the plan was inaugurated.

THE CLEVELAND ADOPTS MAGNETO IGNITION

When the Cleveland motor car was first announced it was offered with optional ignition—either Bosch magneto or battery. To date, out of the 4000 automobiles delivered, 3700 of them were equipped, on order, with magneto ignition.

The result, according to Le Roy V. Jones, manager of the Cleveland-Lewis Automobile Co., is that in the future all cars will be equipped with the Bosch high tension magneto unless battery ignition is specially requested.

DE LUXE AUTO CO. BUYS WASHINGTON AV. SITE

The first automobile distributor to take advantage of the widening and removing of the car tracks from Washington avenue is the De Luxe Automobile Co.

Phillip H. Brockman, president, announced last week that he had purchased 100 feet frontage at 3033-39 Washington, and would erect a four-story building, with the foundation capable of carrying two additional stories. The consideration was $25,000.

At present the De Luxe company occupies three buildings, their showroom being located at 3118 Locust, the Used-Car Department 3101-05 Olive street, and the Service Station at 3807-19 Laclede avenue, the total floor area exceeding 60,000 square feet.

Plans and specifications for the building are now being prepared by the architect, but it is uncertain when construction will start. The difficulty in securing building material, and the high cost of construction may postpone the building for a short time.

NEW BOSCH MAGNETO BEING SHOWN HERE

The Holthaus Saddlery and Supply Co. has on display the B-4 high-tension Bosch magneto, just supplied by the factory.

This magneto is especially adapted for use on tractors, trucks, heavy duty gas engines and automobiles, and can also be supplied with the impulse starter coupling when no battery system has been provided for starting.

In this new outfit the distributer plate, distributer gear, conducting bar, etc., have been eliminated, and the current is taken direct from the slip-ring to a distributer, which resembles that of the battery system.

It is practically waterproof and can be exposed to dust, dirt and mud without affecting its operation. The same kind of armature, condenser, slip-ring and interrupter are used as are in the old D. U. and Z. R. types of magnetos, making them a self-contained ignition system.

OVERLAND FACTORY TO MAKE 180,000 CARS

Factory Official Says Immediate Delivery Will Be Impossible After Spring Opens.

Production of the model four Overland will reach 150,000 before January 1st. This was the prediction of F. K. Dolbeer, treasurer of the Willys-Overland factory, who was in conference last week in St. Louis with H. R. Henry, salesmanager of the local sales organization.

Production of the new Willys-Knight will not exceed 30,000, and it will be from 30 to 60 days until the factory will get under full production on this entirely new model.

The full import of these figures was pointed out by Mr. Dolbeer by comparing them with the maximum production ever attained at the Overland factory of 140,000 cars of all models.

The calling off of the strike by union officials removed the last obstacle to big production. This action by the union men had been expected for some time, inasmuch as practically all of the employes had previously returned to work.

Special attention is being given to the production of closed models of the Overland four with the result that at the present time it is almost equal to the demand, and immediate deliveries are possible. Mr. Dolbeer was very emphatic in explaining that this condition would exist but for a short time prior to the heavy spring buying, and predicted that before many months have elapsed a most critical shortage both of open and closed cars will exist, not only in St. Louis, but throughout most sections of the country. In this connection, he pointed out the increasing tendency of the public in favor of the smaller cars, and especially the lightweight, economical, closed models.

As treasurer of the factory Mr. Dolbeer was instrumental in working out the time payment plan which has been adopted by the local Overland distributors, and was gratified at the large number of people in St. Louis territory who have taken advantage of this opportunity to "pay while you ride."

Charles W. Flick, special representative for the Lehigh Tire & Rubber Co., New Castle, Penn., is at the Statler Hotel, negotiating for a distributor throughout the St. Louis territory.

GARDNER TAKES OVER HIS FORMER FACTORY

Chevrolet Vacates Rutger Street Plant as Its New Factory Nears Completion.

Installation of the Gardner Motor Co. in its permanent and capacious home at Main and Rutger streets was completed the past week, and its production and other activities will begin in those quarters tomorrow morning.

Occupancy of this plant has been somewhat delayed by reason of its use for nearly two years by the Chevrolet Motor Co., a property of the General Motors Co., which necessarily required some time to complete removal to the mammoth plant of the latter in the new industrial district on North Union boulevard. The removals of the two concerns were in a measure dovetailed and carried to a finish last week.

In addition to transferring its construction department to the General Motors plant, the Chevrolet Company leased the building at 4300 Forest Park boulevard, vacated by the Gardner Company, for use as a parts and service station.

In returning to the plant at Main and Rutger streets the Gardner Company is but getting back into the home place where it not only established itself as the manufacturer of the famous Banner buggy, but went far toward putting St. Louis in prominent rank as an industrial center.

150 Gardners a Day.

The output of the car during the ensuing month is not expected to average more than 25 a day, as the force of skilled help cannot be commanded at a moment's notice. In April the production will, it is stated by F. W. Gardner, vice president for production, be doubled, and May is expected to bring an output of about 100 cars a day, from which volume the increase to capacity of the plant, about 150 daily, will steadily take place. The inflow of supplies as desired is believed to be assured.

The plant has floor space of about 1,000,000 square feet, and is equipped with the highest type of machinery for economical production and handling, the company having expended $500,000 in making it as nearly perfect as practicable. There are river and rail shipping facilities at its doors.

Up to this time the Gardner Company has been unable to do more than get out cars for display purposes, and fill some of the more insistent orders in the St. Louis territory. Henceforward it will take care of the trade on a rapidly expanding scale until, before the end of the year, it expects to be supplying the domestic demand with fair promptness and invading the foreign fields, from all of which applications for distributing rights have been received.

LARGER PLANT FOR THE INDIANA TRUCK

The Indiana Truck Corporation, manufacturer of Indiana trucks at Marion, Ind., has added four more acres to its factory property on which it has built another large building to provide for its rapid growth.

This building provides proper facilities for housing its machine shops. This additional capacity for machine shop equipment was made necessary by the Indianas' recent acquisition of certain Reutenber Motors which the Indiana now builds as its own.

The new building is 60x400 feet without a single pillar or post in it, walls are practically all glass inserted in steel sash, making this a daylight plant.

The Indiana-St. Louis Truck Co., 1547 North Ninth street, corner Mullanphy street, this city, are distributors of Indiana trucks in this territory.

TRAFFIC FACTORY TO WORK NIGHT SHIFT

In order to answer the call for more production and to fill the demand of dealers for more Traffic Trucks, the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation has inaugurated a night shift of nine hours to go into effect immediately in the various departments.

This policy is in line with the efforts at ever-increasing production which have been in vogue since the Traffic's convention last December, when $22,000,000 worth of Traffic Trucks were sold in 23 minutes. Besides the night shift the Traffic company is increasing the production for the coming year by the addition of new factory units. Property has been obtained adjacent to the present plant at 5200 North Second street and the erection of new buildings is now in progress.

More Capital for Lock Co.

From an initial capitalization of $50,000, with which the industry was launched less than three months ago, the Liberty Auto Lock Co. of St. Louis has increased the amount to $150,000, the expansion being based upon demand for the lock that seemingly blocks the game of the most astute and boldest automobile thief. Much of this capital is being put into equipment of the plant at 2016-18 Market street, where something like 200 of the locks are being manufactured daily and which it is planned to quadruple within two weeks.

The Liberty lock has three points upon which A. W. Saegesser, patentee and general manager of the company, hangs the claim of greatest security for the car upon which it is used. These are its grip on the spoke, its construction from 18 to 21-point electric steel, which cannot be readily broken by hammering or sawing, and its six teeth. A claimed advantage, also, is the fact that it can be installed without the use of a key.

Glycerine in the Radiator.

"It has been found that glycerine keeps the radiator clean," says John D. Mansfield, general sales manager of the Dort Motor Car Co. "Glycerine in the radiator has a tendency to keep down scale. It has long been used in steam boiler operations for just this purpose. In winter driving it can be used for the double purpose of an anti-freeze solution."

An Invention That Benefits Your Eyes and Protects Your Pocketbook

For years opticians have sought some method by which the excessive breakage of rimless glasses and spectacles might be reduced, as rimless glasses are recognized as better for the eyes and more becoming to the average person than any other style of lens.

Recently a remarkable discovery has been made by a noted optometrist, by virtue of which the breakage of rimless glasses due to twisting and bending of frames or tightening of screws is virtually abolished. To this new invention has been given the trade-marked name of

"Kant-break" Rimless Glasses

(PATENT APPLIED FOR)

With Kant-Break Rimless Glasses you not only have the advantage of more becoming and more comfortable glasses, but you enjoy the economical benefit of saving each year many times the original cost of your glasses by not having to replace shattered lenses.

No matter where you have secured your present glasses, I can duplicate them exactly in Kant-Break Rimless Glasses, without referring to your original prescription, and at the same price as ordinary lenses.

AMERICA IS WORLD'S MOTOR CAR FACTORY

Nine-tenths of all the automobiles in the world have been built in the United States. This country exported $63,000,000 worth of passenger cars and motor trucks in 1918, despite the greatly curtailed production. Of these 41 went to Iceland and the Faroe Islands.

In the first nine months of 1919 motor car and truck exports exceeded $75,000,000, at which rate the year's exportation is expected to have reached more than $100,000,000, or an increase of nearly 60 per cent over 1918.

The authority for these interesting facts is J. Walker Drake, chairman of the foreign trade committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

A New Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?

"Tonnage Rating" Discarded for Packard Trucks

Packard is announcing a new method of rating—probably fairer to the truck; and certainly more advantageous to the purchaser. A Packard Truck is selected and sold to fit its individual work, with all the working conditions in mind.

> Every man who ever sawed a board knows it takes more muscle to get through a knot than through the clear.
> Three tons of merchandise on a wagon is a one-horse load on a good level macadam road. On gravel it is a two-horse load. On dirt it takes five horses to pull it. In mud it takes ten.
> Your locomotive rated to haul fourteen Pullmans in Chicago will deliver the same power to the drawbar in Spokane. But the mountain grades cut the actual hauling power in half.
> Why should the motor truck which can haul three tons of coal over the hills of Pittsburgh be limited to the same "ton rating" in level Chicago?

IN every line of business there grow up certain practices—"customs of the trade."

Manufacturers' "tonnage rating" for motor trucks is one of them.

Fifteen years ago a truck was rated on its capacity to haul its load and stand the racket of the average bumpy road of that day; taking the ruts, holes and hills as they came. Good roads now branch out in every direction.

Tonnage rating, as commonly understood, has come to mean simply the capacity of a truck to handle its rated load under averaged conditions.

There are three factors always to be considered in assigning a truck to its work—Power needed to haul the load—Stamina needed to stand up under the load—Working conditions.

"Ton rating" puts emphasis on the first—hopes for luck on the second—and ignores the third completely.

Packard Transportation Engineering today assigns a truck to its work with all three factors in plain sight.

Packard rating has always been made to cover the worst working conditions rather than the best—and its reserve power calculated for the exception rather than the rule.

By doing away with the ton rating, the Packard Company believes that it can guarantee the purchaser a still higher percentage of the high reserve built into the Packard Truck.

Hereafter each Packard Truck will be designated by Size and Model. Each truck will bear a plate stamped with the name of the purchaser and the duty for which the truck is sold.

The rating will be made on the ground, for the job, by the local Packard engineer. The Packard warranty will be in force, protecting the user as in the past.

However convenient for selling purposes the "tonnage rating" classification may be for trucks which are bought "over the counter"—it certainly is obsolete for Packard.

Packard is selling transportation.

The Transportation Expert at your local Packard Branch or dealer will recommend you a truck for what it will do in your individual business and with all your actual conditions known as the result of careful study.

PACKARD MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Detroit

PACKARD MOTOR CAR CO., of Missouri
Locust and 22nd Streets

CHANGES FIRM NAME.

Due to the development of the accessory and tire cushion department of the Panama Rubber and Equipment Co., a new name now appears at 1419-21 Locust street.

Alastic Tire Cushion Co. is the new corporate name of the department, the change is to better handle the increasing business for Alastic tire cushions, which they manufacture and distribute. This is only a new trade name for a resilient composition air substitute which is molded to completely fill automobile tires, elimiting punctures and blowouts, yet having the necessary easy riding qualities.

G. G. Giese, president of the new corporation, also secretary of the Panama Rubber and Equipment Co., well known in the accessory trade, will give his entire time to the development and affairs of the new company.

DE LUXE SHOW SALES NEAR CENTURY MARK

The total amount of sales resulting from the automobile show has been subjected to much speculation along motor car row. It is unanimously agreed that the sales this year far exceed those of any other automobile show, but few have given the specified figures.

P. H. Brockmann of the De Luxe Automobile Co. has posted at his show room a list composed of all wholesale and retail sales made either at the show or consummated last week. There are 42 names on the retail list, 24 buying open cars, 12 enclosed cars and six firms having purchased Oldsmobile trucks. The wholesale department reports 52 sales, 21 of which were trucks.

If one firm made sales of 94 cars of one make—and there were 77 different makes of automobiles represented at the Southern Hotel during the show—one can get a fair idea of the vast volume of business which resulted.

PACKARD ABOLISH TONNAGE RATING

Maximum Load to Be Decided After Working Conditions Are Investigated.

One of the most revolutionary changes to be made since the inception of the commercial car industry was announced recently by the Packard Motor Car Co. in their new policy of disregarding the former and established tonnage rating system.

In explaining why they had decided to eliminate this method of designating a certain size truck for a tonnage rating, they point to the fact that trucks working under different conditions are capable of hauling different sized loads. In other words, a truck that must operate over rutty, hilly country roads should not be given the same rating as the one which works on the smooth city pavements.

Packard engineers claim there are three factors to be considered in assigning a certain sized truck to a certain kind of work-power needed to haul the load, the stamina needed to stand up under that load, and the working conditions under which the truck will operate. In order to give adequate consideration to each of these factors, it has been decided to place a tonnage rating on a truck only after it is in the hands of the purchaser and its work decided upon.

In the future Packard trucks will be designated only by size and model. Upon delivery of a truck there will be placed upon it a plate bearing the purchaser's name and the duty for which the truck is sold. In explaining this new plan, C. A. Bothell, manager of the transportation department of the local Packard branch, stated that a rating will be made for each truck after it is on the job. The owner will be advised of the maximum safety load which that particular truck in its particular work can carry.

The overloading abuse of motor trucks is the one great evil which motor truck manufacturers and dealers have been endeavoring to eliminate since the infancy of the industry. There is always a tendency on the part of the operator to make his truck carry as much as any other truck irrespective of the conditions under which it works.

The result has been that many commercial cars have been relegated to the junk pile years before they should have been, because of the one fact that they did not receive proper care in the matter of loading. It is hoped by Packard officials that the new policy will emphasize to the purchaser the necessity of keeping the load within reasonable restrictions.

CALL CALIFORNIA ROAD THE "STUDEBAKER" PIKE

Another stage—another Studebaker. A fleet of stages—and still the Studebaker predominates. No wonder, then, that they have christened a California highway "Studebaker Pike." The scores of Studebaker cars in daily stage service over the San Fernando roads have brought about this popular moniker, and Studebaker Pike it will be to Californians regardless of what they call it in the blue books.

One of these stages, a Studebaker Big Six, traveled 21,000 miles, loaded to capacity, before even the carbon was removed from the motor. And that was the only expense charged to the car outside of gasoline, oil and tires.

Don't Change Oils for Winter, Change for All Time

When you have changed to Streett's Ideal Motor Oil—of the consistency recommended for your engine—you need never change again, Winter or Summer!

Even the heaviest of Streett's Ideal Motor Oils will flow at the lowest temperature we have ever been able to produce.

Don't imagine that you need a lighter oil in Winter, believing that conditions inside your cylinders are different. They are not. Your cylinders get just as hot in Winter as in the warmest August day—often hotter—and the clearance between pistons and cylinder walls remains exactly the same. Therefore oil of the same consistency is required Winter and Summer to properly seal the space.

Streett's IDEAL MOTOR OIL

"Seals and Satisfies"

It proves its superiority at once by the smoother running of your motor, its greater power, the lower operating cost per mile, the freedom from carbon.

PARTS MAKERS URGED TO BETTER DELIVERIES

Guy W. Wilson, president of the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation, and Theodore C. Brandle, vice-president, returned this week from a trip during which they called on the firms supplying parts to the Traffic company.

Because everything possible is being done at the Traffic plant to rush production to meet the enormous demand for Traffic trucks, Wilson and Brandle made this trip to urge firms supplying the Traffic company with parts to speed up their shipments and to increase the number of parts shipped wherever possible.

WORK STARTS ON 1920 500-MILE AUTO RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 20.—Entry blanks have been mailed for the seventh International 500-mile Sweepstakes race on the famous Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Monday, May 31st, 1920. More than 200 automobile manufacturers and private racing enthusiasts in the United States and Europe were invited to compete, including the champions of England, France and Italy, all of whom are expected to send teams into the fray.

The 1920 race will be the first to be held under the new Speedway rules limiting competition to cars of 183 cubic inches piston displacement, and accordingly looked forward to with unusual interest, both in the United States and abroad.

Since preliminary conditions for the race were announced some time ago, modifications have been made lowering the weight limit for eligible cars from 1700 to 1650 pounds, and making right-hand drive optional instead of compulsory, left-hand steering being permitted also.

The weight reduction was put into effect in order to make the Indianapolis racing rules conform with those for the Grand Prix de France, scheduled for Le Mans next fall, while the left-hand drive was admitted out of deference to American manufacturers who favored it for their cars.

Prize money will be as in former years, with a total of $50,000 divided among the first 10 to finish, of which the lion's share, or $20,000, goes to the winner.

In addition there are a number of tire and accessory manufacturers who are expected to add substantial bonuses to the Speedway prize money, payment being conditional upon the winner's using the manufacturer's equipment, so that the successful bidder for first honors may be reasonably certain of raking in not less than $25,000 or perhaps $30,000 in all.

Side Dump Bodies.

For certain classes of freight and under certain conditions operators will do well to investigate the possibilities of side dump bodies. For crushed stone, sand and contractors' supplies of various kinds these bodies are invaluable. For use where the dumping space is narrow naturally they are advantageous. The latest side dump bodies offered now rest in balance, so that after they are unlocked a light push is enough to dump them.

Owners' Approval Is Like a Rousing Cheer

The Cleveland Six, from coast to coast, is establishing its place in motordom. The bitter cold days of the Northern winter have proved its ease of starting, just as the hot summer days, when hundreds of new Clevelands were being driven across the country, proved the perfection of its radiation.

The Cleveland Six is in the hands of owners all over the United States today, and the chorus of satisfactory approval from these owners is like a rousing cheer. They say the car surprises them, pleases them, delights them. Its pliant power, its simple ease of handling, its boat-like comfort, surpass all expectations. If you hope and plan to start the new season with a new five-passenger touring car which is a real six, or such a car of roadster type with wide, deep seat of restful cushioning and plenty of stow-away space, then come in and see the Cleveland Six.

A study of this car will interest you. A ride in it will convince you.

Factory Enlarged—Production Doubled to Meet Increasing Popularity of Cole Aero-EIGHT

DURING 1919 only a fraction of the demand for Cole Aero-EIGHTS could be supplied, despite the fact that it was the largest production year which the Cole Motor Car Company had ever had. With the expansion of the factory to twice its former size, this production of Aero-EIGHTS will be more than doubled in 1920.

Though this will enable many motorists to own Cole Aero-EIGHTS who never before have been able to enjoy that privilege, several thousand unfilled orders carried over from 1919, must be accorded preferential deliveries during the early months of the present year.

Hence, all who now contemplate the purchase of Cole Aero-EIGHTS are urged to place their orders without delay, indicating the date of delivery desired, so that equitable distribution of the product may be made and prompt deliveries assured.

AUTO INDUSTRY TO CELEBRATE ITS 22D ANNIVERSARY

Many Early Day Makes Now Leaders—First American Car Was Sold April 1, 1898.

Next April will celebrate the twenty-second anniversary of the first sale of a motor vehicle in the United States, because it was in April, 1893, that an American manufacturer made the sale to an individual, which was the forerunner of the sale of 1,800,000 motor vehicles during the past year. The development of this wonderful industry has occurred within the recollection of the present generation and is manifestation of the indomitable perseverance and real progressiveness of the American people, according to Charles Clifton, president National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

"The automobile, which was conceived in Europe, has found its greatest development in the United States," said Mr. Clifton. "Many of the American pioneers are still living and reaping the benefits of their early sacrifices. Charles E. Duryea, Elwood Haynes, the Apperson Brothers, R. E. Olds, Alexander Winton and Henry Ford are today national personages. Their genius has brought to millions of their countrymen undreamed of pleasures and prosperity.

"Fifty years ago the automobile was the experiment of a few intrepid inventors. It was classed by the public with the inventions of Jules Verne, wonderful but impractical. Not even in their wildest fancies did the early inventors conceive that their inventions would grow to be the third greatest manufacturing industry in the country.

Predates Locomotive.

"Surprising as it may seem, the automobile is the progenitor of the locomotive. The first automobile was built and tried 50 years before the first railroad track was laid.

"Capt. Nicholas Joseph Cugnot is accredited with having constructed in 1769 the first motor-propelled road vehicle that actually ran. Steam was the activating force. This machine was clumsy, overbalanced and difficult to steer. It was partly wrecked on one of its trips and never rebuilt. It was placed in the Conservatory of Arts and Trades in Paris, where today it is still an object of much interest.

"In 1787 Oliver Evans of Philadelphia built the first American automobile under a patent granted by the State of Maryland. It also was so awkward and heavy that public opinion vetoed its practicability and the inventor was forced to abandon his further experiments. In 1831 Walter Hancock, an Englishman, built a steam car that he called the Infant. This car made regular trips between London and Stratford, and in 1832 the distance was extended to Brighton. This vehicle carried 11 passengers and was run at an average speed of nine miles an hour.

The Gasoline Era.

On May 8, 1879, George Baldwin Selden of Rochester, N. Y., filed an application for a patent covering the use of the gasoline motor as a propelling force of a road vehicle and upon the vehicle as a whole. It was not until 1893 that the automobile practically as it is known today was launched. Panhard & Levassor in this year manufactured 350 motors, nearly all of which were sold.

"The first road race run in 1894 was known as the Paris-Rouen race over a course of 80 miles. It had an entry list of 46 cars, of which 12 were steamers. The first prize, $1000, was awarded to Panhard & Levassor and Peugeot, whose entries were equipped with 3½-horsepower motors. The Times-Herald road race from Chicago to Waukegon, Ill., and return, on Thanksgiving day, 1895, was the first American road race. Only two cars were entered in this contest.

First U. S. Builders.

"In America Charles E. Duryea and Elwood Haynes were the first to build gasoline vehicles that would run. The exact date on which these respective American pioneers first ran their cars is not accurately recorded, but it was some time in 1892. To Alexander Winton goes the credit of selling the first American automobile. On April 1, 1898, he sold a one-cylinder Winton automobile to Robert Allison of Port Carbon, Pa. Allison ran the car for two years, and, at Winton's solicitation, sold it back to the Winton company, where it is still in existence, practically as capable of delivering service as it was the day it was shipped to its purchasers.

"All these vehicles were of the 'horseless carriage' type. It was not until 1901 or 1902 that the automobile, based upon the European Panhard & Levassor type, was introduced. The difference between this European model and the 'horseless wagon' was that in the former a central frame to carry the power plant and act as the keystone of the car structure was developed. This idea is basic in modern automobile manufacturing."

2,000,000 TONS OF FREIGHT TO BE SHIPPED ON AIR

"Within the next two years millions of tons of freight will be shipped on air."

This prediction, made by John M. Maguire, president of the Mid-West Rubber Association, is not a reference to airplane transportation of freight, but to the development of the air-filled or pneumatic tire to truck capacity.

"Nothing the tire industry has accomplished in recent years," said Mr. Maguire, "is more important than this development. When a truck is equipped with pneumatic tires both the truck and its load are literally transported on compressed air. And there is nothing better to haul loads on. The truck, the load and the road are saved countless jars and jolts, for air is the best of shock-absorbers. With pneumatic tires the life of the truck is greatly prolonged, roads receive but a minimum amount of wear and loads are carried with greater safety and economy."

98% Metal

A Maxwell is 98% metal, and the very best metal that metallurgists can specify. Pound for pound it equals the metal in any car built.

The Maxwell is made of light-weight but strong metals.

They had to be light because the mission of the Maxwell is economical transportation.

They had to be strong because the Maxwell is built to carry just as heavy a passenger load over the same roads and at the same speed as any car, despite its price or size.

Any engineer will tell you that in getting that rare combination of strength with lightness high prices must be paid for the metals.

Their use, however, repays the makers of the Maxwell in many ways because each car each day is winning friends.

Today these friendships, expressed in terms of cars, are well on the road to 400,000.

You cannot go back of these numbers any more than you can go back of the fact that the sun rises in the morning.

They tell the story; and it's largely a story of what the Maxwell is made of—fine metals.

290 KILLED WHEN BRITISH QUELLED INDIAN UPRISING

Troops Under Gen. Dyer Fired 1650 Rounds Into Crowds Without Warning or Order to Disperse.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—An official report regarding the seditious riots last April in Amritsar, Lahore and other districts in the Punjab, British India, has just been issued here by the India Office. The disturbances at Amritsar were put down by Brigadier-General R. E. Dyer, the British officer in command, with an iron hand, 290 persons being killed by rifle fire.

It is stated in the report that the shooting followed murderous attacks on Europeans and that Gen. Dyer had not ordered the crowd, which had gathered in a public meeting place in Armitsar, to disperse, but that 1650 rounds were fired upon the thickest parts of the throng. It states that after natives had nearly beaten to death an English woman doctor, the general officer commanding the British troops in Amritsar ordered that the street be closed where this attack occurred and that persons who passed through it had to do so on their hands and knees.

News of these occurrences did not reach this country until the end of the year, and then created a big sensation and not a little controversy, which has not yet died down. The report now given out comes from the Punjab Government.

Authority to Stop Meetings.

After describing the growth of anti-British feeling at Amritsar, culminating in murderous attacks on Europeans, the report tells how Gen. Dyer was at length given authority to take whatever steps were necessary to re-establish civil control. This was on April 13. Gen. Dyer accordingly considered it his duty to disperse prohibited unlawful meetings, such as had been held by the natives for some time in the Jappewalian Bagh, an open space, regularly used for public meetings, with houses on all four sides and three or four passages leading into it. The report continues in substance:

"Gen. Dyer was not able immediately to provide for the purpose a larger force than 50 Indian troops, together with 40 Gurkhas armed only with kukris or knives. Accompanied by the European Superintendent of Police, he took these to the Jappewalian Bagh. He had with him two armored cars in reserve, but the lane through which he entered was too narrow to admit them and they were left in the street outside. He took no machine guns with him.

When he arrived, at about 5 o'clock, he found that the crowd had swollen to several thousands, and it was being addressed by a speaker on a raised platform. His troops deployed on either side of the entrance, the ground on which they stood being some feet higher than the general level of the inclosure. He did not order the crowd to disperse, but proceeded to take action to disperse it at once by fire. There were 1650 rounds fired, fire being directed on crowds, not on individuals, and redirected from time to time where the crowds were thickest. The ammunition used was the ordinary .303 army cartridge. On the conclusion of the firing the troops retired; the number of casualties were not counted.

290 Persons Killed.

A subsequent inquiry indicated that about 290 persons were killed. It was asserted that these included many small children, but inquiries have only been able to establish the death of one boy under 10 and four under 15 years.

Martial law was proclaimed at Amritsar on April 15 and its administration seems to have provoked a series of complaints, against which the Punjab Government has found it necessary to defend itself.

The first charge is that relating to the Kucha Tawarian, a street in which Miss Sherwood, an English woman doctor, was nearly beaten to death by infuriated natives. The general officer commanding the British troops in Amritsar closed the street to public traffic, placing a picket at each end, and ordered that anyone passing it would have to do so on his hands and knees.

It was clearly understood by everyone that it did not apply to women. The order was actually in force between April 19 and 24, and in all about 50 persons complied with the directions to go through on all fours. The Sergeant in charge of the picket subsequently stated that one man crawled through three times and had to be stopped from giving further exhibitions.

A number of triangles (for flogging) were erected in the city and 26 men sentenced by the summary courts to be flogged. The only floggings that could be considered to be in any way of a public nature were of six men who were flogged in the street in which Miss Sherwood was assaulted. These men were implicated in the attack on Miss Sherwood. Others were whipped at area headquarters, at the police station or in private.

The major charges arising out of the disorder were tried by the Martial Law Commissions, 62 cases in all being put before them, involving 298 accused. Of these 218 were convicted. Fifty-one were sentenced to death, 46 to imprisonment for life, two to imprisonment for 10 years, 79 for seven years, 10 for five years, 13 for three years and 11 for lesser periods. In six cases whipping was inflicted.

FARM AND FACTORY MUST GROW IN STEP, DECLARES HOOVER

Interrelation of General Industry and Food Production and Distribution Discussed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Herbert Hoover, former American Food Commissioner, spoke here today before the Western Society of Engineers. The text in full of his address follows:

"I believe that I appear before an assembly of engineers in two aspects: First, as a fellow engineer of some experience in industry; and, second, in the aspect of a citizen of some experience in food problems. I propose, on this occasion, to discuss the inter-relationship of general industry and food production and distribution, particularly as to the necessity of a fair balance between general industry and agriculture, and the need to maintain this balance by securing to the farmer more economy in the distribution of his products.

"There are not only engineering problems involved in this relationship, but there are great social and political issues of the first importance.

"In order to avoid repetition of long phrases, I propose to use the term 'agriculture' as referring to the agriculture industry, and to use the term 'industry' as limited to the production and manufacture of non-food materials.

"The outstanding feature of civilization during the last century has been the increasing growth of industry as distinguished from agriculture. Many states have stimulated this side of national life until they have built up their populations far beyond the capacity of their land. We have the most profound instances of this in England and Germany. In these states the population is today dependent upon the import, mostly from overseas, of from 30 to 70 per cent of different food commodities through the exchange of industrial products.

"The very life of their people is thus dependent upon maintaining open the free access to overseas markets. From this necessity has grown the great naval armaments of the world, and the burden that they imply on all sections of their population. Such nations, of necessity, have engaged in fierce competition for markets for their industrial products. They have thus built up the background of world conflicts. The titanic struggles that result have endangered the very lives of their people from starvation. Their war tactics have in large degree been directed to strangle food supplies.

Congested Populations.

"One other result of this development has been the terrible congestion of populations in manufacturing areas. All such congested populations are periodically subjected to low standards of living, of housing and of other conditions of life, which make for physical and moral degeneration. At times of industrial prosperity, the standard of living increases in these manufacturing areas, but in times of industrial depression they only maintain themselves by the practical sweating of the workers.

"Beyond this there is another jealousy which has received too little attention. In times of industrial depression, whether brought about by war or by the ebb and flow of world prosperity, these populations, oppressed with misery, turn to political remedies for matters that are beyond human control. They naturally resent the lowering of their standards of living and they inevitably resort to industrial strife, to strikes and disorder.

"Their productivity, upon which

HUGHES TO OPPOSE RHODE ISLAND SUIT

Will Ask Permission to File Brief as Amicus Curiae in Test Dry Case.

By the Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 28.—Charles E. Hughes intends Monday to file a motion in the United States Supreme Court requesting permission to file a brief as an amicus curiae on behalf of states named by Gov. Milliken of Maine, as desirous of appearing in opposition to Rhode Island in that State's action to have the national prohibition law declared unconstitutional.

Attorney-General Rice of Rhode Island, when asked today by Judge Hughes to permit the filing of the brief by consent, declined on the ground that, so far as he had been advised, no action had been taken on behalf of the states named by Gov. Milliken to be made parties in the case now being pressed by Rhode Island.

Rice said he could find no legal authorization in the statement of his motion by Judge Hughes to act in behalf of any of the states named in conjunction with the request of the only legally authorized officials of these states to present such a motion, their attorneys-generals, nor did there appear any authorization from the legislatures of these states that any such action had been authorized or ordered by them. Rice stated to Judge Hughes that he preferred to have the court itself pass upon his legal standing as representing the various states named in this proceeding.

State Statutes to Be Ignored in Dry Enforcement, Says Roper.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—All persons found violating the Federal prohibition enforcement act will be proceeded against to the "limit of the law," irrespective of any state statutes legalizing the sale of liquor, it was announced today by Commissioner Roper of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Roper's ruling resulted from the bill now pending before the New Jersey Legislature legalizing the sale and manufacture of beer containing 3½ per cent of alcohol.

"The Bureau of Internal Revenue is charged with the enforcement of the national prohibition act," he said. "It definitely prohibits the manufacture and sale for beverage purposes of all liquors containing one-half per cent or more of alcohol by volume. This being the case, the manufacture and sale of 3½ per cent beer, which is permitted by the bill in the New Jersey Legislature, is in direct violation of the Federal statute. All persons, therefore, who are found guilty of this violation of the Federal statute will be proceeded against to the limit of the law."

Tomorrow Is Last Day for State Income Tax Return.

Under the law, tomorrow is the last day for making income tax return to the State. However, announcement of an extension of the time limit for filing in St. Louis is expected to be made during the day.

BUSCH TELLS OF SEIZURE OF HIS TRUNKS IN DALLAS

Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officers Broke Into Them Without Notice to Him, He Says.

KEYS AVAILABLE, BUT LOCKS WERE FILED

He Did Not Know What Had Become of Property for 24 Hours—Will File Complaint in Washington.

Adolphus Busch III yesterday gave out a statement as to the seizure and opening of two trunks, belonging to himself and Mrs. Busch, by Federal prohibition enforcement officers in Dallas, Tex., a few days ago. He and Mrs. Busch arrived in St. Louis yesterday morning. Busch's statement was:

"Mrs. Busch and I arrived at Dallas on the 19th of the month, on the morning train. We were assigned to our rooms and Mrs. Busch's trunk was delivered. Two or three times during the day I inquired for the two missing trunks, one belonging to Mrs. Busch and the other to myself.

"About 10:30 the next morning (the 20th) the manager of the hotel came to my room and stated that the two missing trunks had been seized and were held by Federal officers.

"I immediately gave him my keys and told him to give them to the Federal officers and request them to make their search as quickly as possible, because I needed a change of clothes for an important meeting to be held that afternoon at 1 o'clock; and I also requested that I be permitted to be present while the search was made.

Locks Broken Open.

"About 11:30 the manager again reported to me that the locks had been broken open and the contents of the trunks examined by the Federal officers.

"I then requested that the trunks be sent to my room as quickly as possible so that I might secure some needed wearing apparel.

"He notified me that unfortunately they had been deposited in a safe deposit vault with a time lock which would not open until 1 o'clock.

"At about 2 o'clock the trunks were returned. The fastening of the locks to the trunks had been filed, the trunks opened, and the contents examined. No one representing me was present during this examination; no warrants were served upon me; no notice given of the seizure, and, in fact, we did not know what became of the trunks for a period of over 24 hours.

"Finally, when the trunks were returned to the manager of the hotel the Federal officials demanded a receipt for not only the trunks but for the contents of the trunks. This the manager refused to give. An argument ensued and he was told the trunks would not be delivered without such receipt. He finally compromised the matter by signing for the trunks, but refused to sign for the contents.

"The trunks did not contain liquor of any kind.

Matter in Attorneys' Hands.

"I have instructed my attorneys to make complaint of this seizure and to take such legal steps as they can to prevent such action in the future.

"Every traveler abroad is familiar with the opening of trunks for inspection, in both leaving this country and entering it, for the purpose of detecting dutiable articles, but in every and all cases the trunks are opened only in the presence of the owners, and even where trunks are put in bond for delivery they are not inspected or opened excepting in the presence of the owner or his agent; and in every case the owner is given ample opportunity to use his keys and open the baggage.

"It is my intention to pursue this matter to the full limit, so thta others may not suffer a like indignity and positive harm.

"The whole proceeding, to my mind, was un-American, and I do not think it will be countenanced by

RATIFICATION FAR AWAY, ALL SENATE FACTIONS AGREE

Day of Bitter Debate Marked by Clash Between Hitchcock and Kellogg, Republican Mild Reservationist.

NEBRASKAN DENIES ALLIANCE WITH BORAH

Administration Leader Accuses Minnesota Senator of Packing Commitee and Being Against Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Another day of oratory and maneuvering in the Senate ended tonight with virtually all elements in the treaty fight agreeing that ratification seemed far away.

Getting down to rock bottom in their calculations, the leaders are understood to have agreed that, unless some unexpected circumstance alters the Senate alignment, enough votes cannot be brought together to either modify the Republican Article 10 reservation or obtain ratification of the treaty without such a modification.

In this situation a disposition became apparent among the treaty's friends and foes alike to bring the Senate debate to an end and let the issue go undecided into the political campaign. By unanimous consent it was agreed to vote Monday on the reservation which has been pending for two days, and in some quarters it was predicted that a final vote on the treaty itself would be reached before the end of next week.

Twenty With President on Article 10.

At least 20 Democrats apparently were determined to stand steadfastly with President Wilson in opposing ratification unless a change could be made in the Article 10 reservation which the President has said would cut the heart out of the treaty. In administration quarters it was predicted that the number would be well in excess of 20, but the latter figure was accepted generally as a minimum.

In addition there are at least 14 Republicans and Democrats banded together in the irreconcilable camp against ratification in any form, and it would take a total of only 33 votes to defeat any ratification resolution.

The determination of the administration Democrats to fight to the last ditch for their position became more marked during the day's conferences, and in some quarters it was intimated thaat they had heard again from the White House regarding Article 10. The party leader, Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, said no new communication on the subject had come through him, but added that he had no reason to believe the President had changed his mind.

Borah and Hitchcock Confer.

As one result of the situation the administration forces and the irreconcilables, who have been arch-enemies throughout the long treaty controversy, have been thrown together in interest and through their leaders are understood to have agreed to keep in close touch during next week's maneuvering. They did so today, Senator Hitchcock and Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, a leader among the irreconcilable group, holding frequent consultations.

In the same way the break between Senator Hitchcock and the mild reservation Republicans, with whom he has worked for many weeks for a compromise, was brought to an open breach during the day's debate. In sharp clashes with Senators Kellogg, Minnesota, and Lenroot, Wisconsin, both of the mild reservation group, the Democratic leader declared that, while they had posed as friends of the treaty, they had worked by "contemptible" means to line up the Republicans for destroying reservations.

Senator Hitchcock also charged that Senator Kellogg had conspired to "help" pack the Foreign Relations Committee with enemies of the treaty, an assertion which drew

ALLIES SELECT 46 MEN TO BE TRIED IN GERMAN COURTS

France Picks 12 and Belgium 15—to Be Test of Good Faith on Which Powers Agreed.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—The war criminals commission has decided to send to Germany the names of 46 men for trial before the German courts. This, it is announced, will be a test of good faith upon which the allies have agreed.

The list, with a covering note of considerable length, has been drawn up and will be submitted to the supreme council. It is expected it will be forwarded to Berlin within the week. The British selected the names of seven accused, mostly for submarine atrocities; France selected 12; Belgium 15, and Italy, Poland and Rumania, four each.

It is probable that the original list will be drastically reduced if the Germans loyally carry out the proposed trials.

NATIONAL CASH REGISTER CO. TO SHARE PROFITS WITH WORKERS

After Deducting 6 Per Cent, 50 Per Cent of Earnings Will Go to Company, 50 to 7000 Employes.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 28.—The National Cash Register Co., employing about 7000 persons in its plant here, today announced a fifty-fifty profit-sharing plan for employes for 1920. Only employes in the Dayton plant will share in the profits.

John H. Patterson, president of the company, announced that the net profit of the company will be determined by outside accountants, and an amount equal to 6 per cent interest on the company's investment deducted.

The remaining profits, the statement said, will be divided into two equal shares, 50 per cent to the company and 50 per cent to be divided among the employes.

Profits to be distributed among the employes will be divided into two parts, half to executives and foremen and half to other employes. In order to participate employes must have been with the company six months when payments are made July 1 and Dec. 31.

PASTOR PUT OUT BY ROOSTER, WHICH SPIKES HIM IN KNEE

Rev. James R. Sager of Hillsboro Laid Up Ten Days by Injury Inflicted by Fowl.

The Rev. James R. Sager, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Hillsboro, Ill., will occupy his pulpit today, following an enforced vacation, during which he recuperated from injuries inflicted by a rooster.

The parsonage premises at Hillsboro contain a well-laid-out chicken yard, and the minister has some blooded stock.

While inspecting the latter his presence in the yard was challenged by the prize rooster, which flew at him. The minister kicked at the rooster, but the rooster had kicked first. It drove a spike into his kneecap. The injury became infected, and for 10 days the pastor was laid up.

DOCTOR GETS LIFE SENTENCE, WOMAN 14 YEARS FOR MURDER

Alverson and Mrs. Clugston Convicted at Macomb, Ill., of Poisoning Her Husband.

By the Associated Press.

MACOMB, Ill., Feb. 28.—Dr. George Alverson and Mrs. Alice Clugston were found guilty today of the murder of the latter's husband, Lawrence Clugston, at Bushnell last July. Dr. Alverson was sentenced to life imprisonment and Mrs. Clugston was sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary.

The State charged the two had caused Clugston's death by the administration of arsenic.

The 15-year-old son of Mrs. Clugston was a witness for the prosecution. He asserted that at one time he had found his mother and Dr. Alverson together, but had not told his father when his mother had threatened to leave home.

PROHIBITION INQUIRY DROPPED

By the Associated Press.

IRON RIVER, Mich., Feb. 28.—J. E. Converse, assistant Attorney-General of Michigan, today announced that he had canceled plans for a public investigation of the Iron County prohibition squabble and would leave for Lansing tonight.

His announcement followed a conference with Georbe R. Cummerow, special agent of the Department of Justice, and Martin S. McDonough, Prosecuting Attorney of Iron County, at which the two investigators, Federal and State, agreed to co-operate.

INJUNCTION SAID TO SHOW REED MEN FIGHTING WOMEN

Principals in Court Action Holding Up Selection of State Delegates Supporters of Senator.

MARCH 8 SET AS DATE FOR HEARING

State Committee Call Held to Give Women Undue Advantage—Neale Insists Call Is Legal.

The granting of a temporary injunction yesterday in the Circuit Court preventing the City Committee from calling Democratic ward meetings in St. Louis to select delegates to the State convention in Joplin, April 22, was accepted by many Democrats as confirmation of a report that supporters of Senator Reed intend to contest in the State convention the right of women to participate in Missouri politics.

Judge Colhoun, acting on a petition presented by A. M. Frumberg and Campbell Cummings, attorneys who have been associated politically with close friends of Senator Reed, enjoined Chairman Lawrence P. Daley and members of the Democratic City Committee from carrying out any of the provisions of the Democratic State Committee's call for a State convention, and set March 8 as the date for a hearing on making the injunction permanent.

The plaintiffs in the action are Dr. Emmet Kane, who has been active in support of the Reed opposition to the league of nations; Walter C. Guels of 4137 Flad avenue, and Joseph P. Funk of 2112 Alice avenue, who served as members of the committee which arranged the testimonial dinner for Senator Reed a month ago, and Dr. J. A. Seabold of 1221 Oakley place.

Factional Advantage Claimed.

Following the argument advanced by Sam Lazarus, who was ousted recently as president of the Democratic League of St. Louis because of his support of Senator Reed, in a letter several days ago, to Chairman Neale of the State Committee, that the State Committee's call was illegal because it gave women an advantage over men in the conventions, the petition alleged that the call was purposely so worded to give an advantage to some Democrats over others.

The basis of the complaint was that, under the call, women were given an equal number of delegates with men from each ward in the State convention, and that in the ward conventions women were permitted to select the women delegates without the men having a voice in their selection, but that the men were not permitted to select the men delegates without the voice of the women.

The effect of this, it was alleged, would be to deprive one class of Democratic voters, the men, from having the same voice in the party councils that another class, the women, had, and conceivably could permit one or two women in each ward to name eight or 10 women delegates.

It had been the intention of Chairman Daley to have the City Committee, at its regular meeting tomorrow issue the call for the ward conventions, but since the issuance of the injunction the committee cannot take that action, at least not before March 8, when the court will finally pass upon the question.

This has given rise to much speculation among Democrats as to what the effect will be upon the holding of the State convention. The injunction does not extend outside of St. Louis and the county Democratic organizations fear to go ahead with the selections of delegates. If State Chairman Neale should refuse to call the State Committee into session to rescind its call for the State convention and issue another, the State convention

SAYS LAW OPENS WAY FOR ACTION AT ONCE ON WAGE MATTERS

Executive Tells Brotherhood Men Board Contemplated Can Go Farther Than Commission Which He Might Set Up—Declares Labor's Rights Are Safeguarded.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Wilson signed the railroad bill tonight, on the eve of the return of the railroads to their owners and to private operation.

In a proclamation issued at the time the bill was signed, Mr. Wilson vested in Walker D. Hines, Director-General of Railroads, virtually all powers conferred upon the executive by the bill. Hines will also continue to exercise the duties of Director-General, which continue beyond the return of the roads to private control at midnight tomorrow night.

The White House also made public the text of the President's reply to a recent request of representatives of the railroad brotherhoods that he appoint a commission composed equally of employers' and employes' delegates, to consider wage demands made by the brotherhoods. It deals wholly with the wage demand settlement proposals and does not refer directly to the memorial later presented by the brotherhood heads asking that he veto the railroad bill.

Announcement of the signing of the bill came after officials had become convinced Mr. Wilson did not intend to act tonight, although they were certain he would not permit the measure to become a law by the expiration of the ten-day limit allowed for presidential approval or veto of an act of Congress. There were indications that the President's action on the bill was delayed pending his completion of his reply to the brotherhood heads.

Letter to Brotherhood Men.

In his letter Mr. Wilson said the passage of the railroad bill "made it evident that I could not act on your suggestions until it should have been determined whether the bill would become a law or not."

"It was manifest," the letter continued, "that if the bill should become a law the negotiations and consideration of the wage matter ought to proceed in harmony therewith.

"The bill having now become a law, the way is open for immediate action on the wage matter in accordance with the terms of the bill. Section 301 of the bill evidently contemplates that the carriers and employes should, as suggested by you, select representatives who will thus constitute a bipartisan board for the purpose of attempting by conference to agree upon a solution of this wage problem.

"In accordance with the assurance I gave last August and repeated in substance in my letter of the 13th inst., I shall at once request the carriers and the employes to join in this action. I believe such a step will go far toward clarifying and maturing the subject for final disposition. In fact, the sort of board thus contemplated by sec. 301 appears to be an appropriate substitute for the committee of experts which I have heretofore suggested, and, indeed, such a board will be authorized to go further than such a committee could have gone.

"While it is true that the provisions of Section 307 of the railroad bill, relating to the Labor Board, will probably also come into operations as to this wage matter, neverthelesss the bipartisan board can make a great deal of progress which will materially diminish the time to be consumed by the Labor Board; and while the bipartisan board is functioning, the appointment and organization of the Labor Board can be expedited.

In Interest of Workers.

"I cannot share the apprehension of yourselves and your constituents as to the provisions of the law concerning the Labor

COLBY IN ADDRESS DEFINES LOYALTY

Our Patriotic Duty to Sustain Our Chosen Public Servants, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Loyalty to America "means loyalty to her chosen servants, from the President down," Bainbridge Colby, named as Secretary of State, declared tonight in an address at a "Loyalty Week" meeting in the City Hall. Gen. John J. Pershing also spoke on Americanism and Patriotism.

"We must stifle the voice of hatred and friction," added Colby. "We must realize that there is not a man in America who does not hold office as the result of the free choice of our citizens. It is a high patriotic duty that we should support and sustain the men who have been placed in positions of difficulty, burden, responsibility and even danger, as the result of our suffrage.

"An intelligent and conscientious opposition is a part of loyalty to country, but we must not, if we are loyal, seek to disperse our energies in a partisan warfare that is waged without regard to its consequence, to the well being, security or honor of the country."

The speaker referred to Gen. Pershing as the "true American," who is "a lesson in loyalty to country which makes all spoken words weak and futile."

Board. I believe those provisions are not only appropriate in the interest of the public, which after all, is principally composed of workers and their families, but will be found to be particularly in the interest of the railroad employes as a class.

"The argument that the public representatives on the Labor Board will be prejudiced against labor because drawn from classes of society antagonistic to labor, can and ought to be overcome by selecting such public representatives as cannot be charged with any such prejudices. Nor do I anticipate that the public representatives will be against wage increases because they involve rate increases. Not only must public representatives be selected who can be relied upon to do justice, but the bill itself provides that the Labor Board shall establish rates and wages and salaries which, in the opinion of the board, are 'just and reasonable,' and it is further provided that the entire Labor Board shall be guided by the very important standards which are provided in the law, those standards including the wages paid for similar kinds of work in other industries,, the relation between wages and the cost of living,, the hazards of the employment, the training and skill required, the degree of responsibility, the character and irregularity of the employment, and the correction of inequalities as the result of previous adjustments. Coupled with the direction to the Labor Board to take into consideration these important standards is the highly important direction to the commission to prescribe rates sufficient to admit of the payment of the reasonable operating expenses, including, of course, fair rate of wages.

Expects No Delay in Work.

"My hopes are that the putting into effect of these provisions with a carefully selected Labor Board whose public representatives can be relied upon to be fair to labor and to appreciate the point of view of labor that it is not longer to be considered as a mere commodity will mark the beginning of a new era of better understanding between the railroad management and their employes, and will furnish additional safeguards to the just interests of railroad labor.

"I am sure that every agency which will be involved in the creation of the labor board, and in the conduct of negotiations fully appreciates that the wage demands are entitled to the earliest possible consideration and disposition, and therefore I do not anticipate delay in the appointment and organization of the labor board or in the other necessary steps."

In vesting Hines with the powers granted to the President by the bill, Mr. Wilson made one exception. The President will himself later name the agent or agency of the Government against whom suit may be brought to satisfy claims arising out of Government control of the railroads, as provided in Section 206 of the act.

At 12:01 a. m. Monday the Government will hand over to their owners 240,000 miles of main line railroad and terminals and equipment valued at approximately $20,000,000,000, over which its direct authority has been extended since Dec. 28, 1917.

Deficit of $715,000,000.

The properties will go back leaving the Government with a deficit of $715,000,000 for its 26 months of operation. But, while the deficit appeared large, "Federal operation has cost the public considerably less, under the conditions, through rates and taxes, that would have been the case under private control. Director-General Hines declared in a resume of Government control.

Hines believes that both the nation and the railroads gained benefits of a lasting character from the period of unified operation. In addition to betterments which he believed had been accomplished, Hines said the rail lines were in a position to better operate their properties and to improve facilities. His statement also dealt with results directly obtained through operating the roads as a unit.

"It made practicable a war transportation service which could not otherwise have been obtained," he said. "Its unification practices have increased the utilization of the inadequate supply of equipment so that exceptionally large transportation service has been performed in the busy periods of 1919 with a minimum of congestion; it met the unprecendented coal strike in a way which private control could not have done, and absorbed a heavy financial loss on that account which would have proved highly disturbing to private control; it provided more additions and betterments and equipment than private control could have provided during the difficult financial situation of wartime; it dealt fairly with labor and gave it the benefit of improved working conditions which were clearly its right; it not only did not cost more than private control would have cost during the same period, but cost considerably less on account of the economies growing out of the unifications and the total burden on the public—through rates and taxes on account of railroad costs, was substantially less than would have been necessary if the railroads had remained in private control and rates had been raised enough to preserve credit, it protected the investment in railroad properties, whereas, without Federal control those investments would have been endangered, and it turns back the roads to private control functioning effectively with a record of exceptional performance in an exceptionally difficult winter, despite the disruption caused by the coal strike, and in a condition to function still more effectively with normal improvement to be expected in weather and in other conditions."

Under Favorable Conditions.

The railroad corporations will start their work with an important psychological asset, Hines said, pointing out that the public holds to little responsibility any agency performing a public service." "Without regard for the difficulties of the situation." He declared the company officials resumed direction of their properties under "the most favorable possible conditions of public sentiment." They also may lay plans for the future, he said, and put into effect permanent organizations things the Railroad Administration could not do because of uncertainties of its tariff, and for lack of which the work "has been conspicuously and progressively embarrassing."

The Railroad Administration will still have a definite work to do after the roads are returned. In addition to providing transportation service, it has been charged with administration of contractural relations between the Government and the roads, Hines explained. The Government was obliged to pay $917,000,000 annual rent to the corporate owners. This, and the other fiscal relations which involved the purchase of great quantities of supplies and equipments, will require a continuation of part of the Railroad Administration indefinitely. Hines, however, expects to be able to turn over a practically completed task shortly after May 1.

Answering directly assertions that the roads would be returned "wrecked," Hines declared they would be restored in a condition which "compares favorably" with that in which they were taken over and, in his opinion, in better shape to meet demands upon them than they would have been after two years under private management.

$1,200,000,000 for Improvement.

The administration, he said, had made every effort to observe the contractural obligation to maintain the properties as substantially as good in condition as it reached them. He pointed to the expenditures of approximately $1,200,000,000 for improvements, equipment and rebuilding as proof of this.

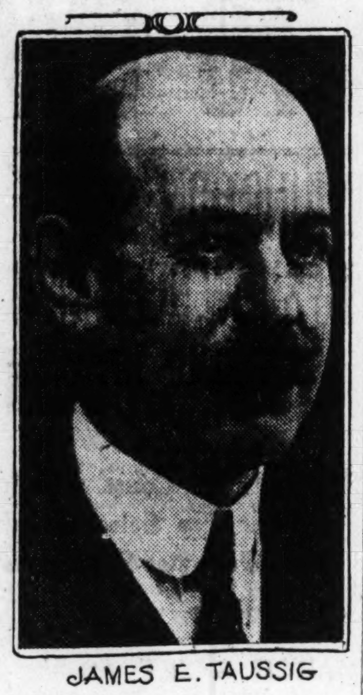
The Government bought for the roads a total of 100,000 freight cars and 1930 locomotives. While this is below normal purchases for a like period, it was explained that physical inability to obtain equipment because of the exigencies of war was the only reason the normal purchases were not made.

The railroads will go back to private control with important wage demands pending, but the same condition obtained when the Government assumed direction, Hines pointed out, adding that machinery will be set up either through the railroad bill or through bi-partisan and voluntary action to adjust the differences.

J. E. Taussig, Who Began Career in Machine Shop, Heads Wabash Railroad

New President, Native St. Louisan and Member of Old Family, Became Apprentice at 18.

NEW PRESIDENT OF WABASH RAILROAD



JAMES E. TAUSSIG

James E. Taussig of 4377 McPherson avenue, who was born in St. Louis 54 years ago and began his railroad career here at the age of 18 as an apprentice in the machine shops of a terminal railroad, has been elected president of the Wabash Railroad and will direct the affairs of that system from headquarters here, beginning tomorrow, when the roads are returned to private control.

During the last two years he has been Federal manager of the Wabash under Government control and until a few months ago was also Federal manager of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western.

He recently returned from New York, where he held a consultation with the board of directors of the Wabash concerning details connected with future development of the road.

Government Control.

Taussig, when seen in his office in the Railway Exchange Building, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that no plans had been made for expansion of Wabash interest, for the reason that until it is certain just what effect the recent legislation will have on the growth of the railway system, he does not deem it wise to make plans which might later be upset by State or Federal restrictions.

However, he is confident that the experiment under Federal control had taught the lawmakers of the United States much that they did not know before of the problems confronting railroads and that with this added store of knowledge they will be better disposed to treat the railways fairly and to give them every opportunity to place themselves again on a strong footing under private ownership.

"Railroads which made money during the war were indeed fortunate," said Taussig. "It was an arbitrary control under which railroads in certain sections might benefit at the expense of others. For instance, all of the business in a certain section might be shipped over one or two roads. I do not say this was the case, but it could be done and the roads benefiting from such selection were certain to make a profit. Unfortunately, the Wabash was not among such fortunate roads, our territory was not in a zone where we obtained a great share of the Government business in shipments of military and other supplies during the war, and consequently the Wabash system has been among the many which suffered during the war period."

Predicts Good Era for Roads.

The new president of the Wabash is optimistic, however, and believes that a new and prosperous era is dawning for railroads. He refused to comment on the railroad reorganization bill, saying that until a corps of lawyers untangled its meshes he was not in position to do so.

The headquarters of the Wabash will remain in St. Louis and President Taussig will have his offices at 1401-03 Railway Exchange Building. No immediate changes in the personnel of the offices or management of the road are planned and if any such are made they will be promotions within the present force of employes.

Of Old St. Louis Family.

Taussig is a member of an old St. Louis family of that name. He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Taussig and when 5 years old was taken to Europe to obtain an education in the schools of the Old World. He attended schools in London, Brussels and Darmstadt and received post-graduate training in Berlin and Paris.

Following his apprenticeship in a railroad machine shop, he became a telegraph operator, graduating into an expert train dispatcher. He was soon an executive, holding places with various roads. He came to the Wabash in 1915, as assistant to the president, the late Edward F. Kearney. He was made vice president of the Wabash system three months later, in charge of operations. When the offices of vice presidents of railroads were abolished under Federal control, Taussig was made Federal Manager of the Wabash and of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western, relinquishing the latter position only a few months ago.

Shortage of Facilities Forces Use of Box Cars for Express.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Shortage of facilities in express cars to handle "at least 1,000,000 packages a day shipped by express," has forced the American Railway Express Co. to use box cars for much of its express matter, it was announced tonight.

With the release of railroads from Government control, the express business of the country will continue under the present consolidated private management of the American Railway Express for six months at least, and probably indefinitely, it was said.

PRESIDENT ORDERS FUEL ADMINISTRATION CONTINUED

Gives Hines Authority Over Domestic Distribution and Puts Export Matters in Commission's Hands.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Coincident with the signing of the railroad bill tonight, President Wilson issued executive orders providing for continuation of the powers of the Fuel Administration, but dividing them between the Director General of Railroads and a commission of four. Director General Hines will retain jurisdiction over domestic distribution while the commission will handle bunker and export coal matters.

The commission will comprise A. W. Howe, Rembrant Peale, F. M. Whittaker and J. F. Fisher. It will function through the Tidewater Coal Exchange, which is restored for that purpose, having been suspended before the resignation of Dr. Garfield as Fuel Administrator. The order creating the commission is effective until April 30 next.

The second order, investing Hines with the power of Fuel Administrator, so far as domestic distribution is concerned, said doubt had arisen as to whether he could continue to exercise those powers after the return of the railroads to private control. A new order was therefore executed extending Mr. Hines' authority beyond the date of the return.

The President's order is effective until April 30, 1920, when it will cease to be operative automatically unless otherwise ordered.

The order said the action was taken "because of the present emergency and in order to insure an adequate supply and equitable distribution, and to facilitate the movement, and to prevent locally or generally scarcity of coal."

WEEK'S BIRTHS 318, DEATHS 256

There were 318 births and 256 deaths recorded in St. Louis last week. Forty-three died of pneumonia, 22 cancer, 18 tuberculosis and 15 Bright's disease.

There were nine accidental deaths, two suicides and one homicide.

RAIL OFFICIALS READY TO TAKE ROADS TOMORROW

Official Transfer From Government to Private Operation Will Occur at 12:01 A. M.

The change from Government to private railroad control and operation becomes effective at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow, and though something like a quarter of a million miles of lines and systems are involved in the wholesale transfer, little if any confusion is anticipated by the officials directing the details.

For weeks the roads have been preparing for this step, and all of the lines have their operating and other officials named and ready to act.

Passengers who start out from Union Station before midnight tonight will buy a Government stamped ticket and when they arrive at Chicago, Cincinnati or any other point of destination, they will step off of a privately operated train. If they develop a grievance en route before midnight it will have to be adjusted by the Government, but if it occurs after that hour, the officials of the road will have to act on the complaint.

Competition Will Be Revived.

With the return of the transportation agencies will come competition among the lines, which run in the same general directions, for both freight and passenger traffic, and as these are the sources of revenue, the roads took particular pains to get these departments organized in advance.

Shippers will notice the difference at once when they see the solicitors on hand tomorrow morning, asking them to route over such and such a line. People who travel will get some attractive stationery from various passenger agents, and even the artistic summer resort folder will again come into its own. During the days of Federal operation the shippers had but little choice in routing their shipments, but with the change effective after midnight, they will be in position to assert their former privileges in such matters.

There will also be advertising by the individual lines, as there was before the wartime operation, and there are many changes looked for in train accommodations. Those, for instance who have been complaining that the St. Louis-Chicago service has been overcrowded, will naturally look for some new train announcements from the four lines in competition for this business. The same will apply to passenger traffic to and from other points.

Many Promotions Made.

With comparatively few exceptions the old organizations will be returned and as most of the operating officers have been in service under the Government, they will remain, but will henceforth confine their energies to their own roads. A number, however, will have some change in status, as many promotions have been announced.

B. F. Bush, who has been regional director of the southwestern district for the Government, will move into the office of president of the Missouri Pacific, and he will have most of his former aids present for the first conference. Federal managers and general managers will find themselves vice presidents again and they will in some instances have their income taxes increased, since they will get more pay than Uncle Sam gave out to his assistants.

J. M. Kurn, the new president of the Frisco, will change from Federal manager of the same road to its highest executive office. His staff was selected two weeks ago and most of the new officials were here yesterday preparing for the changed relationship.

The Wabash goes back with J. E. Taussig, a native of St. Louis, as its ranking official. He was formerly vice president in charge of operations and under the wartime system has been Federal manager.

M., K. & T. Has Receiver.

The M., K. & T. will find itself back in the same receivership it was in at the beginning of 1918, and with the same receiver,, C. E. Schaff, who will have as his chief assistants, General Counsel J. M. Bryson, C. N. Whitehead,, C. Haile and the others who were with him when the President took over the road with the others, as a war measure.

With the exception of President W. S. McChesney, who died last month, and was succeeded by General Counsel T. M. Pierce,, the organization of the Terminal Railroad Association remain unchanged, alll of the former officers having been reappointed. Felix E. Anderson, who was assistant to President McChesney for nearly 20 years, and executive assistant to E. P. Bryan for five years preceding the McChesney regime, will be Pierce's principal aid.

The Cotton Belt goes back to the administration of J. M. Herbert,, where it was before, and he has selected most of his former assistants.

Circulars were issued from all of the railroad offices yesterday, announcing the personnel of the various departments.

The Eastern lines, with the exception of the Pennsylvania, will have the same St. Louis staffs. The Pennsylvania will have the headquarters of the Southwestern region in the Syndicate Trust building, with a a big staff headed by Vice President Benjamin McKeen in charge of its executive, operating and traffic departments.

Alexander Robertson, vice president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, in charge of operation, yesterday announced the promotion of J. Cannon, superintendent of transportation, to the position of assistant general manager, and the selection of G. W. Briece for superintendent of transportation.

E. A. Hadley, who has been engineering assistant to Regional Director Bush, under Government operation was appointed chief engineer of the Missouri Pacific Railroad by Robertson, the position which Hadley held previous to the Government taking over the lines.

INJUNCTION SAID TO SHOW REED MEN FIGHTING WOMEN

would meet without the participation of delegates from St. Louis.

Whether such a condition could be used as basis by Reed's followers for another injunction proceeding at the time of the convention to prevent it from proceeding, is a question fhich is being given consideration by Democrats.

Reed's Hand Not Visible.

Though the complicated proceeding has the support of some of the most active of Reed's friends in Missouri, the Senator is not shown to have a hand in it. He told the Washington correspondent of the Post-Dispatch yesterday that the report that he was aiding in any fight to prevent the seating of women delegates was ridiculous. "I am taking no part in any fight against the seating of women delegates," he said.

The reason advanced by the anti-Reed men for interest of Reed supporters in preventing women from participating in the convention is that the Democratic women generally support the league of nations in opposition to Senator Reed.

In some quarters there is also a belief that the wet and dry question enters into the fight on the women, because of fear that the women may be called upon by the dry interests to aid them.

Cummings, in a statement after the filing of the suit, denied that it was in the interest of Reed or that it was intended to have any effect on the wet and dry fight.

"It is simply an attempt to secure justice," he said. "The State committee has no right or power to give one-half of the delegates to women voters any more than they would have the right to direct the local City Committee to elect one-half of the delegates white and the other half black, or to prescribe that one-half of the delegates should be bald-headed and the other half red-headed men, or to prescribe that none but farmers should compose one-half of the delegation and ex-soldiers the other half.

"All the plaintiffs in this case believe that women should participate in the primary to the exact proportion in which they are represented at the mass meetings."

Chairman Neale said over the telephone from his home in Greenfield that he could not announce any action for the State committee until after he had seen the petition, and possibly not until after the court had passed on the case.

"This was the purpose of the committee. The call clearly states that if the women prefer they may meet separately and apart from the men and select the women delegates, in which event the men at the same time, separate and apart from the women, will select the male delegates. The call further provides that, if satisfactory to both the men and women, they all together shall select the entire delegation."

Statement by Hay.

In a statement issued last night Charles M. Hay, an attorney, said:

"The charge that the call for the Democratic convention was framed as it was with a view to assisting me and others in the fight on Senator Reed, is absolutely false. So far as I am concerned, I was not on the committee that framed the call; I neither wrote it, nor read it, before it was issued, and knew of its provisions only in a general way. I discussed with members of the committee the question of granting to the women the right to select their delegates separately from the men, and the men theirs separately from the women. It was never suggested by any one, to my knowledge, that the right should be accorded the women to select their delegates separately from the men, and then participate in the election of the men delegates. I never heard of the suggestion of such a right until certain gentlemen, who do not believe in the women having any suffrage rights at all, raised the question.

"The Resolutions Committee, which finally drafted and reported the call, consisted of Frank H. Farris of Rolla,, E. C. Orr of Chillicothe and J. E. Boggs of Columbia. If it was the intention of these gentlemen, or any of them, that the language of the call should be construed as it is by those who object to it, I never knew or heard of it. Gentlemen who are so free with suggestions of efforts to 'put something over,' might learn what they intended by communicating with them.

"I only know that the discussion had to do with according the women the right to vote separately from the men and the men separately from the women, and I further know that I expressed it as my preference then, and I express it as my preference now, that they should vote together upon all delegates. What I understood the women wanted, and what I think they were entitled to demand, was the right to participate in the conventions and to be represented upon the delegations equally with the men. They never asked for an unfair advantage, and, I venture to assert, that they do not now claim, and would not claim, an unfair advantage under this call. These gentlemen should learn that there are those in politics who do not think at all times in terms of 'putting something over.'"

RUSSIAN BOLSHEVIKI ADOPT A NEW PLAN TO SPREAD PROPAGANDA

Cease Sending Missionaries Into Other Countries, but Make of Moscow a Sort of Mecca to Which Foreign Reds May Come.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Post-Dispatch).

By LINCOLN EYRE,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

RIGA, Livonia (By Courier via Berlin), Feb. 24.—Bolshevik propaganda abroad, though still as active and insidious as it has ever been, has undergone a radical change of late. That conclusion was reached by a close study of the subject, which I pursued in Moscow and Petrograd, reinforced by an interview with G. S. Zinovieff, ruler of the latter city, also president of the Executive Committee of the Third Internationale and firebrand of the revolution.

The Russia Communist party, which is the Bolsheviki's official political title, no longer exports agitators chosen from among members to kindle the flames of revolt in foreign lands. They are too wise for that antiquated process nowadays. What they do in these scientific times is to import from the country of his birth the crudely fashioned product of his own domestic Bolshevism, subjects him to certain finishing processes (including perhaps a gold lining), and ships him back home again complete in every detail, smooth running and highly inflammable. That is one of the reasons why the Soviet Government is prepared to promise and to keep its promise to refrain from sending forth agents charged with spreading the gospel of capitalistic annihilation.

The Soviet representatives of Russian nationality are strictly enjoined to avoid propagandist activities. It may safely be assumed that were the Moscow dictatorship to be recognized by the powers and accorded diplomatic privileges, its embassies and legations would conform with entire honesty to all the niceties of international etiquette. I asked one of the high officials of the Soviet Foreign Office if its ambassador would be prepared to don diplomatic gold lace, and to go to court like other diplomats in the monarchial capitals. "Why not, if it were necessary for the furtherance of our interests," was the reply, to which was added, however, the smiling remark that on the other hand Chicerin, the People's Commissary for Foreign Affairs, would not hesitate to receive the Moscow diplomatic corps in a sweater if he saw fit.

Third Internationale.

Another reason for the Soviet's willingness to quit propagandizing abroad is that it has already turned over to the Third Internationale all business of that kind. For the benefit of the layman it may be explained that the Third Internationale is the third international organization of Socialists established since Karl Marx formulated his doctrine of scientific Socialism. It was called into being at Moscow in March, 1919, following the failure of the so-called official Socialist groups assembled at Berne in the Second Internationale to subscribe to Bolshevism. The Second Internationale still exists, but is denounced by the Bolsheviki as "yellow" and a traitor to the Marxian principles. Now, the Third Internationale has no official connection with the Soviet Government. It is supposed to be a separate institution. Yet all its leaders hold office under the Soviets, and its funds, which are considerable, must be derived from Soviet sources. Nevertheless it is technically, indeed legally, nongovernmental, wherefore the Moscow Cabinet is justified in pledging itself to leave propaganda to "friendly" foreign states alone.

The moving spirit of the Third Internationale is Zinovieff, who, with Lenine and Trotzky, forms the triumvirate on which Bolshevism today rests, although he is by no means as big a man as the other two. Zinovieff is not a member of the Council of People's Commissaries (the Cabinet), but merely of the All-Russian Central Executive Committee, from which the former body derives its powers, and which itself is subordinate to the supreme executive legislative judicial organ, the All-Russian convention of Soviets. Thus, while the role allotted to him on the administrative stage is really as prominent as that of any of his fellows, short of Lenine and Trotzky, Zinovieff can legitimately claim to be without voice in the actual administration of the Soviet republic.

Host to Expelled Anarchists.

I saw him in Moscow shortly after the arrival in Russia of the anarchists expelled from the United States. He was one of the principal hosts to that much-advertised company, and as such revealed much of the finesse that makes the agitational performances so effective for—to digress a moment—their visitors from America were by no means a source of unmitigated satisfaction to the Bolsheviki. The latter were considerably worried lest Alexander Berkman and Emma Goldman and the rest should prove anti-Soviets, as have a considerable proportion of the Russian anarchists (who feel that there is too much law and order, and not enough real anarchy in Russia), so under Zinovieff's supervision, an imposing reception committee undertook to welcome "the Americans" and bring them into the Soviet fold before they had time to set themselves up in opposition to the communist party.

Arriving at the Russian frontier from Finland, the 200 odd exiles were greeted by a military guard of honor worthy of the Czar's ceremonial appearances with brass bands, speeches and ribbons. They were fed and housed in royal style and afforded every opportunity of realizing the friendliness of communistic efficiency and the idealism of the Soviet Government—as well as its omnipotent strength. At Petrograd the streets were beflagged in the visitors' honor and Smolny Institute, Petrograd's city hall, was very much en fete. As a result of this adroit propagandization, the bulk of the anarchists, at last accounts, became warm-hearted supporters of the Bolshevist regime, although the position of their chiefs, Berkman and Goldman, had not been fully defined.

Discusses League of Nations.

The first point that Zinovieff made clear to me in our talk was that the third Internationale is not comparable to the league of nations (despite frequent comparisons of the two forms of internationalism which are formulated in and out of Russia).

"Your league of nations," the Overlord of Petrograd affirmed, "is supposed to be a governmental organization—an international administrative organ with executive, legislative and judicial branches. The third internationale on the other hand is a purely political group. It is a confederation of the world's Communists, an international coalition of the Communist parties already existing in their respective countries. There is still another striking difference between the two institutions."

Here Zinovieff smiles cynically. "It is that the third internationale is a going concern, with some 8,000,000 members, while the league of nations lives only on paper in the ridiculous treaty of Versailles."

"But," I asked, "how is your aim of a European world republic of Soviets to be realized unless there is some international governmental machine?"

"There will be some such machine," Zinovieff replied, "but probably it will take the form of a new organization along Soviet lines. In my view the revolution will follow the same general channels it has taken in Russia, with alterations of detail of course. Should France overthrow capitalism, for instance, she will at first establish sovietism and subsequently combine with us. To foresee the mechanical angles of such combination, however, is too early."

"And your propaganda program," I ventured, "is as strong and far-reaching as ever?"

Instrument of Revolution.

The prompt reply was: "The Third Internationale is primarily an instrument of revolution. It reunites at Moscow the intelligence and energy of all the Communist groups the world over. Delegates from the various national organizations come to us and give and take knowledge about the cause, and return to their respective home countries refreshed and invigorated. This work will be continued, no matter what happens, legally or illegally. The Soviet Government may pledge itself to refrain from propaganda abroad, but the Third Internationale—never!"

Zinovieff's estimate of 8,000,000 Communists enrolled under the Moscow banner is scarcely susceptible of confirmation. With only 410,000 officially registered Communists in Russia, not more than 1,500,000 (Zinovieff's figure), in Germany, and less than that in Italy and France, it is hard to see where the remainder are to be found.

Zinovieff, being an agitator, is inclined to extremist statements. He is that combination of idealistic Hotspur and practical executive which is characteristic of many Bolshevist leaders. Despite his long years in exile with Lenine, to whose Dr. Johnson he played Boswell ably and loyally, this shock-haired enthusiastic young Jew—he is today scarcely 40—was able to run Petrograd, a metropolis suffering from every municipal ailment imaginable, with an efficiency that many American Communists might envy. Petrograd is still underfed, underheated, dirty and desolate, but it continues to live despite ordeals that would have blotted out a less resolute municipality. For this Zinovieff, as all-mighty controller of the city's destinies, obviously deserves credit, for only he can keep track of supplies.

Writes for Communist Magazine.

Besides having a hand in everything that concerns local administration, and most things that have to do with national Government, he personally edits and writes many pages of the Third Internationale's organ, "The International Communist," a monthly magazine of some 250 pages, printed simultaneously in Russian, English, French and German. Moreover, he passes upon all important printed matter emanating from the Internationales' press. Every foreign Communist coming to Moscow sees Zinovieff and gets pointers from him on how to propagate Bolshevism.

SPEEDERS, ARRESTED SECOND TIME, TO BE FINED $100

Automobile drivers arrested a second time for violating the speed ordinance will in future be fined $100 by Judge Mix, according to a declaration made by him yesterday after he had disposed of 1: cases of this kind, the largest number he had had. "Most of you have no property," said he. "If you killed a pedestrian you could not reimburse his heirs. The streets belong to everyone except the speeder. I have more respect for Satan than for the speed mad motorist."

ALL FRENCH RAILWAY WORKERS ORDERED OUT

Combatants' Union Calls on 450,000 Members to Aid Government Against Strikers.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Trainmen and other employes on all the railway lines of France have been called out by a general strike order issued today by the National Federation of Railwaymen. Limited train service was maintained throughout today, however, with the aid of men mobilized from the railway division of the army, and civilians who offered their services.

The Ministry of Public Works has organized a service to enroll volunteers to replace the strikers, to operate automobiles and aid in the work of victualling.

The National Federation of Railway workers tonight formally issued the conditions on which the strikers will return to work. These consist of recognition of the union, application of the proposed graded wage scale, joint grievance commissions, immediate consideration of the future status of the railroads and no strike reprisals.

The general federation of labor has issued a declaration asserting its solidarity with the railwaymen, and affirming that the present situation represents an attack on union rights which the law recognizes. "It is a question of unionization of the railwaymen or returning the railroads to the public," the declaration says.

The National Union of Combatants, comprising men who fought in the war, has issued a call to its 450,000 members to aid the Government in the present difficulty.

"We do not ask you to become strike breakers," the call says. "We ask you to break a situation which threatens calamity to France, to the republic which you served and loved."

At a ministerial conference today to consider the strike situation, especially with regard to the victualling of Paris, it was decided that perishable goods must not be allowed to remain in railway stations, owing to the danger of foodstuffs spoiling. Arrangements will be made to sell these goods immediately, those remaining unsold being distributed without charge.

Strong military forces are guarding tracks inside Paris and a law authorizing the requisitioning of automobiles, motor trucks and airplanes in case of interruption of railroad traffic was passed last night by the Chamber of Deputies.

AGREEMENT AS TO ADRIATIC IN SIGHT, IS VIEW IN LONDON

President Wilson's Latest Note Also Believed to Have Signed Death Warrant of London Pact.

HIS STAND APPROVED IN PRESS COMMENT

Reply to Allied Premiers Ends Rumors of American Executive's Inability to Handle State Affairs.

BY JOSEPH W. GRIGG.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.
(Copyright, 1920.)

LONDON, Feb. 28.—To all intents and purposes President Wilson signed the death warrant of the pact of London in his recent notes on the Adriatic situation. He also saved the Allies from trying to enforce that pact on Jugo-Slavia. President Wilson having brought the Adriatic problem back again to its starting point the belief is expressed here today that an early settlement of it will be reached.

It will be a long time, too, before three-quarters of the European statesmen, and even of the peoples, will turn anything but a suspicious ear to reports of President Wilson's inability to handle affairs of state. In the recent months, and especially in the recent weeks of partisan criticism of the President, with ever recurrent reports of his inability, he has had momentous questions before him and has exercised a growing influence in the allied countries. Attacks on President Wilson became attacks on the prestige abroad of the United States.

Expediency Was Returned.

In this bewildering atmosphere grew the determination of European problems in the most expedient manner. Ironical as it seems, there was a belief that the Adriatic problem could be settled through the application of the pact of London, even by threat of force. Out of this fog came the President's dramatic and drastic warning. It irritated the Supreme Council for a few hours and then that irritation dissolved into a reasonable request for the President once more to help in finding a solution of the Adriatic situation.

Most of the editorial comment there has been is not only favorable, but it maintains that President Wilson has brought the allied Premiers back to their senses. No one here today questions the fact that Mr. Wilson is still one of the greatest living forces straining to seek a solution of the world's critical problems.

By turns European opinion has grow exasperated, resentful and pessimistic about the United States Senate's failure to ratify the treaty. In the face of the President's Adriatic stroke it has once more a clearer idea of where the United States, as a nation, really stands. As the Westminster Gazette says this evening:

"President Wilson prevails because he has once again taken his stand on that sound moral position which he occupied at the beginning of the peace conference. The attempt to coerce the Jugo-Slavs with threats of the treaty of London was a bad blunder.

Other Editorial Comment.

Only three other newspapers made editorial comment on the exchange of notes about the Adriatic question. The Daily Express hopes that "the issue of this trouble will smooth the way to that of American co-operation, which is essential to the maintenance of a seasoned peace in the civilized world."

The Daily Chronicle says of the offer of Premier Lloyd George and Millerand: "It can hardly but be accepted by President Wilson and if he wishes to make the ensuing negotiations bear fruit in a settlement it is certainly within his power to do so. It would not, however, be candid to forget altogether that serious doubt was inspired by his first note as to whether he really does wish it."

"So ends the attempt of Premiers Lloyd George and Clemenceau to coerce the Jugo-Slavs," says the Times, which throughout has supported President Wilson. "Neither of them has reason to be proud of his effort to bully this small people, which Mr. Wilson has virtually forced them to drop. Mr. Lloyd George and Premier Millerand have rushed into the true path into which the American President has driven them. We imagine he will continue to shepherd them along it, perhaps with a somewhat grim smile."

BEVERLY JONES DIVORCED, WILL PAY $225 A MONTH ALIMONY

A divorce was granted yesterday to Mrs. Margie K. Jones, whose suit against Beverly Jones, a department manager for the International Shoe Co., was filed a week before. They formerly resided at 5401 Cabanne avenue, were married in 1909 and separated last month.

Mrs. Jones testified that her husband was indifferent to her and refused to go about with her. Her mother declared that she had talked with Jones following the filing of the suit and believed that a reconciliation was impossible.

Mrs. Jones declared that her husband's salary was $7500 a year. Jones agreed to pay her $225 a month. She was awarded custody of their 10-year-old son, Beverly, but is to give the boy over to his father on each Wednesday between 5 and 10 p. m. and each Saturday between 2 and 5:30 p. m.

WILSON TO "POCKET" TREATY IF LODGE RESERVATION TO ARTICLE 10 CARRIES

President Said to Have Notified Friends in the Senate of Final Determination on Question.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The World prints the following from Washington:

President Wilson will "pocket" the German peace treaty if the Lodge reservation dealing with article 10 is attached to that instrument. Under no circumstances will he exchange ratifications if the treaty is thus rendered ineffective to accomplish the purposes for which the league of nations was organized.

All Democratic Senators friendly to the President and the treaty as he desires it ratified have been totified of the President's final determination. The conclusions of the President were sent to his adherents by a Senator who visited the White House during the present week. He plainly told the President that Senators on the Democratic side were at sea regarding acceptance of the Lodge program as a last alternative to save the treaty and sought some intimation from him as to the effect this action might produce.

With the utmost emphasis and frankness the President informed his senatorial caller that he would "pocket" the treaty if it carried the Lodge reservation covering article 10. It was made clear that the President preferred his friends in the Senate would reject the treaty at the last minute, after every effort to save it failed, than place the embarrassment of refusing to exchange ratifications upon him.

The ultimatum of the President was promptly conveyed to all Democratic Senators. It was told in confidence to each and every one who has been contemplating acceptance of the Lodge reservations rather than see the treaty fail. The injunction of utmost secrecy was placed upon all recipients of this information.

A poll of Democratic Senators was taken on the announcement of the President. It is said that this shows a total of 24 Senators among the Democrats who will stand squarely by the President and refuse to accept the Lodge reservations. This leaves one Senator at liberty to accept the Lodge program. With Senators Reed and Thomas determined to vote against ratification in any event.

Democratic leaders tonight are much distressed because an unthinking Senator made known the President's precise attitude to a Republican who blew it to the four winds. It virtually prevents them from making any kind of an effective fight for better terms or modifications of the Lodge reservations.

a heated denial from the Minnesota Senator. He said he had wanted ratification from the first and added that while he "congratulated" Senators Hitchcock and Borah on "their new alliance" he could not wish them success.

Attacks Wilson Adriatic Stand.

Senator Kellogg said the President, without justification, had "undertaken to dictate absolutely" an Adriatic settlement. He added that the development was "discouraging" to friends of the peace treaty. The Senator said he did not know "why Italy should not defend herself."

"My position is that it is none of our business," he continued. "I do not believe the President is justified in attempting to dictate an adjustment. If we're going to dictate in that way before we have any treaty at all, what are we going to get into, until we have an adequate reservation to Article Ten after the treaty is ratified?"

Quoting from the President's references to self-determination in his recent notes to the Allied Premiers, Senator Kellog asserted that, in many cases, territory was "parceled out" at Versailles without regard to the desires of the people interested.

"How much of a part did self-determination play in the settlement of the Saar Basin?" he asked. "It played no more of a part than it did in the settlement of 1871, when Germany demanded and took Alsace-Lorraine from France. How much of a part did it play in determining the Shantung settlement? How much of a part did it play in the cases of Serbia and Montenegro? Self-determination had nothing to do with the erection of these new nations. And are we to pledge ourselves for all time to maintain the nations that have been thus erected?"

Hitchcock Replies to Kellogg.

Replying to Senator Kellogg, Senator Hitchcock declared that the peace treaty, by providing for a plebiscite in the Saar Valley at the end of 15 years, had preserved the principle of self-determination for the people of that valley.

Senator Hitchcock added that attacks on the President for failing to carry out all of his proposals for self-determination came with poor grace from Republican Senators who had tried to discredit him during the negotiations.

Senator Brandegee, Republican, Connecticut, joining in the debate on the Adriatic question, said: "The league of nations is fulminating over there and our allies and their associates have come to a little difference of opinion."

"And all the papers," he continued, "are filled with remarks of Lloyd George and Millerand and our President—as is—about agreements broken, bad faith displayed, and everything else, just when the President has been assuring us that a new day has dawned, and nations of the world are no longer justified in viewing each other with suspicion, because they have come to be moved exclusively by philanthropy, charity, pure altruism, and the like, not to mention Egypt, Persia and Syria.

"His note says they 'have raised the question of whether the American Government'—that's him—'can at any time co-operate with European nations for the peace of the world?'

"Well, they wheezed a few times when they got that."

Senator Shields, Democrat, Tennessee, asked how far Senator Brandegee thought the United States should enter a controversy "concerning a few dagoes over on the Adriatic."

"Spot of Red Ink on Map."

"Yes, he can't have his way about a spot of red ink on the map of Europe," resumed Senator Brandegee, "and at the first difference of opinion he says the league can go hang for all of him. He told us that the heart of the world would be broken if we didn't jump right in.

"The American people, I believe, are absolutely ignorant of the technical issues embraced in the Fiume controversy. We are pretty intimate with each other in this Senate, and yet no man living can say how the Senate would vote on any part of the question if it were submitted here for arbitration.

"Yet here's a voice, heard in London, Paris and Rome, speaking with the maximum of assurance, not to say cocksuredness, as to what America thinks."

Interrupting the Connecticut Senator, Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, referring to the allied note of February 17, in which the Premiers had "viewed with surprise the threat of the United States to withdraw from the comity of nations," said he did not "accept the statements of those gentlemen with any great degree of sincerity."

It was a matter of history, he said, that none of the Premiers have had any confidence in the league.

NEW ARMY AIRPLANE HAS CANNON AS HUB OF THE PROPELLER

Rapid Succession of One-Pound Shells Can Be Fired to Pierce Armor of Tanks, Submarines and Dirigibles.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Acceptance by the Army Air Service of an airplane motor which, while driving a plane in flight automatically shoots in rapid succession shells one and one-half inches in diameter, weighing a pound, was announced here today by the Manufacturers' Aircraft Association.

The airplane cannon, which is of Wright-Hispano design, was built to pierce armored airplanes, tanks, submarines and dirigibles.

The motor is a modification of those used in the war. Unlike the airplane machine guns which shoot through the propeller blades the airplane cannon is arranged inside the propeller shaft and shoots through the hub of the propeller. Two machine guns are attached to any cynchronized with the motor for use in cases where the heavier shots would be unneccessary.

BOMB BLOWS HOLE IN WALL; BUILDING OCCUPANTS NOT HURT

Owner of High Street Structure Tells Police He Believes Rivals Would Kill Him.

A small section of the front wall of the two-story building at 924 High street was blown out by a dynamite bomb at 3:30 a. m. yesterday. Many windows in the neighborhood were shattered and a Belt line owl car, passing at the time, was rocked, but none of the 13 occupants of the building was injured.

Vito Cusamano, owner of the building, lives on the second floor with his wife and five children. The first floor is occupied by John Biando, his wife, three children, and father-in-law, Guiseppe Porsel. Members of both families were jolted from bed.

Cusamano told the police that he had been prospering in the fruit business and that he believed business rivals had plotted to kill him. He had received no threatening letters, however, he said. He estimated the damage at about $150. The same house was damaged by a bomb a year ago. Cusamano was living there then.

SPEEDING AUTO UPSETS ANOTHER

Webster Groves Man, Wife and Three Small Children Bruised.

A speeding touring car which did not stop struck and overturned the automobile of Winfield D. Ellinger, 831 Big Bend road, Webster Groves, last night at 11 o'clock on Lindell boulevard, west of Union boulevard, and threw Ellinger, his wife and three children to the street. All were bruised, but none was seriously injured.

Ellinger said that the touring car tried to pass him on the wrong side, there being insufficient room.

FARMERS AND DEALERS SPLIT ON MILK PRICE

Distributors Refuse to Pay More Than $3 a 100 Pounds, Producers Demand $3.25.

Officers of the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association and representatives of the milk distributing companies of St. Louis held a four-hour conference at the Railroad Y. M. C. A. in East St. Louis yesterday in a futile effort to agree on the March price for milk.

The producers furnished milk during February at $3.45 a 100 pounds, and yesterday said they were willing to accept $3.25 a 100 pounds during March, but the distributors refused to pay more than $3. When the conference adjourned the producers, through D. A. Brooks, president, informed the distributors that if they accepted milk from them tomorrow or after they will have to pay $3.25 for it. It is expected the distrubutors will confer with the officers of the association in East St. Louis Tuesday in an effort to reach an agreement.

Brooks says that the cities are attracting workmen away from the farm. High wages, he said, are paid, all of which goes into the cost of production.

He said the price of $3 a 100 pounds was an insult to the producer, and will serve to discourage farmers from continuing the milk producing business.

The producers were paid $3.82½ a 100 pounds during December, and $3.70 during January. The March price in 1916 was $1.70 a 100 pounds, and in March, 1918, $3.10.

AMERICAN KILLED AND HIS BROTHER SHOT BY MEXICANS

Two Bandits Raid Store at Montana Camp, Ariz., and Escape Across Border.

By the Associated Press.

NOGALES, Ariz., Feb. 28.—Alexander Frasier, American storekeeper and mining engineer, is dead, and his brother, J. A. Frasier, is in a critical condition as a result of a battle with two Mexican bandits who raided a general store owned by the Frasier brothers at Montana Camp, Ruby Postoffice, 30 miles from here and near the Mexican line, late yesterday.

J. A. Frazier, who was shot through the head, was able to make a statement when he was brought here late last night. He is said to have identified one of his assailants as a member of a band of outlaws which has terrorized the border for many years. Frazier has a wife in San Diego, Cal.

This man, according to Frazier, rode up to the Frazier store, accompanied by another bandit whom the wounded man said he was unable to identify. The Mexicans held up the two Americans with rifles, and when the Frazier brothers resisted, the raiders fired. The bandits then looted the store of several hundred dollars in cash and merchandise, and are believed to have fled across the line into Mexico.

Officers are said to be on their way with bloodhounds from Tucson.

FORMER U. S. CONSUL, 88, KILLED BY MEXICAN BANDITS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Augustus Morrill, formerly American Consul at Manzanillo, Mexico, was killed by Mexican bandits, Feb. 26.

The present Consul at Manzanillo, in his report to the State Department, said Morrill was attacked while on his way to the Hacienda el Balcon, three miles from Colima, where he lived, and that in a fusillade of pistol shots, he received two wounds.

The American embassy at Mexico City has been instructed to make urgent representations to the Mexican Government looking to the arrest and punishment of the murderers and the American Consulate at Manzanillo has been instructed to make similar representations to the local Mexican authorities.

Morrill's widow, who is 80 years old, lives at Colima. He also is survived by several children, who live at San Francisco and San Rafael, Cal. He was appointed Vice Consul of the United States at Manzanillo on Jan. 26, 1869, and made Consul at the same place on Aug. 5, 1872.

Morrill was 88 years old and retired from the consular service in 1881.

"BEANSTALK" GIVEN BY CHILDREN, FOR CHILDREN

Juvenile Audience Enjoys Junior Players' Performance at Little Theater.

An audience mostly composed of children, which filled the Artists' Guild Little Theater yesterday afternoon, shouted with delight at the adventures of Jack in the Giant's Castle, which he had reached by the well-known beanstalk route. It was the first performance of the fairy play, "Jack and the Beanstalk," by the Junior Players. It will be repeated next Saturday afternoon.

The black beard and gleaming eyes of the Giant and his fee-fo-fum tones, were too realistic for a few of the younger children, some of whom were taken into an adjoining room until the giant had met his doom, and the fairies were once more on the stage.

Children were the actors except for the Giant. Victor Woerheide, as Jack, was spirited and clear-spoken, Helene Higgins, as the Fairy Queen, was charming in singing and recitation. Eight fairies attended her. Pauline Parker was a captivating mite of a Giant's wife, Maury Tuckerman was the butcher, and Grace Randol was Jack's mother. The adult role of the Giant was played by William Rudolph.

The version of the play used was that of Edith Burrows and Ruth Bridgham, which presents Jack's adventures as a dream, and makes the Giant a personification of the vice of laziness. The lines are in verse. Miss Alice Martin and Joseph Solari directed the performance, and pupils of Miss Edith Martin played the piano between the acts.

The stage effects were artistic, particularly in the first act, where an azure expanse formed the background for dancing fairies. The other scenes were interiors, Jack's home an the Giant's castle, with the beanstalk connecting them.

TWO MOUNTED POLICEMEN SUSPENDED FOR INTOXICATION

George W. Smith and Earl Lanigan Found Asleep on Ground With Temperature Near Freezing.

George W. Smith and Earl Lanigan, mounted policemen, were suspended on charges of intoxication yesterday after they had been found asleep on the ground in almost freezing temperature at Piccadilly avenue and the Frisco Railroad tracks at 5 a. m.

Someone telephoned to the Mounted District Station as to the whereabouts and condition of the policemen, and a Sergeant investigated. After arousing the policemen he learned from them that their horses were tied in a brickyard shed half a block away.

Smith said he had taken two drinks of whisky, and Lanigan said he had taken one drink of gin. They said it was given to them by a coal dealer in Greenwood, just beyond the southwestern city limits.

The coal dealer denied this. He said he had asked the policemen to keep close watch on his office and sheds near the Frisco tracks, as he was going out of town, but he said he did not offer them any liquid inducement to be vigilant.

BUSCH TELLS OF SEIZURE OF HIS TRUNKS IN DALLAS

the higher officials in Washington. It was probably due to ignorance or over-officiousness upon the part of the local representatives of the Government, and I shall press an investigation at Washington which, I am quite sure, will stop such practices in the future."

Incident Closed, Say Department of Justice Agents in Dallas.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DALLAS, Tex., Feb. 28.—Except to say Busch was not arrested, Federal officials here refused tonight to make any comment on the statement of Adolphus Busch III in St. Louis that his trunks were seized and the locks filed by officers in search of liquor when he was in Dallas. Department of Justice agents handle such cases here instead of State prohibition officers. The Department of Justice agents said there was nothing further to say in the matter and that the incident was closed. They accepted his statement that a trunk which was broken open and from which whisky was taken was not his.

From other sources it was learned that a Busch trunk was searched after it had been seized with the one which contained liquor and which Busch denied was his. The two were delivered to the hotel at the same time. All the trunks in a bunch delivered together at the hotel, it was said, came from St. Louis.

The facts are fully, intimately set forth in the narrative, which is by the devoted friend of Carol who arranged the details of the elopement.

OKLAHOMA GOVERNOR SIGNS WOMAN SUFFRAGE RATIFICATION

State Is 33rd to Give Vote to Women—West Virginia Assembly Adjourns.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 28. —Gov. J. B. A. Robertson late today signed the joint resolution ratifying the Federal woman suffrage amendment after the House of Representatives had by a vote of 76 to 4 adopted the amendment of the Senate eliminating the emergency clause, and both sides adjourned finally tonight.

The emergency clause originally attached to the ratification resolution by the House and rejected by the Senate yesterday, provided that the ratification become effective immediately upon passage by both houses. There was much speculation today about the capitol as to whether adoption of the resolution without the emergency clause permits the referring of the question to popular vote.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 28. —The House of Delegates today adjourned until Monday without consideration of the resolution ratifying the National Woman Suffrage amendment. A resolution was introduced rejecting the amendment, but went over until Monday under the rules.

The Senate was in session only a few minutes, adjournment being taken until Monday afternoon as soon as the suffrage ratification resolution was reached.

SECOND ATTACHMENT SUIT NAMES HUNTINGTON SMITH

Collinsville Bank Seeks to Secure Notes With Funds on Deposit in St. Louis.

Suit was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday against C. V. Huntington Smith, formerly of 4435 Westminster place and now residing at Stamford, Conn., by the First National Bank of Collinsville, Ill., to attach funds now on deposit to his credit in the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. to secure promissory notes executed by him in 1915. This is the second attachment suit filed against Smith within a week.

Last Wednesday an attachment suit was filed against Smith and his wife, who was Miss Caroline Lackland, granddaughter of the late Rufus Lackland, St. Louis banker, by the B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co. as a result of Smith's failure to pay bills aggregating $334.92 at downtown stores before he moved from the city about a year ago. The amount involved in the Nugent store's suit represented the sum owed by Smith to several stores, which assigned their claims to the Nugent Co.

KILLING OF WOMAN AT GRADE CROSSING CAUSES $10,000 SUIT

Other Actions Against Burlington in Prospect as Result of Accident in Which Passenger Died.

Suit for $10,000 was filed yesterday on behalf of the estate of Mrs. Margaret M. Lutzenberger against the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Co., on account of her death in a grade-crossing automobile accident in which her husband, John C. Lutzenberger, 1204 North Leffingwell avenue, their nine-months-old son, and Lutzenberger's mother, Mrs. Ida Turley, also were killed. The accident occurred Feb. 8 last, at East Grand avenue and the Burlington tracks, when a Burlington passenger train struck Lutzenberger's automobile.

It is alleged that the train was going at a "negligent rate of speed, 40 miles an hour," and that the defendant "negligently and carelessly failed to maintain a safe crossing where the accident occurred, thereby enticing the occupants of the automobile into a dangerous position by its failure to exercise ordinary skill and care." It is further charged that no warning sound of the train's approach was given until it was too late for Lutzenberger to stop his car.

John Menown, attorney for the plaintiff, said that other suits growing out of the same accident are to be filed.

PROHIBITION 'PARAMOUNT ISSUE'

Bryan in Telegram Says New York Action Puts It Ahead.

By the Associated Press.

DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D., Feb. 28.—William Jennings Bryan, in a telegram to J. H. Bloom, Democratic State leader, tonight declared enforcement of national prohibition would be the paramount issue in the coming presidential election.

The action of the New York Democratic convention in advocating the nullification of the prohibition amendment by the State Legislatures, the telegram said, makes the enforcement of prohibition the paramount issue until the "outlawed liquor traffic ceases to menace the homes of the land."

MEDAL POLICEMEN TO WEAR SERVICE BAR

Character of Insignia and Rules for Its Award Announced by Police Board.

Medal policemen-patrolmen or others who, each year henceforth are to be awarded a gold, silver or bronze medal for extraordinary service—will be distinguished by a service bar to be worn outside their uniform coats and at all times, according to plans made known to the department by the Police Board yesterday.

The bar will be of blue enamel, in the center of which there will be either a gold, silver or bronze four-pointed star in the middle of which will be the letters, "D. S.," (Distinguished Service); "M. S." (Meritorious Service) or "H. M." (Honorable Mention), according to the medal which the holder is entitled to wear.

Rules for Awards.

The rules for the awarding of the medals annually, as made known by the board are:

"The award of the gold medal-and-bar shall be based upon evidence of distinguished service, one requiring an act or acts of bravery, great physical courage and risk and danger of life.

"The award of the silver medal—and bar—shall be based on evidence of meritorious service of a superior character, but not of the outstanding excellence of the preceding award.

"The award of the bronze medal—and bar—shall be based upon evidence of acts, work or service worthy of honorable mention, but not of the outstanding excellence of the preceding award.

"The medals and insignia shall become the personal property of the recipients."

The awards are to be made at the time of the annual parade, review and inspection of the department, which is usually held in October of each year.

In addition to these medals and bars, the board authorized the awarding of a gold medal to the best shot in the department each year. The highest score will be determined by a match shoot between all policemen making a general average of more than 70 per cent in annual practice. This medal will be awarded at the same time as the others.

Shea First to Get Gold Medal.

The first man in the department to receive one of the medals was Patrolman Harry J. Shea, Angelica Street District, who killed one and put to flight five other robbers who were attempting to rob the Water Tower Bank, Jan. 21. Patrolman Shea was wounded in the battle with the robbers. As a reward he was promoted from a probationary patrolman and named as the first recipient of a medal.

Shea will receive his medal—a gold one of the Distinguished Service variety—at the inspection and awarding of medals the latter part of the year.

$550 EARRINGS MISSING AFTER MAN EXAMINES DROSTEN STOCK

Tells Salesman Who Displayed Jewelry That He Would Send Wife to Make Own Selection.

A pair of diamond earrings valued at $550 was missed from a tray in the store of the F. W. Drosten Jewelry Co., 900 Olive street, at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after a well-dressed man had inspected the stock. The police were informed and detectives were assigned to the case.

The man told E. W. Bornmueller, a salesman, that he wished to purchase a pair of screw earrings for his wife, and after handling several pairs, departed, saying that he would send his wife in to make her own selection.

A few minutes later, when he was about to replace the tray in the case, Bornmueller missed a pair of earrings set with two 1 9-10 karat diamonds. He described the visitor as wearing a fur-collared overcoat, tight-fitting brown suit, light fedora hat, and having cigarette-stained fingers.

Both the city and county Republican organizations worked together for the selection of Schmoll and Essen, and there was no opposition.

Newton's Work Indorsed.

The convention adopted resolutions indorsing the work of Cleveland A. Newton, Representative in Congress of the Tenth District, and the administrations of two Republican State officeholders, State Auditor George E. Hackman and State Superintendent of Public Schools Samuel A. Baker.

Jacob L. Babler, Republican National Commiteeman from Missouri, was indorsed, and the two delegates instructed to vote for his reelection at the national convention.

A resolution declaring that the convention was "unequivocally opposed to the Federal prohibition amendment" was also adopted. The resolution held the Eighteenth Amendment to be "unreasonable and against public policy because of its interference with the rights of the states as guaranteed by the Constitution," and its speedy repeal was urged.

Direct Vote on Amendments Asked.

The prohibition resolution also urged that an amendment be enacted requiring subsequent constitutional amendments to be submitted to the direct vote of the people for ratification.

Before adjourning the convention indorsed the reservations to the peace treaty as set forth in the majority report of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The convention was attended by 211 ward and township delegates, a third of whom were women, and by about 100 other county and city Republicans. Dr. Charles H. Pope, member of the City Committee from the Fifteenth Ward, served as chairman, and George Coombes of the Thirteenth Ward as secretary.

JAPANESE DIET DISSOLVED IN FIGHT FOR UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The fight in Japan for universal suffrage resulted in the dissolution of the Diet last Thursday, by imperial decree. The Emperor's action was taken at the request of Premier Hara, cable advices today from Tokio said. It followed violent scenes in the lower house.

A new election of members of Parliament must be held within five months. While it was elected more than two years ago, the dissolved Parliament held its first session Christmas day. The Government last month brought forward a measure extending the right of franchise to males whose direct tax exceeded three yen.

Although excluding the entire body of labor, farm laborers and mechanics, this measure was described as a considerable enlargement of the restricted suffrage list and the Government was said to have desired to test it by the election of a Diet before consenting to measures of further extension. The opposition party, the Ken-Sei-Kai, made an issue, however, of the measure, and was joined by the Ko-Kum-ino party, which previously had supported the Government in most of its measures.

Without awaiting a test vote, which might have amounted to an expression of a lack of confidence in the Cabinet, Premier Hara applied to the Emperor for a writ of dissolution and it was granted.

LOWER PRICE TREND IN CATTLE MARKET

Values Are Off 50c to 75c for Week; Hogs Are Steady.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Prev. week.	Last year.
Cattle	19,124	19,369	19,765
Hogs	84,476	85,919	91,064
Sheep	4,899	10,613	4,374
Horses and m.	6,361	6,294	4,058

Although receipts were moderate, the cattle market failed to hold its own under the pressure of constant pounding from packers all week. The trading was off 50c to 75c for the week, which brought the market not only to the lowest level for the year, but to the lowest mark since February of 1918. Some cattlemen express the belief that cattle values have fallen around $4 to $5 per cwt. since the first of the year.

According to those well posted in this branch of the trade, there are numerous factors in the decided break in steer values. The one most potent, however, appears to be the decrease in foreign exports, which is consequently throwing tons of additional beef in domestic channels, which at present is not capable of caring for the extra supplies. Another factor in the break is the annoying legislation against the packing industry now in progress in Washington.

There was an abundance of steers on sale the past week, and the offering ruled just a few points better in point of quality, the run carrying more of the long-fed classes. A drove at $13.50 and one at $13.35 were the best, while a spread of $11 to $12.50 caught bulk of best cattle. Plainer grades moved from $9 to $11 chiefly. Some of the cheaper steers got better action and were little more than a quarter lower for the week.

Heifers were good sellers, as were most offerings of good quality yearlings. Competition was rather keen between city butchers and packers, which tended to keep values up. A range of $10 to $12.75 caught the bulk of better grades, while plain kinds sold chiefly from $8 to $10.50.

There was good action on cows selling above $7, and these likewise were stronger on the week's trading. Bulk of best beef cows sold from $8.50 to $10.50, while a spread of $7 to $8 caught most veals. Canners, on the other hand, were slow sale, and mostly 25c lower, selling as low as $4.50 in some instances. Bulls ruled steady to strong, with best call for the plain grades of sausage bulls.

The market on stockers and feeders was quiet, and the outbound movement was of very little consequence. Bulk of steer sales were steady, except on heavy weight feeders, which showed a decline of a quarter more in sympathy with killing steers. A range of $8 to $10.25 caught the week's sales. The movement for the month of February in this branch is some 6000 head short of the movement during February of 1919.

Had it not been for the outside competition on calves, the vealer market would have dropped to new low levels also. City butchers paid up to $18.25 for a few veals early, but late packers were buying most of their prime calves around $16, and their highest bid for the week was $17.75 on a handful of calves. Yearlings suffered a decline of a quarter, selling down to a nickel in some spots.

Curtailment of shipping demand caused sharp declines in the hog market the early part of the week, but all of this loss was recovered and the net change for the week is hardly noticeable. The fact that prices here were sharply above other western centers was unfavorable to packer operations and demand from that source was limited. The week-end found best light hogs selling within a range of $15.10@15.40, as against a spread of $15@15.35 the previous Saturday. Medium weight hogs closed from $15@15.25, strong weights $14.50@15 and heavies from $13.85@14.25. Good weight pigs were fairly active all during the week, and show little, if any price change. The best are quotable from $14.50@15.25. Good rough sows are selling from $12.50@12.75 at this time, or about steady with a week ago.

Trading in sheep the past week failed to develop any features of importance and the market closed practically where it left off a week previous, the only exception being lambs, which are slightly lower as a result of the weakened tone at Chicago and other Western points. Best lambs are quotable at $20.25, whereas they were selling at $20.70 a week ago. Fair to good lambs are worth $19@20, medium kinds $17@18.75, feeders $16@17.50 and culls $12@16.50. Fat sheep go unchanged at $13@13.25, with canners from $4@5 and choppers and bucks from $6@8.50. Receipts for the period were very light, only 4799 all told, or less than half of the number handled last week.

The local horse market opened a shade off from the good tone of the previous week, but soon regained the same trend. Although the receipts were rather large from day to day there was no great difficulty in disposing of the receipts.

Good miners and big fleshy mules experienced the principal demand throughout the week's trading. The market opened about steady with last week and retained the same pace all through the week. The Southern trade has been rather good and values remain about the same.

PREDICTIONS OF INCREASED RECEIPTS GOVERN CORN MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Anticipation of possible improvement in traffic conditions after railroads are returned to private ownership gave considerable advantage today to bears in the corn market. Prices rallied at the last, however, and the close was unsettled, 1¼c net lower to 1⅝c advance, with May $1.36⅝ to $1.36¾ and July $1.31 to $1.31¼. Oats gained ¼c to ¾@⅞c. In provisions the outcome ranged from 10c decline to a rise of 12c.

Gossip current among traders was that somewhat more liberal receipts might well be looked for under changed methods on the railroads. Hopes of an increase were also stimulated by forecasts that temperatures next week would average below normal, and that probably therefore country roads would remain hard instead of being rendered difficult by spring mud.

The selling side also was favored because of talk that the Government reports on farm reserves of corn would show a good-sized surplus. Closing up of February contracts, however, and week-end adjustment of trades brought about a spirited rally in the final hour of the session.

Oats paralleled the action of corn. Eastern demand was fairly good.

Provisions were ruled largely by sentiment in regard to grain. Hog values received little notice.

St. Louis Lead Market.

Lead was quoted here today at $8.85 per 100 lbs.; slab zinc, $9 asked per 100 lbs.

CORN MARKET SHOWS WIDE PRICE SWING

Trading for Week Is Active, Owing to Removal of 200,000 Bushel Limit.

Removal of the 200,000-bushel limit on corn futures gave the market an active swing on the Merchants' Exchange the past week, but prices showed considerable irregularity after a sharp advance. The market ignored a good run of corn in primary makets, and also indications of a big stock of corn on the farms, which will be shown by the March statement of reserves. Oats futures were somewhat irregular with corn, but the market rallied as the week closed.

Sentiment as to corn is rather badly mixed, but the majority leans to the dull side. The continued excessive high price of the cash grain over futures and excellent demand for the cash article on all the weak spots makes for a strong position against bears, who are compelled to sell the futures at a very wide discount. The fact that corn nearly always advances at this season of the year also is a big card in the market's favor, as a year ago prices gained about 50c a bushel during this season.

The sellers declare, however, that the position of the market is really bearish, owing to lack of export demands for our grain, and possibility of large stocks in the country at the end of the old crop year. The fact that wheat prices have been showing a lower drift, and that supplies are excessive, also makes for much bearishness as to the ultimate price at which the May option will expire.

New York Curb Market.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The Broad street curb market, while no longer specially influenced by the liquidation which had been in progress for several weeks on the exchange, was subjected to pressure during the past week because of a supply of similar character directed to necessities of those who had been concerned in trading in the outside market. Many of the issues which had been active in other times were pressed for sale, causing substantial declines, but toward the end of the week some of these stocks were in better demand, the supply apparently having been absorbed by those concerned in the various properties.

General Motors was specially influenced by the expected approach of the completion of the "when issued" contracts by delivery of the stock, as the temporary certificates are to be traded in on the exchange during the coming week, and that stock yielded from 27 to 23, with a rally yesterday to above 24. General Asphalt was one of the weak features, falling from 87 to 76.

The petroleum stocks were heavy during a good part of the week, but showed a better tone in the past two days. Carib Syndicate, which sold at extremely high prices toward the end of the past year, yielded from 38¾ to 25, followed by a rally to 27. Homer Field stocks were weak for a time, but also moved up at the end of the week. International Petroleum sold down from 56, but became strong as a result of the announcement of the issue of new stock, advancing to 66. Simms Petroleum, after selling down from 35¾ to 33, rallied to 36½, and White yielded from 29½ to 26, followed by a rally to 27¾.

MARCH COTTON ADVANCES TO 38.25, NEW HIGH RECORD

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—An active covering movement in March cotton contracts advanced the delivery to 38.25c today, a new high record, and carried May up to 35.07c and October to 30.03c. The new crop positions were not so strongly supported, the close being 28 points higher to 9 lower, but there was a more bullish feeling noted in the entire list and spot news continued firm, one wire from North Carolina stating that cotton was held in strong hands and that holders were demanding and getting 40c a pound.

Concerning the situation in March, ideas differed much, some believing that the position is well liquidated, while others contended that there are still large lines outstanding, some estimating them as high as 50,000 bales. The market opened steady, with December 6 points lower and others unchanged to 8 points higher. A little selling by New Orleans occurred at the opening and there was moderate pressure from local houses on a report from Fall River to the effect that mill activity was threatened by a strike of coal handlers, but the demand for March contracts soon asserted itself, and with a bullish interpretation of weekly statistics, the strength of the stock market and steadiness of foreign exchange, brought about a steady uplift of prices, which reached its climax near the close.

The local stock sale of about 400 bales has been made to a Southwestern firm and the cotton, it is understood, will be moved out for export.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

Closing Prices on Liberty Bonds in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Final prices of Liberty Bonds today were: 3½s, 94.34; first 4s, 90.20; second 4s, 89.40; first 4¼s, 90.90; second 4¼s, 90.04; third 4¼s, 92.30; fourth 4¼s, 90.20; Victory 3¾s, 97.36; Victory 4¾s, 97.36.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The Evening Post, in its weekly financial review says:

"This has been a singularly interesting week on the Stock Exchange. It was so because it presented the spectacle, in an unusually striking way, of a group of investment securities whose evident tendency was to advance substantially on the basis of news which seemed to warrant such a movement, but which were dragged back, as soon as the advance was fairly well under way, by tightening money.

"At bottom, this was naturally a matter of speculative buying and its handicaps. Anyone who had money lying idle in banks and who wished to buy Nek York Central or St. Paul or Reading or Missouri Pacific, could do so without fear of the money market. If there were enough of such buyers, prices would rise on their buying alone. But the great bulk of buying on the Stock Exchange is done with borrowed money, whether on a 'margin' or in bulk, and such buying will be automatically checked, when, with time money already at 1 and 7½ per cent, the rate on call loans goes up from 6 per cent to 10 or 15.

Markets of the Past.

"In the old times a legitimate demand of the sort, especially if foreign trades and the foreign exchanges were favorable to this market, would draw on international reserves. The high money rate on Wall Street would cause transfer of capital from London or Paris to New York. The resultant fall in foreign exchange would bring in European gold, restore bank reserves and break the tight money market. Today money rates at Paris and London are 2 to 5 per cent below New York, but French and English capital is not free to move.

"Exchange on New York is further below the normal 'gold export point at London, than it has ever been in our history; but a London bank deposit cannot be cashed in gold, and export of gold from England is not allowed by the Government, except in the case of the Transvaal mine product, which goes to the bidder of the highest premium, and that bidder is not New York.

"This anomalous situation partly explains the stock market, partly the money market and largely the recent predicament of the Federal Reserve. The Reserve Bank, as its ratio to reserve to liabilities went on declining after last November's heavy strain, advanced its rediscount rate twice, but apparently without the least effect. Now, whenever the Bank of England raises its rate, in years before the war, foreign exchange would instantly move in favor of London and gold would come from abroad.

"Our own central bank does the same thing, and the machinery will not work. The higher the bank rate may have accelerated the movement of Europe exchange rates in our favor, but the tangible relief which used to follow such a fall in rates does not result.

"Neither European capital nor European gold moves in our direction. Even the Eastward rush of Western bank credits, which used to occur in response to a rising New York money rate, fails to occur. Interior deposit banks and interior reserve banks have their hands full with protecting their own reserves.

"What then, is to be the outcome as regards either money market or Stock Exchange? Renewal of speculation for the rise on any considerable scale would seem to be out of the question, so long as the reserve position remains what it is. The New York Federal Bank might repeat its policy of December and borrow from other Reserve Banks, turning over its own rediscounts to those institutions, and thereby reducing its own immediate liabilities. But that would merely defer the difficulty; it would do so, moreover, at a time of year when the East ought to be preparing to help the West, not the West the East, and when, therefore, the process would merely serve to accentuate the midsummer or autumn strain.

"There is no escape from the conclusion that use of credit ought to be restricted with the utmost prudence, and that its employment in the extension of speculative undertakings ought to be regarded with the greatest circumspection. If the development of the new order of things in railway shares or railway bonds should turn out to have been relatively undervalued in the market of the past few months, the change would show itself (as it has begun to do already) in their position relative to other groups of investment securities. But the market cannot possibly do more than this under present conditions."

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Gains outnumbered losses at the opening of today's stock market, but the undertone indicated further diversions of speculative sentiment. This was shown by the movement of rails, some of which supplemented recent advances, while others were subjected to realizing sales or bear pressure.

Rock Island was again a conspicuous feature, advancing to a new high level for the current movement after an initial decline of 1¼ points. Motors, oils and shippings also strengthened at the outset, but steels and equipments were moderately reactionary, though rallying within the first half hour.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY
GERMAN MUNICIPAL BONDS
We are convinced that the lowest prices for these bonds are now a matter of record.
The price of most German City bonds have increased from 25 to 100% within the last 60 days. One bond which sold two months ago for 1000 marks is today selling for 1950 marks in Germany. Another bond which 30 days ago sold for 990 marks is now selling for 1675 marks. These increased prices were not caused by any appreciable rise in the exchange market, but are the result of the enormous demand for these securities.
Some of these bonds have advanced $3 to $5 over the prices we quoted early in the week. A few of the issues can still be had at the old prices, such as BERLIN 4s at $16, HAMBURG 4s at $17, MUNICH 4s at $19, BREMEN 4s at $16, GOVT. 4s at $15 and GOVT. 5s at $18, but we expect them to advance at any moment. German exchange is advancing every day, which will further increase the price of bonds. Place your order for bonds today.

Looks Like Branch Rickey Will Stand Pat on That Knot-Hole Plank in His Platform

Missouri Defeats Washington Quint for Second Time

Pikers Put Up Hard Fight, but Lose to Valley Basket Champions, 34 to 27.

45 FOULS ARE CALLED

Victory Gave Tigers 16 Straight Conquests for Season—Al Marquard Stars.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 28.—The University of Missouri basket ball team gained its sixteenth consecutive victory at Rothwell gymnasium tonight. In order to keep their record clean the Tigers had to battle harder than in any contest this season. They defeated the Washington University five, 34 to 27, after 40 minutes of fiercely contested play.

The Pikeway players looked like a different team than they were Friday night, and at no stage of the game did the valley champions have a commanding lead.

Probably the main reason for the improved showing of the Pikers may be attributed to the work of Al Marquard, who scored his first field goals against Missouri in three years. Marquard has never been able to play up to his usual standard against the Tigers. However, tonight he scored four field baskets and played a beautiful floor game.

45 Fouls During Contest.

One indication of the close play is established by the fact that 45 fouls were called during the game, 27 of these being personal fouls. Lippert, the Pikeway center, was put out of the game early in the second half for committing four personals, and Marquard was sent to the pivit position, being replaced by Thompson at forward. This shift somewhat decreased the efficiency of the St. Louisans' attack.

Missouri hopped into the lead with a field goal at the start of play, but the advantage was short lived. Time and again the locals forged to the front but Rutherford's men always evened the count. The score at the close of the half was 17-16 in favor of Missouri.

Washington took the lead for the first time about three minutes after the resumption of play, when with the score 18-18, Wackher committed a personal foul under his own basket as Marquard netted a beautiful field goal. Referee Young allowed the basket and two free throws which Russell counted on.

Missouri tied the score with a field goal and two foul tosses, but Marquard came back with a shot from the center of the court. This was the Pikers last time in the lead, as Scott tipped the ball in the net during a mixup and from then on it was pretty much Missouri.

Coach Rutherford sent in an entirely new team during the last two minutes. The lineup:

CONNOLLY WINS SOUTH ATLANTIC MILE HONORS; SEVERAL MARKS BROKEN

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 28.—More than 500 athletes from colleges, universities and athletic associations in the East took part in the great indoor meet held jointly by Johns Hopkins University and the Fifth Regiment Athletic Association tonight. Over 4,000 persons saw several South Atlantic records shattered.

The fastest time ever recorded in this section over an indoor course was established when, in the one-mile South Atlantic championship run, J. Connolly of the Georgetown University dashed the distance in 45 minutes 30 seconds.

In the one-mile relay between the University of Pennsylvania and the New York Athletic Club there was another sensational performance. The Quakers beat their opponents after an exciting struggle in 3 minutes and 34 seconds.

By two feet R. Reed of Yale defeated R. Crawford of Lafayette College in the 100-yard special race. A large field followed the pair home.

Pennsylvania State won the one-mile and three-quarters medley relay race in 7:38 4-5, equalling the world's record.

MISS BAUER SETS MARK WINNING SWIM EVENT

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 28.—One world's record was shattered tonight in the Central A. A. U. swimming championships. Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois Athletic Club negotiated the 100 yards back stroke for women in 1:22. Miss Bauer's former record for the 75-foot pool was 1:24 4-5.

Clement Brown of Chicago A. A. took another C. A. A. U. title from W. I. Wallen, I. A. C., by winning the 880 yards in easy fashion. Wallen lost the mile title to Brown two weeks ago.

Two Tigers Go South.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 28.—Archie Yelle and Frank Okrie, the only Tiger players to start the annual pilgrimage to the South from Detroit, left tonight for Macon, Ga., accompanied by a number of newspaper men and photographers. Other players will join them en route or go direct to the training camp from their homes.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Reds of the Boxing Game.

RUSSIA hasn't all the Reds—the local boxing world has a few who fly the Soviet slogan of "divide or die." Just now these are mining and countermining the Future City Athletic Club with a view to bombing out of his defenses that veteran supporter of St. Louis rings shows. Tommy Sullivan.

Sullivan, after ten years of labor and sacrifices, during which there were times when he did most of his walking on his "uppers," and when the merry tinkle of two dimes in his pocket was as rare as a Senegambian albino, has finally attained a successful season. Thanks to an uplift in the game, and to his own good match making, practically all of Sullivan's Coliseum shows this year have netted a profit. Some of them have yielded as high as $3000 or more net.

The dollar hounds have scented this, and are trying to cut in. The promoter of one local club has tried to get the Coliseum away from Sullivan; he failed. Persons with influence want to "chat" with Tommy about certain affairs. A new club is already being talked about; demands of fighters and helpers are mounting.

Even "Angels" Grow Weary.

SULLIVAN has earned any prosperity accruing to him. He started the Future City Athletic Club about ten years ago. Fifty per cent of the matches did not pay the guarantees and Tommy's "angel," Marion Lambert made good the deficits so often that after about three years he tired.

Sullivan tried the club "on his own," but ran into debt. New backers were injected into the club's system, but eventually the club again went to the wall. Even the ring was taken for debt.

Sullivan tells how the late Kid Becker loaned him money enough to get started again; but even then real prosperity failed to come as war came on and hampered his success. This is the first year that boxing has yielded a bumper crop since he has been in the business.

Boxing Promoters All Fail.

BOXING has not been a profitable business for independent promoters, here. Charles Haughton eked out a scanty living at it, but graft ate up his profit and he quit the town.

Succeeding promoters have sprung up, but one by one they have all gone to the wall. In fact, until Sullivan's success of the present campaign, no promoter in this city has been able to make consistent profits out of the game.

And yet they are threatening Sullivan's future, once more.

Sports, Not Sportsmen.

SPORTSMEN are numerous, in this country. They are men who can view a contest with an unprejudiced eye and with a mind free from animus. They can appreciate the good points of the fellow who loses, even though perhaps their friendship may incline them toward the opposing man or team. They are slow to give tongue to complaints; they do not give voice to personal bias, and they have in their hearts the saving grace of charity.

There are others who think they are sportsmen, but who, in reality, are mere sports. These are men who sit in judgment on contests and contestants before the event takes place; men of warped vision, seeing only the things that weave in with their own views or serve their own ends; men ready with the raucous complaint, based on feeble foundations; men who thunder denunciations of views they do not share, whose minds are not open to conviction, and who cannot put themselves in the other fellow's place, under any circumstances. Needless to say, charity dwells not in them.

Kabby Kept His "Goat."

There were thousands of sportsmen at the Kabakoff-Regan bout; but also there were some hundreds of sports. The last were they who booed and jeered when Kabakoff entered the ring and again when he was introduced. Some of these men deliberately did this in the hope of getting the Kabakoff "angora;" some of them did it from mere elemental, racial antipathy; others did it because they were Regan admirers and wanted to show where they stood.

It was with real pleasure that impartial persons noted that Kabakoff rose superior to the hostility, kept his poise and showed that the enemy had utterly failed in the purpose to get his "goat" by giving Regan the severest beating that fighter ever received in his life, for the first two rounds.

Kabakoff had not deserved bad treatment at anybody's hands. He had been a good fighter; had given his best, every time he boxed; and, so far as was known, had done harm to nobody.

Surely a man who attends to his own business, does his best and climbs to a considerable altitude through merit, is entitled to freedom from the petty insults of mere prejudice.

Real Fighting Spirit.

FIGHTING spirit—not the kind they bottle—frequently runs 100 proof. Probably no fighter in recent years represented a higher type of ring aggressiveness and courage than that shown by St. Louis' leading featherweight, who came back from the verge of slumberland and drove through to victory over a boy who seemed to outclass him.

It was typical of the man that, after the fight, in the dressing room he remarked, not "did I win?" but did I put up a good fight?" It was also he who, after being knocked out by Kid Herman because he tried to make a weight six pounds below his minimum, told friends who asked how he came to be knocked out: "I got knocked out because he hit me so hard," with never a reference to the real cause.

Regan, in the ring, is as eager as a terrier. Never clinching, never asking sympathy or quarter, he comes back harder and harder, each round. He reacts favorably under punishment and never battles so well as just after he has been punished. He is a veritable Berserker, fighting furiously, from instinct.

Another Queer Angle.

IF Regan and Kabakoff meet again, as now appears probable, there will be another surprise in store. This will be due to a circumstance that safely may be forecast in advance, namely: That Kabakoff, although twice beaten by Regan, will enter the ring favorite.

This is assured by developments showing that an injury to Kabby's hand caused his bad showing after the second round. During the two periods when his hand was sound, Kabakoff all but annihilated his opponent.

Murphy Captures Speedway Event

Averages 103 Miles an Hour—Vail Finishes Second—Winner Gets $10,000.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 28.—Jimmie Murphy, long known to automobile racing men as a mechanician, made his initial western appearance as a driver today and won the Los Angeles Speedway 250-mile opening race and $10,000 first prize money. Murphy came from behind when Joe Boyer, who had been in front for 44 laps, was forced to the pits by a broken connecting rod that put him out of the race.

Murphy's time for the 250 miles was 2h. 26m. 17.69s., or an average speed for the distance of 103.2 miles an hour.

Ira Vail came in second, capturing $6000 prize money, and Joe Thomas was third, winning $3000. The newspaper scorers all had Thomas ahead of Vail, but the official timing device gave the latter second place.

No serious accidents marred the race. A thrill was sent through the ician, made his initial Western apmechanician skidded on the end turn of the big oval, after a front wheel broke. The car rocked and bounced along, throwing both of them clear. Neither man was hurt.

The crowd today taxed the capacity of the grounds.

U. S. Boxers Win in Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 28.—Johnny Griffith, American pugilist, won on points from Albert Badoud, welterweight champion of Europe, in a 20-round bout tonight at the Cirque de Paris. "Soldier" Bartfield, American, forced Pionnier, Frenchman, to quit in the ninth round of their 10-round bout.

Texas Aggies Win Title.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Feb. 28.—The Texas Aggies won the Southwestern conference basketball title last night by defeating Texas University, 27—9. The Aggies finished the season without losing a game.

Yale Takes Hockey Game.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Yale defeated Princeton in a hockey match here tonight, 6 goals to one.

Bandy Challenges Regan and Kabby

Fractured Hand Is Healed and South Sider Will Be Ready to Box in April.

Eddie Vandeventer, who fights under the name of Kid Bandy, has issued a challenge to Kid Regan and Harry Kabakoff to box for the near-featherweight championship of St. Louis. Harry Uhlemeyer of the South Broadway A. C. yesterday questioned the right of Regan to claim the city championship, in view of Bandy's victory over the Ghetto Ghost early this season in a bout at the South Side club which was heralded as a feathweight title event.

In that bout Bandy showed that for courage he is unsurpassed in local fistic circles. After being made to look like a novice in the early rounds, Bandy rallied and despite a fracture of the right hand, suffered early in the contest, he turned the tide, buffeted Kabakoff all over the ring, inflicted severe punishment on the Ghetto Ghost and was given the verdict over Kabby by four of the five newspaper judges.

Bandy, who received only a little more than $300 to Kabby's $700 for the bout, was unable to work for several months, because of the injury. Because the fracture was not properly set the first time it had to be rebroken several times and for a time it was feared that Bandy would lose the hand.

Now the hand is virtually healed and physicians have advised Bandy that he can begin boxing again early in April. Bandy certainly deserves a bout and his popularity indicates that his appearance would attract a good house.

In the bout with Kabakoff, Bandy, according to Uhlemeyer, weighed 126 pounds at 3 o'clock, whereas Kabakoff, according to the same authority, weighed 128 pounds.

Uhlemeyer said Bandy a few days ago weighed 135 pounds, but that he easily could make 126 pounds at 3 o'clock for either Kabakoff or Regan.

Penn Beats Dartmouth.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Pennsylvania defeated Dartmouth, 45 to 10 in an intercollegiate league basketball game here tonight.

Manager Rickey And 28 Players Depart for Camp

Cardinals Will Hold Their First 1920 Workout Tomorrow at Brownsville, Tex.

Twenty-eight members of the Cardinals, chaperoned by Manager Branch Rickey, departed at 6:30 o'clock last night for Brownsville, Tex., where the initial practice session of the squad is scheduled to be held tomorrow afternoon, three hours after the team's arrival. The other members of the Knot-Hole gang will report at Brownsville, while Vern Clemons is scheduled to join at Little Rock thi smorning.

The squad which departed last night was one of the largest that has left under the wing of a St. Louis manager in many a season. The doings of the Knot-Holers should be interesting because of the many players. When Rickey's entire squad reports he will have 41 tossers in camp.

Three members who were on the unsigned list affixed their names to the papers yesterday. They were Pitchers Jacobs and Woodward and Infielder Harold Janvrin. Jacobs accepted terms several days ago, but the official signing did not take place until yesterday. Woodward and Janvrin brought their contracts along.

Janvrin, who resides at Winthrop Beach, just outside of Boston, stated that there was enough snow in the East at present to last until next July. He said that when he started for the station two days ago, he had to put his trunk on a sled and haul it himself, as all traffic was tied up.

Doak to Develop Curve.

Spittin' Bill Doak, the veteran right-hander, arrived here yesterday and looks to be in better condition that he has for some years. If the spit-baller gets off on the right foot he will be of great assistance to Rickey. Doak said that he would try to develop a curve ball during the summer, so that he would not be forced to quit in 1921, when the major leagues have decreed the spitball must follow the path of the other freak deliveries.

Jess Haines, the right-hander, who was purchased from the Kansas City (American Association) club was another who arrived early. Haines proved to be a rather husky chap and when asked to step on the scales he tipped the beam at 180 pounds. Rickey expects Haines to be one of his regular boxmen this year. He won 21 and lost five at Kansas City after joining late in June. His earned run record was 2.12 per game.

The athletes in the party which departed last night are: Pitchers Koenigsmark, Lambrecht, Cardner, Hatchard, Keck, Jacobs, Haines, Sherdell, Doak, Schupp, Schultz, Mead and Woodward; Catchers Dillhoefer, Dunn, Trout and Roth; Infielders Blades, McLoughlin, Lavin Janvrin and Bockskopf; Outfielders Schultz, Shotten, Heathcote, Smith, McHenry and Mueller.

Assistant Secretary Clarence Lloyd, Scout Joe Sugden, Trainer Kirby Samuels and Fred Hunter, the former Pittsburg first sacker, who will umpire the Cardinal-Athletic games, also were in the party.

The squad is scheduled to arrive at Brownsville at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The uniforms have already been sent South so that no time will be lost in getting to work.

WESTERN "OPEN" GOLF TOURNEY TO START AT CHICAGO CLUB AUG. 3

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—The Western open golf championship will be held just before the national open meet, the dates as announced today by Assistant Secretary Craft W. Higgins, being Aug. 4, 5 and 6. This event will be staged on the course of the Olympia Fields Club of Chicago, while the National open will be played at the Inverness Club at Toledo. Several British golfers are expected to take part in both meets, while American golfers will invade England earlier in the season to compete for the British open honors.

The Western Golf Association today also announced that the Western Junior championship would be held at the Bobolink Club, Chicago, July 28-30. This event is open to young golfers from all parts of the United States.

The Western amateur championship was set for July when the event was awarded to the Memphis Country Club at the annual meeting of the association in January.

The Western open was won last year at Mayfield Club, Cleveland, by James Barnes, with Leo Diegel of Detroit runnerup. The amateur title was won at Sunset Hill Club, St. Louis, by Harry Legg of Minneapolis, with Richard Bockenkamp of St. Louis as runnerup.

CLAY COURT NET EVENT GOES TO CHICAGO CLUB

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—The Clay Court tennis championship was awarded to the South Side Tennis Club of Chicago and the Western championship and sectional doubles to Cincinnati, O., at the annual conference of the Western Lawn Tennis Association today. The Clay Court contests will be played July 10 and the latter event on July 21. The women's national Clay Courts championship is to be played at Detroit, Mich., on June 21, it was also decided.

Northwestern Lands Meet.

Burke Is Pleased With Showing of Young Infielders

Browns' Manager Praises Gene Robertson and Mullen, St. Louis Youngsters.

TAYLOR, Tex., Feb. 28.—Jimmie Burke this afternoon sent his peppery crew of baseball athletes through the longest and most strenuous work the players have indulged in since arriving here. Practice was called off in the morning because of a drizzling rain. Shortly after lunch the sun broke through the clouds.

Although the ball players comprising the squad have been working out only three days Burke is pleased with the manner in which a majority of the men have rounded into condition. This afternoon the players whipped the ball around the big pasture in mid-season fashion.

Jimmy Austin is in shape. Old "Peppers" has been playing ball out on the coast all winter. Kenneth Williams is in shape. He is a wonder, this Williams always wants to hit.

Joe Gedeon played ball in Sacramento, and he, too, is ready right now for the tap og the gong. Johnny Tobin is in better condition now than he ever has been at this time of the year. He seems to be faster than ever before and he is cracking the ball with greater force.

Pat Collins needs to take off a little weight and he is somewhat stiff as the result of his hard work since landing in camp. However, his arm is in fine shape.

Severeid to "Take it Easy."

Burke is going to let Hank Severeid take things slow for a while. Hank says he has recovered entirely from his operation last winter for appendicitis. Just a little hitting practice will be about all the work Severeid will do for some time. Hank can also help out by warming up the pitchers.

"I like this young Mullen, the St. Louis boy, very much," said Burke today. "He is a great kid and is going to develop into a dandy hitter. Mullen takes a corking good swing at the ball. He has the nerve and he is a youngster. He needs nothing more than careful coaching.

"This fellow Roy Richmond looks like he has a world of stuff and I think he is a comer. I am going to watch him carefully and work with him on his pitching motion. All he needs is more experience, more ease of grace in his pitching form and he is bound to develop into a good pitcher."

Burke sent the squad through the usual routine workout and after the players had thoroughly warmed up all the regulars and recruits excepting the pitchers who played the outfield had a long session of batting practice. Bill Burwell, Urban Shocker, Dixie Davis, Ellam Vangilder, Billy Bayne, Roy Richmond and Henry Schneider, all were called on to take their turn on the mound. The more one sees of Dixie Davis the greater impression this young man makes. He bears all the marks of a hurler who is destined to stick and make a great showing in the American League circuit. Davis has plenty of confidence and an easy, graceful motion. Davis works like a veteran on the hilltop.

Robertson's Work Pleases.

One of the pleasing features of the workouts to date has been the showing made by Eugene Robertson, the St. Louis shortstop. Robertson goes for everything sent his way on the field and the speed he displays in making quick and snappy throws to first and second has caused Manager Burke to state that "Bobbie" surely improved radically after being given a regular job with Joe Tinker at Columbus last fall. At this stage of the training season, it appears that Robertson is going to make Walter Gerber hustle hard in order to hold his position as a regular between second and third.

The lone sore arm in camp is owned by Harry Strong, the recruit first sacker. Strong continued to work hard today in an effort to get his thowing whip in condition. In case he is unable to work out the soreness before the game next Tuesday against Texas University it is likely that Johnny Shovlin will play first base. Shovlin practiced there today.

Manager Burke today stated that it was his intention to hold a practice session tomorrow afternoon. Baseball games are not permitted on Sunday in Taylor, but it is presumed that no objection will be made against the Browns holding a practice game at Athletic Park.

SISLER AND JACOBSON WILL DEPART TONIGHT

George Sisler, the Browns' star first sacker, and Bill Jacobson, the hard hitting outfielder, are scheduled to depart for Taylor, Tex., tonight. They will arrive at the training camp of Burke's aggregation tomorrow evening and will get their first practice Tuesday.

Sisler was given permission to remain here until he had finished a drawing for a local concern, while Jacobson was held over at his home in Illinois because of business. Both of the players are in good physical condition.

Mickey O'Neil Signs.

Mickey O'Neil, St. Louis boy who last year was signed by the Boston National League team will depart tonight for Columbus, Ga., to join the Braves at their training camp. Mickey last week forwarded his signed contract to the Braves management.

Prizes for Fishermen.

The Mermod-Hill Fishing contest, open to sportsmen of Missouri and Illinois, will carry prizes in the various classes. There are three prizes for the heaviest small mouth bass taken with fly; heaviest small mouth bass taken with artificial bait; heaviest big mouth bass with fly or artificial bait; heaviest rainbow trout taken with fly. Blanks should be brought to 811 Locust street.

Sparta Quintet Spanks Kenrick Shooters, 35--9

Local Championship Contenders Suffer Their First Defeat of the Season.

Kenrick High School's basketball team, after running up a string of 10 consecutive victories and establishing a firm grip on the local championship, ran into a snag yesterday afternoon when it suffered a one-sided defeat at the hands of the Sparta (Ill.) Township High School quintet, 35 to 9. Kenrick had defeated all the local high school quintets it could book games with and Soldan is the only rival of Kenrick for the city scholastic title.

Brother John, coach and manager of the Kenrick five, said Sparta had a wonderful team and a wonderful player in Minner, who alone scored 27 points against the locals. Minner eluded opponents who sought to guard him and shot baskets from all angles and apparently without taking the trouble to look at the cage.

The game was played in the Sparta gymnasium and the St. Louisans were handicapped by the low ceiling and narrow court. An attempt was made to book a return game on the local or a neutral court, but with the season drawing to a close the Sparta officials indicated it would be impossible.

Soldan High School, leader in the Interscholastic League basket ball race, continued its fast pace last night defeating Cleveland, 29—16, in the opening game of the double-header on the Cleveland court. The conquest was the fifth straight of the season for the West Enders. At the end of the first half, Coach Plag's quintet was ahead, 12 to 5.

Play in the opening half was slow. The West Enders were passing excellently, but their goal shooting was off color. Sensational guarding by Gazzolo and Lynn kept Cleveland from running up a larger score.

Starting the second half, Cleveland spurted at the start, but tired near the finish. While Soldan's passing was not as good as throughout the first period, the shooting was better.

Center Long was the individual star of the game. Long, before he was forced to leave the game because of four personal fouls, shot goals from any angle. Stephenson also played well for the pace-makers. Bartlett proved the best basket shooter for the far south entry.

It was announced that next Saturday's games would be played in the afternoon, commencing at 2:30 o'clock, instead of in the evening.

NAVY WINS 4 CORNERED ATHLETIC CARNIVAL

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 28.—The Navy won a four-cornered bill of athletics here this afternoon, all of the contests being decisive. The boxing contest with Pennsylvania State College furnished the greatest attraction and all of the bouts were strongly contested. The midshipmen scored twice on technical knockouts in the second round and three by decisions, while Friedman of Pennsylvania State gained on a decision in the 125-pound class after the three regular rounds and one extra round of two minutes. The bouts in the light-heavy and heavyweight were the ones that probably would have resulted in clean knockouts, but for the fact that they were stopped by the referee, Billy Rocap of Philadelphia.

Next in point of interest was the wrestling in which the Middies won everything over Columbia by a score of 13 to nothing. Five bouts resulted in falls and one no-decision. The Middies won at swimming from Massachusetts Institute of Technology by the score of 36 to 17, and thereby maintained a clean slate. The Yale fencers were no match for the Middies, the latter winning 12 out of 14 bouts.

MICHIGAN COMMISSION BARS RING DECISIONS

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 28.—Referee's decision in boxing bouts in Michigan will not be permitted, the State Boxing Commission ruled at a special meeting here recently.

The commission's ruling was given on the petition of a local club that proposed to stage matches in which the referee instead of the newspaper men would determine the victor. It was also announced by the commission that in the future no clubs would be permitted to offer bonuses for knockouts.

Each association is entitled to send three delegates to the meeting, which will be held on the same day as the National Amateur Athletic Union indoor championships.

Announcement of a manager for the meeting and it is believed in athletic circles that this position may go to Matthew P. Halpin of the New York Athletic Club, who successfully guided the American teams at Athens, London and at Stockholm.

The Board of Governors of the A. A. U. announced the personnel of the group to attend the congress of the International Amateur Athletic Federation to be held at Antwerp, the week previous to the opening of the Olympic games. The men appointed are: Gustavus T. Kirby, Philadelphia, president of the A. A. U.; Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the A. A. U.; M. Joseph B. Maccabe, Boston, and Everett C. Brown, Chicago.

CUBS DEPART FOR COAST; BARBER IS ONLY HOLDOUT

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Twenty-two members of the Chicago club of the National League departed tonight for spring training quarters at Pasadena, Cal. At Kansas City, Mo., the team will be joined by five more men, including Pitchers Vaughn, Tyler and Alexander, who have been practicing at Hot Springs, Ark. The players will begin training next Wednesday.

The only holdout, it was announced, is Turner Barber. All other players have signed except Charles Deal, who is expected to do so at Pasadena, where he is to join the team.

PROFESSIONAL BOXING IS BARRED IN IOWA

DES MOINES, Io., Feb. 28.—No more boxing bouts in which a fee is paid the boxers, or any charges are made for admission, either direct, or indirect through the "club" plan, will be held in Iowa, Attorney-General H. H. Havner said last night. He declared he had no personal prejudice against the sport, but he intended to see that the Iowa laws are obeyed.

Duck Hunting in Alberta

Sportsman Tells of Excellent Shooting Found at Canadian Lake, Where a Fleet-Winged Canvas-Back Led Him a Merry Chase.

By Paul E. Page.

I pushed my boat into a point of rushes in an Alberta lake in the gray of a frosty September morning last fall. There was a tinkle of breaking ice and shower of white frost from the rushes as the boat pressed them to one side.

I had set out my decoys consisting of nine ducks, no two alike, and one black sea brant. These I had borrowed from the farmer with whom I was stopping, who told me he had had them from his father, who used them on the salt water marshes years before in Eastern Canada. One was interesting to me, it being made of cork with a wooden head fastened to the body with two copper nails, with ends split and driven through the body and clinched over the weight lead on the bottom. It was about the size of a bluebill, but what it was painted to represent I could not guess, as I never before saw any bird like it either awake or in dreams.

In front of my blind was an open strip of water, perhaps 80 yards wide. To the north this open water extended for a quarter of a mile and to the south a good half mile. Back of me was a solid bed of rushes clear to the shore of the lake cut through by one narrow strip of water through which I had made my way to the blind. Out in front and beyond the fringe of rushes that bordered the strip of open water there was a continuation of rushes and open patches of water for nearly a mile. The map showed the lake to cover some 5000 acres.

To the south and distant some two miles was another grass lake of about the same size and to the east another of about 200 acres.

I had come to the lake the evening before over the protest of friends who told me there was never any shooting on this lake. The location looked good to me on the map and I came in spite of protests. My farmer host told me the evening before that there were a few ducks and now and then a flock of geese on the lake, but not many.

I amused myself waiting for the legal sun-up by watching the eastern sky. It was a riot of color of ever-changing position of clouds. At last came the rim of the sun above the horizon and in a moment it hung a big red ball above the rushes, and the realization of a duck hunter's dreams was mine. Sunrise and a grass lake in the wilderness of a duck country.

Suddenly my ear caught the faint "Eleke-ela" of a bunch of brant. High up over the center of the lake they came, their white wings scintilating in the bright sunshine. Then opposite me they pitched down in a tangled mass of outstretched legs and necks, and woke the echoes with their chatter.

This unseemly disturbance of the quiet morning appeared to get on the nerves of a hen mallard who was probably having a dry dream out in the rushes beyond my blind. At any rate she got up with a loud quack of protest and started up the lake screaming her opinion of the whole brant family and of that particular bunch. As she flew and talked, other ducks followed her from the rushes, and in a twinkling a hundred flocks were on the wing. These flying down the center of the lake woke up the laggards in the south end, and they rose in a mass and came whirling over the rushes and up the lake.

My first shot doubled up a lone widgeon and at the report of the little 16-gauge, ducks jumped from the rushes as far as the eye could see. They came by me in singles, doubles, flocks and droves. Great flocks of blue-winked teal swept by over the open water, hundreds in a flock and less than 40 yards from the blind. Big grain-fed mallards flew by and over the blind and looked in wonder at this unknown invader of the marsh that was making so much noise. There were redheads in bunches, platoons and brigades. Birds that had never seen a man or heard the report of a gun.

While watching a bunch of these coming down the lake I heard a low "Honk" behind me and turned just in time to see a big Canada goose coming head on from behind me and just clearing the rushes. I nearly tipped the boat over in my effort to get a shot at him and did center him after he had flown directly over me at not over four feet from my head, and as he was going from me. In spite of the No. 7 shot he doubled up in bunch and fell in the edge of the rushes out in front of me, from where he slowly drifted into the rushes.

From far down the lake I spotted a canvasback coming up flying close to the water. He passed me, and though I led him all of eight feet at not over 40 yards distance I saw the shot strike in a bunch all of 40 feet behind him. He was away out of range before I could get in another shot. This chap was some speed king, all right. He fairly burned up the air. I saw him alight at the upper end of the open water where he commenced diving and feeding, and I kept a watchful eye in that direction.

Out of the corner of my eye I caught a glimpse of a bluebill making a sneak from behind me and turned in time to double him up and send him with a splash and bound to keep company with my big goose. He hit the water close to where the goose had drifted and much to my surprise, here was Mr. Goose sitting up on the water with neck outstreched, apparently as wide awake as he ever was. I wanted that goose and pushed the boat out of the blind and poled after him. He could and did swim as fast as I could pole the boat and after chasing him up the lake for 200 yards or more and not getting within range, I decided to cut through the fringe of rushes and stalk him from the other side and out of his sight. We met head on at the end of the rushes and up he sprang not six feet from the bow of the boat. It took three ounces of No. 7 shot to stop him. I picked him up and decided to gather up my other goose and a number of ducks I had in the water before returning to the blind. I shot three mallards, all greenheads, from the boat while on my return.

I got back to the blind in time to see that the canvasback at the upper end of the open water get up and start my way. I got into swing with him 60 yards before he was in range, led him all of 40 feet at about 40 yards distance and as near as I could tell got him in plumb center of the charge. He never missed a wing beat and sailed on to the lower end of the open water and out of my sight. He surely could fade away and out of the landscape faster than anything I had ever seen.

In an hour I had enough, more than enough, and put away the 16 gauge and took up the 22 automatic. I did, however, keep the shotgun close at hand where I could grab it in case that greased lightning of a canvasback took a notion to try another round with me.

In my next story I will tell you what I did with the rifle.

RENTS IN VICTORIA BUILDING GO UP 50 TO 100 PER CENT

Tenants, Except Those Holding Long Term Leases, Notified They Must Pay Higher Rate or Vacate April 1.

SECOND INCREASE IN WEEK BY SAME FIRM

Charges for Space in Granite Building Also to Be Doubled by Williams and Bland Company.

Tenants of the Victoria Building, northwest corner of Eighth and Locust streets, with the exception of those occupying storerooms on the first floor under long-term leases, were notified yesterday afternoon by the Williams & Bland Real Estate Company, 717 Chestnut street, agents of the property, that they would have to vacate by April 1 or pay increased rentals, the proposed increase ranging from 50 to 100 per cent.

As the office manager's woman assistant went from floor to floor serving written notices her journey was followed by indignation meetings, at which tenants paid their respects to the owners of the property in no uncertain terms.

This is the second office building in which a general raise in rent has been ordered for April 1. Within the last week tenants of the Granite Building, southwest corner of Fourth and Market streets, who rejoiced last September upon being notified that the realty concern managing the property would not join the rent-advancing movement so popular among St. Louis landlords, were somewhat disconcerted as a result of a notice sent out that their rents would be increased, in some instances as high as 100 per cent, beginning April 1. Williams & Bland also are agents for this property.

224 Offices and Shops in Building.

There are eight floors above the ground floor in the Victoria Building, divided into 224 offices and shops. The smallest rooms in the group, formerly used as bathrooms when the building was occupied by the old St. Nicholas Hotel, rented for office use at $10 a month, and the largest room in the group, occupying the space of three average sized office rooms, rented for use as a tailor shop for $115 a month.

The rent increases at the Victoria Building were figured on a basis of space, each being increased at the rate of $1.50 to $2 a year for each square foot of floor space occupied. Consequently a tenant occupying 600 square feet in a choice location was ordered to pay an increase at the rate of $1200 a year, or $100 a month.

In most cases the smaller offices, formerly used as bathrooms, were advanced from $10 to $15 a month. A tailor on the third floor complained because his rent had been increased from $35 to $60. He said that only two months ago it was increased from $25 to $35. A two-room suite, overlooking an alley, on the fourth floor, was advanced from $50 to $100 a month, and several tenants occupying single rooms were notified of an increase from $30 to $51.50.

Complains at Charge for Lights.

Some tenants complained because the agents issued a notice several months ago that rentors would have to pay for their electric lights at the rate of 1 cent a kilowat for each lamp of over 75 kilowatt power.

The building was purchased about two years ago by a company headed by a man by the name of Sacks. He formerly was employed as a mail assorter at the St. Louis Post Office, later became a lawyer and then went to Oklahoma, where, it is said, he made a fortune in oil. He is said to reside now at Tulsa, Ok.

The tenants in the Granite Building last week expressed surprise that the attitude of the real estate company could change in so brief a time. Several recalled that in September they had been assured that the company would rather deprive itself of the money to be derived from rent increases than lose the good will of the tenants.

In announcing the proposed rent increases at the Granite Building, the company stated that an audit of the building's account showed that in 1919 the net earnings amounted to only $3743. The agents declared that the property was valued at $125,000, and should yield at least a return of 5 per cent, which would make the net income $10,750.

New Basis for Rents.

Robert S. Williams, a member of the real estate firm, in explaining the increases, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the owners of the building, the Tyler estate, desired to standardize the rentals. In the past, he said, the offices were rented for whatever sum could be obtained. In the future the rents will be based on $1 a month for each square foot in the rooms facing the street and 90 cents a square foot for rooms facing an inside court.

He said that the stimulation of realty values in the district in which the building stands, by the erection of the new International Fur Exchange at Fourth and Market streets and the proposed new Federal Building at the southeast corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets, also was considered in deciding on the increases.

Our Industrial and Agricultural Problems Analyzed by Hoover

the very life of the nation depends, again decreases, and their ability to buy food from abroad decreases in train with their fallen productivity, because they decrease the production of goods to send in exchange.

"One other result of large industrial development is that, in times of industrial prosperity, when the standard of living rises in general industry, it attracts into its radius the agricultural population and immediately creates inroads into agricultural production. To some extent this is a natural balancing for forces which tends to stabilize. But there are social and political phases more important than sheer economic balances.

Agricultural Productivity.

"Years ago our predominant export was food. Then we turned to importing mouths for an expanding industry and our net export food surplus diminished to a low ebb until the beginning of the war, when it received a special and temporary stimulus. By and large our industries have been in a high state of prosperity. More favorable hours, more favorable wages, are today offered in industry than in agriculture. The industries are drawing the workers from our farms. If this balance in relative returns is to continue, we face a gradual decrease in our agricultural productivity. If we should develop our exports of industrial commodities during the next five years as rapidly as we have during the past five years, we shall by that time be faced with the necessity to import foodstuffs.

"Some economists will argue, of course, if we can manufacture goods cheaper than the rest of the world and exchange them for foodstuffs abroad, we should do so. But such argument again ignores certain fundamental social and broad political questions. These dangers have become more emphasized by experience of the war. From dependence on overseas supplies for food, we will, by the very concern that will grow in public mind as to the safety of these supplies, soon find ourselves discussing the question of dominating the seas.

"Our international relations will have become infinitely more complex and more difficult. Unless the league of nations serves its ideal, we will need to burden ourselves with more taxation, to maintain great naval and military forces.

"But of far more importance than this is that social stability of our country, the development of our national life rests in the spirit of our farms and surrounds our villages. These are the sources that have always supplied our country with its true Americanism, its new and fresh minds, its physical and its moral strength. Industry's real market is with the farmer by the constant increase of his standard of living. We want our exports to grow in exchange for commodities we need from abroad, but we want them to grow in time with our social and political interests and to do so they must grow in step with agriculture.

State of Agriculture.

"Therefore, when we sit down to consider our reconstruction policies from the war—when we sit down to plan the future development of our country—our first thought should be of the state of our agricultural industry. For the last three months I have been a member of the Industrial Commission at Washington, endeavoring to find some solution for the conflicts and social wrongs that have grown up in our industrial community. Great as is the need for constructive thought with regard to its weaknesses, the need for similar thought and similar activity is still greater with regard to agriculture.

"The prime problem is to make the agricultural industry economically attractive so that it draws into its service the full proportion of American life—so that it can keep pace with industry in its rapid development.

"When we come to the consideration of practical measures we soon arrive at two primary facts. The first is, the farmer's main production must find its market either in the great industrial centers along the Atlantic seaboard or, alternatively, in export to Europe.

"In either case, the prices in normal times are made primarily by competition with the other great sources of the world's food supply. His prices are thus only remotely regulated by the cost of production. Strict economists will argue that, if the prices are unprofitable to the farmer, it will ultimately correct itself by diminished production and consequent general rise in the world level of prices.

"Amongst the complex flow of economic forces today, these results come very slowly, and in the meantime the actual result is mainly a decrease in the standard of the farmer's living. For the farmer must plant and gamble in advance on the demand. He can not decrease his production to meet such contingencies with the facility of organized industry. Whatever the economic argument may be, the outstanding fact is, for all practical purposes, the farmer's level of prices is made by the world prices of food as interpreted at the point of delivery and during wide periods of time he is underpaid. On the whole he has not been underpaid during the war, but recently the tide has begun to turn against him.

Wide Margin in Prices.

"The second great fact that would be developed in inquiry is that the American farmer receives a less proportion of the consumer's purchase price for his product than the farmer of most other civilized countries. That is, the margins between the farmer and the consumer is the widest in the world. This margin comes partly out of the consumer, but predominantly out of the farmer, for, as I have said, the prices to the consumer in the great food commodities in normal times are fixed by world forces. If we assume the basis of price is not to be remedied, the line of practical remedy to the farmer lies in decreasing the cost of placing his products into the hands of the consumer. Every cent that we can decrease this cost contributes to the consumer, but even more largely to the farmer.

"If we analyze the weaknesses of our system of distribution, we can, for purposes of discussion, divide it into three phases: Their transportation, their manufacture in preparation for the consumer, and the agencies of distribution.

"Our transportation has been under continuous discussion for 40 years with ever tightening regulations. I believe the great majority of our people are opposed to nationalization. Nevertheless, I doubt whether there is anyone in the United States who is not completely seized with the necessity of rigorous regulation. We are about to return the railways to private ownership under generous terms and, as I have said elsewhere, private ownership is now on its final trial.

"The proprietors have now to demonstrate their initiative, that they can maintain a right relation to their employes; that they can maintain their administrative efficiency; that they can keep out of national and local politics; that they can conduct these operations in the sense of complete service to the community. If it shall fail in this latter respect, our people in reaction will probably be prepared to sacrifice something of its ideals in other directions, for the supreme test of efficiency is human service.

Railway Situation Measures.

"I wish to point out one weakness in our present railway situation as bearing upon the farmer. Everyone knows of the annual shortage of cars during the crop moving season. Few people, however, appreciate that this shortage of cars often amounts to a stricture in the free flow of commodities from the farmer to the consumer. The result is that the farmer, in order to sell his produce, often unknown to himself, makes a sacrifice in price in local glut. The consumer is compelled at the other end to pay an increased price for foodstuffs due to the shortage in movement.

"In proof of this, on one occasion a study was made under my administration into the effect of car shortage in the transportation of potatoes, and we could demonstrate by chart and figure that the margin between the farmer and the consumer broadened 100 per cent in periods of car shortage. Nor did the middleman make this whole margin of profit, because he was subjected to unusual losses and destruction and took unusual risks in awaiting a market. The same phenomenon can be proved at times of shortage of movement in corn and other commodities.

"The usual remedy for this situation is insistence that the railways shall provide ample rolling stock, trackage and terminals to take care of the annual peak load. This, however, imposes upon the railways a great investment in equipment for use during a comparatively short period of the year when many commodities synchronize to make the peak movement.

"It imposes a burden on the entire cost of transportation. This burden of extra equipment will probably always be held to so low dimensions that we will never escape the annual delays in transport and stricture in market. Aside from this question of a peak load, we have no doubt fallen behind in the provision of even normal railway equipment during the war.

Help From Waterways.

"I would like, however, to recall another partial remedy for this situation advanced many times by our engineers. That is, the possible help from improving of the waterways from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard by way of the St. Lawrence River so as to pass full sea-going cargoes. It has already been determined that the project is entirely feasible and at comparatively moderate cost. The result would be to place every port on the Great Lakes on the seas. Fifteen states contiguous to the lakes could find an outlet for a portion of their annual surplus quickly and more cheaply to the overseas markets. The result would be to take off a considerable portion of the peak load on the trunk line railways during the great crop movement season.

"It would contribute materially to reduce this effectual stricture in the free flow of the farmers' commodities to the consumers. Of far greater importance, however, is the fact that the costs of transportation from the lake ports to Europe would be greatly diminished and this diminished cost would go directly into the farmers' pockets. It is my belief that there is a saving of five to six cents a bushel in the transportation of grain. Although a comparatively small proportion of our total grain production flows to Europe, I am convinced that the economic lift on this minor proportion would raise the price of the whole grain production by the amount of saving in transportation.

"The price of export grain in Chicago in normal times is the Liverpool price, less transportation and other charges, and, if we decrease the transport in a free market, the farmer should get the difference. Not only should there be great benefits to the agricultural population, but it should be a real benefit to our railways in getting them a better average load without the cost of maintaining the surplus equipment and personnel necessary to manage the peak load during the fall months. It has been computed that the capital saving in rolling stock alone would pay for the entire cost of this waterway improvement over a comparatively few years.

Employment for Trade Fleet.

"The matter also becomes of national importance in finding employment instead of expending vast sums on the development of our tracks, rolling stocks, terminals, of the trunk line railways, that we should effectually substitute the other arm of transportation which we have already built, that is, our fleet.

"Another factor in transportation bearing upon the problem of marketing is the control of food manufacturing and marketing concerns of refrigeration and other specialty types of cars. This special control has grown up largely because, owing to seasonal fluctuations over different roads, no one railway wished to provide sufficient special cars and service for general use by all manufacturers.

"The result has been to build up the domination of certain concerns and stifle free competition. Much the same results have been attained by special groups in control of stock yards, and, in some cases, of elevators. Where such formal or informal monopolies grow up, they are public utilities and, if the farmer is to have a free market, they must be replaced by constructive public service.

"The second point of attack in reduction of the cost of marketing farm produce lies in the insistent removal of every impediment to free trade in produce. We have some commodities whose manufacture has grown into such units that these units exert such an influence that they can consciously or unconsciously affect the price levels of the farmers' produce.

"Again, I am not a believer in nationalization as the solution, but I am a believer in regulation. The experience I gained in the food administration on these problems during the war led to the feeling that I have expressed at that time, that such business should be confined to one line of activity just as we have had to confine our railways, banks and insurance companies.

"Even this may not prove to be sufficient protection to free market by free competition. If we have to go to regulation, however, it is my belief that it should be confined to over-swollen units and that the point of departure should not be the amount of capital employed, but the proportion of a given commodity that is controlled. The rates must depend upon the commodities in point. When such a concern obtains dimensions that it can influence prices or dominate public affairs either with deliberation or innocence then it must be placed under regulation or restraint.

Large Business Operation.

"I think our people have long since realized the advantage of large business operation in improving and cheapening the costs of manufacture and distribution, but when these operations have become so enlarged that they are able to dominate the community, it becomes of social necessity that they shall be made responsible to the community. The test that I would apply, therefore, is not the size of the institution or the volume of capital that it employs, but the proportion of the commodity that it controls in its operations.

"It is my belief that if this were made the datum point for regulation, and if regulation were made of a rigorous order, this pressure would result in such business keeping below the limit of regulation. Thus the automatic result would be the building up of proper competition because men in manufacturing would rather conduct a small business free of governmental regulation than to enjoy large operations subject to governmental control. In other words, what we fundamentally want is to be free from domination of any artificial impediment in the free flow of commodities to the consumer.

"The third point of attack at reduction in the cost of marketing is the most difficult of all. It lies in the fact that we have too many people engaged in distribution of food supplies. This is particularly the case in the retail end of distribution. There is one town in the United States that had one meat dealer to every 400 of population—and although their margins were very wide, none of them made more than a bare living. The numbers engaged in distribution have naturally increased rapidly during the war inflation and speculation such as we have gone through in the last five years. In such a period, much profits are earned by the simple process of marking up the price of the goods on the shelf to the cost of replacement. I am not at all sure that we shall not find a great measure of remedy, both to the producer and the consumer, now that the tide of inflation must soon turn, and there may be a process of marking down the price of the goods on the shelf instead of marking them up.

"In this connection, it is worth noting that, although agricultural products increased, yet the total commodity production of the United States has decreased by nearly 7 or 8 per cent during the last 18 months. At the same time deposits in our credit banks have increased nearly 20 per cent. No one can defend this terrible increase of inflation since the armistice. It is scarcely possible for a dealer in commodities to have escaped this magic wand of profits. If we have a wise and steady reduction in inflation, it will be a skillful dealer who escapes a reduction in the scale of profits.

"Whatever the result of this process may be to the distributor, it will reduce the margins between the producer and the consumer. It may also reduce the numbers of persons engaged. Great wisdom will be required on the part of our Government in its great control of credit that this deflation shall take place progressively and with care, in order that there shall be no sudden breaks with their resulting demoralization, unemployment and misery.

"One of the most effective measures in reduction of the cost of distribution has been co-operative distribution among producers. We have some successful marketing co-operatives. They have proved their value both to the producer and the consumer. We have, however, never had the development of co-operation to the extent that European farmers have attained. To reach its best results, co-operation must grow on parallel lines by the consumers. As co-operative marketing does not reduce initiative or competition. I have never seen the bogy of Socialism in it.

"There are other directions by which the costs of distribution can be constructively reduced on behalf of the farmer and consumer. For instance, many of our products are unstandardized; if they were standardized they could be sold by contract instead of by doubtful inspection on delivery.

Need of Trade Board Inquiry.

"We need an exhaustive economic and practical investigation into our great national boards of trades, with view to extending their legitimate functions or preventing their abuse. The economic value to the farmer of having a daily national price created by the ebb and flow of absolutely untrammelled trade in central markets has never been fully appreciated.

"In commodities where such trading is wholly or partly unorganized, enither the farmer nor the consumer has any protection as to determination of the right price and the margins between consumer and producer widen at once. Wider margins between producers and consumers is always a measure of hazards. When there is free and public market these hazards decrease. The abuses of exchanges lie, of course, in the possibility of maniplation of their processes to create artificial prices for speculation. It is within their own powers, and there is a growing tendency among them to eliminate these abuses. The war proved a great laboratory of experience in those matters, and the whole subject needs study and review.

"Another field of interest in agriculture to engineers lies in its mechanical equipment. Our American engineers have replaced manual labor by machines to a remarkable degree. This mechanical development has raised the whole econmic and social status of our farmers to a point far above his European cousin. There is yet a great field of engineering for further assistance to the whole industry.

"It is in all these directions that I believe lies the best field for restoration of balance between agriculture and industry. We want our industries to develop, but we want agriculture to keep pace. So long as we can feed our industrial population, the greater industry grows the greater is our whole community.

"The organization and the processes of production and distribution are of centuries of development. This economic organism has come to have an extra delicacy in its adjustment, in its response to stimulus, to effort, to the ability and character of all of the varied members of our community. Sudden disturbances and the introduction of 'sims' into this delicate organism can only bring us difficulties—can only reduce our productivity and tax our entire standard of living.

"We want to improve our machinery, we do not want to tear it down. Nor do we want it owned or run for the benefit of a few. The whole impulse to the maximum functioning of our productive machine lies in the self-interest of its members. It will never function on the basis of altruism. If we would have it function properly we must promote that equality of opportunity which allows every member of this community to attain that position to which his abilities and character entitle him.

To me, therefore, the test of the rightness of any measure is that it shall maintain and build up the quality of opportunity, that it shall preserve the initiative of the whole population. When we apply this test to governmental activities, I think we will find that it reaches its ideal more in negative than in positive action; that it should become positive only when the initiative—such as a Panama canal—is beyond the capacity of individuals or groups; that it reaches its best exemplification in wise regulation against the shackling of the flow of competition, the advancement of understanding of the processes of production and distribution, stimulus to their improvement, the removal of impediments to its development, in creating in it all a pride of service to the community.

How I Make Big Money Out of "Ornery" Horses

By J. A. BUTLER

ABOUT two years ago I witnessed up in New York State an exhibition of horse-training that opened my eyes. A man by the name of Mackley took a devil of a mean, vicious mare that hadn't been harnessed for seven months and in a few days had her gentle enough for a school girl to drive. Mackley had taken the mare off the owner's hands for $50 and just ten days after sold her for $175.00. A clear profit of $125.00 in ten days!

That started me investigating. I learned that Mackley had simply used the methods introduced by the famous horse trainer, Jesse Beery. Beery, I learned, used to go about the country giving wonderful exhibitions in colt-breaking and horse-training; but realizing that he could accomplish more by teaching his methods by mail, had given up his exhibition work to spread his horse-training secrets by mail-instruction. Mackley had studied Beery's Course in his spare time and in a few months was able to accomplish magical results with green colts and horses with bad habits.

Other Successes

Mackley's work showed me a way to make some nice money and I determined to take Prof. Beery's Course in horse-training—but before doing so I made further inquiries. Here are what a few of Beery's students said. I'll let them tell of their success in their own words.

Mr. S. L. Arrant writes: "Just to test Beery's methods, I bought the worst balky, kicking, fighting horse I could find. Paid $65.00 for him. After handling him only a few hours according to Beery's system I sold him for $135.00.

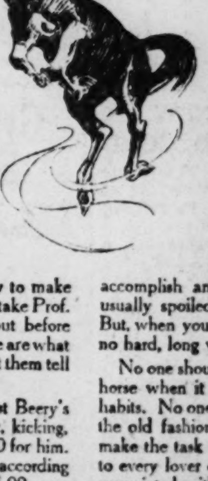
Mr. Dell Nicholson, Portland, Mich., writes: I have trained a four year old mare that was given up by everybody. Bought her for $35.00, and now have her so gentle, my little boy handles her. Wouldn't take $200.00 for her.

Dean L. Smith, Findley, Ohio, writes: By following Beery's instructions have changed a worthless, dangerous balker into a horse worth $225.00.

Everett McBlock, Elkhart, Ill., writes: Have just broken a pony to drive and taught it some tricks. Owner bought it for $17.50. Paid me $40 to train it. He just sold it to a show company for $150.00.

How I Work

The big source of my income is in buying up "ornery" colts and horses at bargain prices, and after training the animals, selling them at a good profit. However, I also pick up good money handling colts and training horses for others on a fee basis. For instance, a farmer had a beautiful driving bay that had the bad habit of shying. A piece of paper blowing across the road would set the horse crazy. The owner thought a great deal of the animal, but couldn't take chances on the shying habit. A friend of his for whom I had done some work put this man in touch with me and in a few hours I had the horse completely cured of the habit—for which job I received $50.



Curing Bad Habits

You can see from this that my work consists not only in breaking colts and "gentling" vicious horses, but in curing the various bad habits a horse can have—such as shying, balking, fear of automobiles, etc., pulling at hitching strap, pawing in the stall, etc. etc., Beery's methods of colt breaking are particularly amazing. Under the old way of handling green colts one usually had to half kill the horse as well as himself to accomplish anything—and then the colt was usually spoiled or hurt in some way or other. But, when you apply Beery's principles, there is no hard, long work or injury to the colt.

No one should have a biting, kicking or balky horse when it is so easy to cure these vicious habits. No one should attempt to break in a colt the old fashioned way when Beery's methods make the task so easy. To every horse owner, to every lover of horseflesh, my advice is to get acquainted with the Beery principles. You can not only make money for yourself, but you can do a world of good, particularly at this day when war-demands have placed a premium on horses.

Wonderful Book Free

I have been requested to state that Prof. Jesse Beery will send his remarkable booklet, "How to Break and Train Horses" free to those interested. It is a booklet well worth having as it reveals some startling information on horse-training. I have heard men who considered themselves expert horsemen say that the booklet was a revelation to them. There is no use in my going into details on the booklet when you can get it free for the asking.

Just drop a line to Prof. Jesse Beery, Dept. 1042, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, and the booklet will be sent free by return mail. A postcard will do as well as a

$1,000,000 READY FOR IMPROVEMENT OF DEL-MAR TRACT

Plans Being Hurried for Apartment Building Projects on New Subdivision at Delmar Car Line Terminus

VERY FEW OF 200 LOTS ARE UNSOLD

Options Reported to Have Been Taken on North and South St. Louis Tracts as Industrial Sites.

By Berry Moore.

As soon as plans can be made apartment house construction to the extent of $1,000,000 is to be launched in Del-Mar, the new apartment house subdivision on the north side of Delmar boulevard at the terminus of the Delmar car line. All except a very few of the 200 lots comprising this addition have been disposed of, according to Charles de Largy real estate officer of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., under whose supervision this plot has been sold in connection with the Beck Realty Development Co., composed of C. W. Beck and S. C. Hardin. A number of lots have been resold in this tract at substantial profits, although the majority of them have been purchased for early improvement with apartment buildings.

J. T. Dodge, real estate officer of the Mound City Trust Co., is much encouraged by the interest displayed in North Parkview Addition. All the unsold lots in this addition are being offered at special prices by the trust company, which placed them on sale last Sunday. They are eligible for both residences and apartments, many buildings of both types having already been erected in that addition.

As City Surveyor Dodge laid out North Parkview Addition, which is on the north side of Delmar boulevard just north of Skinker road. Accordingly he has other than a business interest in the success of that subdivision plat. This addition has finest street and surface improvements.

Activity in the subdivision sections of the St. Louis real estate market is declared to be on a highly impressive scale. With the advent of spring and sunshine, the indications are that it will acquire the proportions of a boom.

Options on Industrial Sites.

It is understood that options were obtained during the week on land in both northwest and southwest St. Louis as sites for industrial plants, the announcement of which it is expected will impart greater buoyancy to these sections, according to real estate agents.

Cyrus Crane Willmore reports decided demand for lots in Southampton, a subdivision of large extent in Southwest St. Louis, being offered by the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co., of which he is general manager, and which placed Homesites at the northwest corner of Natural Bridge road and Goodfellow avenue, on the market.

Two years ago interests identified with the Chamber of Commerce obtained an option, through Cornet & Zeibig, on 1000 acres not far from Southampton, with plans for an industrial subdivision similar to that launched at Natural Bridge road and Union boulevard, under auspices of the Mercantile Trust Co. Possibilities of this character prompted the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co. to purchase all the unsold lots in Southampton, which are now being closed out by special sales.

Harry E. Prettyman and T. A. Knoeblock are almost swamped with buyers for both homes and business sites in Northwest St. Louis. They have recently placed on the market several new Natural Bridge road plots. These are fast being sold, the purchasers being both speculators and home seekers.

Profits to Speculators.

According to Prettyman and Knoeblock, many lots are being resold at snug profits. These agents, representing A. R. Schollmeyer, David P. Leahy and others, have acquired much land in the Natural Bridge road district.

NOTABLE INTEREST REPORTED IN SUBDIVISION OFFERINGS

According to reports from Kommers, Johnston & Johnston, who are operating in Columbus Park, Bircher Heights and Blakemore Place, sales of lots have exceeded their anticipations.

This firm sold out Wilson Heights in one day. It has 22 salesmen who have produced more than $70,000 in vacant property in the last eight days. It is one of the most aggressive in the St. Louis subdivision field.

WINDERMERE HOTEL SOLD FOR $80,000

West End Property Having More Than 100 Rooms Bought by Poultry Company Head.

The Windermere Hotel building and site at the northwest corner of Delmar boulevard and Clara avenue, has been purchased by Harry Green, president of the American Bag and Poultry Co. The price paid, it is understood, was nearly $80,000. The sale was effected by John W. Watkins & Co.

The building comprises 100 rooms, exclusive of large hall, billiard and dining rooms, and occupies a lot 135x156 feet. The seller was Charles R. Meston, a former resident of St. Louis.

Watkins also effected the sale of a lot 33x135 feet on the south side of Westminster Place improved with a 10-room residence, 4224 Westminster place to Dr. Wm. M. Smit. The seller was Miss Letticia Parker.

UNITED DRUG BUILDING COMPANY NOTES TO YIELD 6 PER CENT

The real estate loan department of the Mercantile Trust Co. is offering to investors, under the name of "Baby Notes," the $100 6 per cent first mortgage real estate serial notes of the United Drug Building Co., a corporation controlled by the United Drug Co. of Boston. The notes are also in $500 denomination. Thus the notes have been placed within the means of both small and large investors, according to J. B. Moberly, manager of that department of the trust company.

The total issue, $1,750,000, is backed by mortgaged property valued at $3,000,000, the payment of principal and interest being guaranteed by an irrevocable 20-year lease of the property to the United Drug Co. The indebtedness is to be liquidated in 14 years, and the net return to purchasers is to be 6 per cent.

HOME ADJOINING GOVERNOR'S RESIDENCE SOLD FOR $25,000

Edward L. Bakewell, through his brother, McNair Bakewell, reports the sale of the residence at 4512 West Pine boulevard, for the account of Arthur Barret, to E. T. Stanard, for a reported consideration of $25,000.

Tre house is just west of Gov. Gardner's home, and is considered one of the most handsome residences in the central west section of the city. After making extensive improvements, Stanard will occupy the place.

Bakewell also announces that his brother has sold three other residences, two in Parkview and one in the central west section, at from $25,000 to $30,000 each.

MOTOR COMPANY LEASES PARTLY IMPROVED SITE IN WEST END

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. has leased to the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. for Keyes & Marshall Bros., on the north side of Delmar boulevard, 157 feet west of Taylor avenue, 230x350 feet. Part of the site is improved with one-story buildings, some of which are under lease to the Columbia Taxicab Co. The lessee will get possession of the entire property Sept. 1, but meanwhile will occupy a section of the improved part and will make extensive alterations and repairs when possession of the whole is obtained.

The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. represented the lessors.

Pennsylvania Building Leases.

The Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Co. has leased to the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. the second and third floors of the Pennsylvania Building at Tenth and Olive streets, to be used for one department of its general offices, at a rental of $15,000 a year. The company also leased a room in the same building to the Kohler company of Wisconsin, a large distributor of plumbers' supplies, for display quarters.

Residence at 6309 Pershing Sold.

T. O. Moloney, president of the Moloney Electric Co., has purchased the residence at 6309 Pershing avenue, in Parkview, and will occupy it after May 1. The Hewson Realty Co. represented Moloney and Edward Bakewell Realty Co. represented John Bauer, the seller.

Burmeister Buys Beneke Home.

Adolph Burmeister has purchased the 13-room home at 3826 Flora boulevard of Ferd A. Beneke. It is modern and sumptuously finished.

R. D. W. Baldauf Joins Brinkop Co.

R. D. W. Baldauf is now with the Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co. Baldauf, who is well-known in real estate circles, will represent the Brinkop company in North St. Louis where he lives.

He was formerly president of the Real Estate Salesmen's Club.

Olive Street Lot Sold.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. announce the sale of a lot 100x155 feet on the south side of Olive street, beginning 150 feet west of Newstead avenue, to Rudolph Brock, for Mrs. Charles W. Nugent.

U. S. RUBBER CO. LEASES BUILDING TO ENLARGE BRANCH

Nonresident Interests Declared to Be Fast Absorbing Vacant Space in City's Business Sections.

The United States Rubber Co., held to be the largest rubber concern in the world, has leased the nine-story building at the northwest corner of Washington avenue and Sixteenth street, through the Mercantile Trust Co., agent for the Maffitt estate, owner of the property.

The building, a third of which has been occupied by the rubber company for several years, has a frontage of 115 feet on Washington avenue by a depth of 132 feet on Lucas avenue, and comprises 90,000 square feet of floor space.

General offices of the rubber company are at 1790 Broadway, New York. It operates 50 factories having an aggregate floor area of 191 acres. Its gross sales for 1919 aggregated $2,300,000, eclipsing its 1916 record, according to the Mercantile Trust Co.

It has been prompted to enlarge its St. Louis branch by reason of the surpassing advantages of the city as a wholesale and distributing center, due primarily to its dominant geographical position, especitlly with reference to the South and Southwest.

Non-resident interests are fast absorbing vacant space in both the wholesale and retail districts of the city. Demand for space in the downtown office buildings is phenomenal, all the structures of this type being filled and having waiting lists, according to real estate agents.

BAILEY JOINS SALES FORCE OF THE BAKEWELL AGENCY

David Bailey, who for a year past was in the Government service at Washington as an expert in charge of the real estate requirements of the Ordnance Department, handling purchases and leases for that bureau, has joined the sales force of Edward L. Bakewell. He was formerly with the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co.

TEN NORTHLAND PLACE LOTS TO BE SITES FOR BUNGALOWS

Franciscus & Kunz announce the sale of ten lots in Northland place, a new subdivision, fronting on Northland and Terry avenues, owned by the Lindell Fair Grounds Realty and Investment Co., to J. W. Jones, who will improve the sites with bungalows. Jones has erected a number of bungalows in this subdivision.

GROUND BEING BROKEN FOR SIX BUNGALOWS ON HUMPHREY ST.

The Federer - Arendes - Coller Realty Co. announces that it is breaking ground on the south side of Humphrey street, 3900 block, for six California bungalows, each to have six rooms, including Dutch dining rooms, colonade openings, built-in bookcases, combination sleeping porches, sun-parlors, brick porch across entire front.

The demand for this class of bungalows has been such that two have been sold from plans, the company reports.

TRUST CO. ELECTS OFFICERS

Directors and officers of the Mound City Trust Co. have been elected as follows: Directors—H. C. Avis, Edward L. Bakewell, John F. Bambrick, C. J. Curby, J. E. Muckerman, Joseph Dickson Jr., William H. Dulany, H. W. Kuechenmeister, Samuel F. Lloyd, N. S. Magruder, Emmett M. Myers, William Pralle Jr., John C. Tobin, F. W. A. Vesper, William F. Cutler, A. G. Stifel, J. T. Dodds. Officers—N. S. Magruder, president; Joseph Dickson, vice president and counsel; J. T. Dodds, vice president and real estate officer; John C. Tobin, secretary; H. C. Avis, treasurer.

Besides doing a general commercial banking business the Mound City Trust Co. will have saving deposits, real estate, insurance, bonds, and real estate loan departments. A building at 2900 North Union avenue is being remodeled and will be opened for business about March 15.

B. E. Grace Opens Office.

Bernard E. Grace has opened a real estate office at 3605 Olive street. He is making a specialty of switch property, for which there is a great demand at this time.

Will Sell Spruce Street Lots.

William F. Bohn, as special commissioner for the Circuit Court, at the Real Estate Exchange at noon Wednesday will sell three lots on Spruce street, just west of Twelfth street. The sale will wind up an estate.

APARTMENTS AND FLATS FEATURE FEBRUARY

Closing Week of Month Marked by Several Investment Transactions in Larger Structures.

Investments in apartment buildings and in flats on an extensive scale marked the close of February in St. Louis real estate circles.

The feature of the week was the purchase by the Ivory Investment Co. of three apartment buildings at the northwest corner of Hamilton and Julian avenues, owned by C. P. Hamill of Belleville, Ill. The sale was effected by Cornet & Zeibig, represented by Ernest Edwards and Goldwasser & Dubinsky. The buildings comprise three stories and are subdivided into 18 five and six room apartments, all under lease. The buildings occupy a lot 260x128 feet.

As agents for the Ivory Investment Co., Goldwasser & Dubinsky subsequently disposed of the apartments to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dwyer, who received cash and several pieces of property in payment. The transaction aggregated $210,000.

Joseph Berkowtzky, president of the Mullanphy Belting Co., purchased a five-story apartment building at 5390 Pershing avenue, owned by clients of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., for $100,000. This building has 16 apartments of five rooms each and occupies a lot 60 by 140 feet.

Another purchase through the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte company was that by James Brooks of a three-story apartment building at 4343 Lindell boulevard. It has six apartments of seven rooms each. The price paid was $60,000.

SKINNER BROS. CO. BREAKING GROUND FOR NEW FACTORY

Two-Story Plant Will Adjoin Heater Factory at Vandeventer and Hunt Avenues.

The Skinner Bros. Manufacturing Co., one of the largest builders in the United States of industrial heaters and blow piping systems, recently commenced breaking ground for a two-story factory at Vandeventer and Hunt avenues. The new addition which will adjoin the company's present heater factory, is to have a frontage on Vandeventer avenue of 90 feet by a depth of 146 feet 6 inches on the north, and 122 feet on the south, providing a floor area of approximately 25,000 square feet. The building is to be mill construction type on concrete footings.

The first floor is to be used exclusively for the storage of heaters manufactured in the present heater factory, while the second floor will be utilized exclusively for the manufacture of blow piping systems which are now being built at the Tenth and Tyler streets factory. The cost, exclusive of the ground, will be $250,000.

The Skinner plant is located directly on the main line of the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain systems, and is served by one switch running between the present building and the addition, and two switches connect with the rear of the new plant, thus providing ample facilities for both incoming and outgoing freight.

Albert B. Groves is the architect.

The present plans also include the building of a brick or concrete garage large enough to accommodate five heavy trucks besides several passenger cars.

Page Avenue Apartments Sold.

J. I. Epstein reports having sold the Harold apartments, northwest corner of Page and Semple avenues. It consists of five three-family and one six-family apartments, renting for more than $11,000 per year. The property was sold for a client to Robert T. Wade, Alice G. Green, I. Earnest Stoklay, William J. Daniel and A. Louis Seale, all residents of the South.

Second Street Building Leased.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. has leased the four-story building at 405 North Second street to the Jos. Smith Furniture Co., to be used as a warehouse. The building contains 25,000 square feet of floor space and is owned by the Clementine Realty Co.

Truss Company Leases Building.

The Akron Truss Co. of Akron, O., has leased 119 North Eighth street. The branch store will be in charge of J. A. Argabright, who, for ten years, has been with the Judge & Dolph Drug Co. The lease was negotiated by C. M. Turley of Isaac T. Cook's office.

Pine Street Building Leased.

The Reinhert-Priesler Electrotype Co. has leased 710 Pine street through Cornet & eZibig. This company was incorporated for $50,000 last January, and claims to have a year's represented by the Federer-Arendes-Coller Realty Co.

Bungalows Nearing Completion.

The bungalows being built in the 3900 block of Humphrey street by the Federer-Arendes-Coller Realty Co. are nearing completion. They consist of six rooms, including a sun parlor and sleeping porch combination

BIG MONEY IN EARLY TABLE GRAPES
SMALL INVESTMENT—HEAVY YIELDS
HIGH PRICES—QUICK RETURNS.

At Santa Rosa, Florida, they are raising some of the finest Early Table Grapes in the world—big, rich, luscious grapes of exceptional flavor. They are ripe and ready for market before similar grapes raised in California, therefore, they command top notch prices. In 1919 the same kind of grapes sold for 20c per pound wholesale. It is conservatively estimated that a fully developed vineyard such as are grown at Santa Rosa will yield more than 8000 pounds of grapes per acre, which at 20c per pound amounts to $1600. These grapes begin to bear the second year and will last practically a lifetime. Demand unlimited. Prohibition will not affect this industry. No special skill or experience required. Grape failures very rare. Safest, most secure and profitable investment we know of.

Santa Rosa is an ideal place to live. Finest all-the-year-round climate in United States. Salt water on two sides. Sunstrokes unknown. Very healthful spot. Good, pure drinking water. Best soil in Florida. Two and three crops per year. Plenty of rainfall. Irrigation unnecessary. Good schools, churches, stores, hotel and northern people—no negroes. Superb boating, bathing, fishing and hunting. Lumber at wholesale prices. Land prices still low and good 10-acre tracts available for those who act quick. Beautiful illustrated literature, maps, etc., sent free.

Also 40-acre tracts and up for General Farming, Stock Raising, etc., and Beautiful Winter Home Lots with Water Frontage. Address Santa Rosa Plantation Co., 1067, 337 S. Dearborn st., Chicago. (c99)

WAUCHULA, Florida; combination soil grows income producing crops between rows of young orange trees until trees bear; paying crops; fine climate, helpful neighbors, schools and churches; you, too, can own a grove in South Florida; our liberal co-operative plan makes it possible; we clear, plow, harrow and fence land, build good house and barn, plant and care for trees if desired; all on easy terms; titles guarantee; write now for booklet and details. Wauchula Development Co., Box A-Wauchula, De Soto County, Fla.

IS THIS YOUR IDEA OF FLORIDA?

A little piece of land near the water, a boat, a garden, some strawberry plants and perhaps a few chickens; a vine-covered cottage among your own orange and grape fruit trees; fish and oysters in abundance; plenty of quail and game—a simple, natural, wholesome life in the open the year round—home, health and contentment. All this is within your reach at modest outlay in this beautiful land of sunshine and roses. We are on the gulf and a navigable river, also on the Dixie Highway, and we are only two hours by auto jitney from Tampa and St. Petersburg, and only eight miles from Tarpon Springs. Here we have the freedom, comfort and economy of country life, yet are within easy access of the big cities and resort centers. Our community is new and prices have not gone sky-high; living expenses are moderate. Over 100 Northern families already here. They like it—perhaps you will. May we send complete information?

On Feb. 15, Dr. Clarence E. Garrell, our beloved husband, father, brother and son, pushed back the curtains of eternity and entered to a higher reward. His life was of a short duration in this mortal realm, but it was one of constant reflection of love and tenderness to all, whose good fortune it was to happen his way. Though taken from us in the flower of his youth, his useful and brilliant career has left footprints in the sands of time, to recall the life of a man loved by all. We cannot find in the limited channel afforded by language words to express our gratefulness to all who so lovingly aided us in our sickness and at last the hours of intense sorrow.

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

K. R.—See answer to Frank Yerrick.

MARY.—A half penny of 1828 with 13 stars is worth 5c to 10c.

B. L. W.—The Island of Cuba lies in the mouth of the Gulf of Mexico.

MRS. G. W. S.—The daily papers in Pocatello, Idaho, are the Tribune and the News.

F. LANHAM.—The French phrase "Ce que femme veut" means "What woman wants."

GRATEFUL.—You will probably have to have the table refinished to remove the stains.

P. BALDERAS.—We know of no publication that has an answer column for students only.

P. D. R.—Yes, there was an unknown epidemic in portions of the South. It was not known what caused it.

FRANK JONES.—A marriage license may be used anywhere in the State, within 90 days after it has been issued.

TAX.—It is not necessary to change the name on the papers since your mother has died, but it can do no harm.

P. P.—If your cousin was in the army write to the War Department, Washington, D. C., for information regarding him.

A CONSTANT READER OF THE POST-DISPATCH.—You do not need a building permit to build a chicken house in your yard.

F. S.—There is an auto school in the Missouri Building at Twenty-second and Locust where you can learn what you wish to know.

THANK YOU.—Oct. 16, 1907, fell on a Sunday. We do not give business addresses in this column. Consult the advertising section of the paper.

C. T.—There is a list of homes in the classified section of the telephone book and the city directory. You could place the child in one of them.

JACK.—The Class 4 men of the United States Naval Reserve Force signed for 4 years in the navy, but their active service was for the duration of the war.

READER OF POST-DISPATCH.—Mrs. Helen Sheppard's address is 579 Fifth av., New York, N. Y. Address John J. Pershing at the War Department, Washington, D. C.

BABY.—The following are some boys' names beginning with "El and Em:" Elbert, Eldred, Ellis, Elmer, Emery; and some girls' names: Elinor, Elizabeth, Ella, Emma, Emeline.

MARTHA-JANE.—We can find no record of the magazine you mention. Perhaps if you wrote to the magazine you saw the article in they could give you information regarding it.

YOURS TRULY.—The little stars at the foot of a page or sometimes in the middle of a column usually stand for something that has been omitted. We do not know what the method is that you refer to.

CLARENCE.—Your father's second wife would receive the insurance money since she is the beneficiary. The $12,000 estate would be divided equally between his second wife, you and your brother.

A. E. BEARDSLEY.—The following are some monthly and weekly military publications published in Washington, D. C.: Army and Navy Magazine, Army and Navy Register, Infantry Journal, Red Diamond and Stars and Stripes.

FRANK YERICK.—If you wish to bring your relatives from Europe the best thing to do would be to write to your Congressman or Senator and ask him to take the matter up with the State Department at Washington.

H. H. AUSTIN.—The division of the property after your death would depend on the laws of the state in which you die and the laws of the state in which the property (if real estate) is located. Please give us more information.

AN ANXIOUS MOTHER.—We do not give business addresses in this column, but if you will watch the advertisements or consult the telephone and city directory you will be able to find a school.

S. L.—The best route out of Germany is probably through Holland. The method of handling the transportation seems advisable. It would be well to consult the steamship companies on the matter.

KURN JR.—You can attend the night schools in this city. If you would go to one and inform the instructor what you wish to do he would be able to advise you as to which course you should follow.

FRANK ATKIN.—When the vote was taken in the Senate on the eighteenth amendment Senator Stone voted for it and Senator Reed voted against it. In the House the three St. Louis Congressmen voted against the amendment and the rest of the Missouri delegation voted for it.

See the Circuit Attorney at the City Hall. Whoever advanced the money could sue to recover it.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(The answers given under this heading are prepared by a physician of standing, who for ethical reasons does not permit the use of his name, but who is willing to make this contribution to public health.)

R. E. B.—Yes, there is a cure for goiter besides an operation. But it depends on the kind and the condition of the individual case.

A. B. C.—Scars are caused by loss of tissue. They cannot be removed excepting surgically. The redness will, however, disappear in time.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—The white spots on the fingernails of your little girl are of no significance. They are caused by some little irregularity in the growth of the nails.

W. L. D.—If you are going to a hospital all the clothing you will need is a supply of night gowns. A change for every other day is not too often. Your physician will direct the other necessary preparations.

J. J. F.—The trouble you mention in the young and vigorous, if abstinence is being practised and it does not occur too often, is normal and need cause no worry. Ten or 15 grains of bromide of potash or soda three times a day will likely prevent them.

GRACE.—We do not recognize the disease you are asking about. Evidently your spelling is incorrect. Why not ask your physician what you want to know as he is treating you?

MILLIE.—Providing these are simple sores, touching them with powdered chlorate of potash will probably heal them. These may be mucous patches (syphilis) in which event you may be endangering others by drinking cups, etc.

WORRIED.—At your age this swelling is a condition that may be a menace to you, although it has previously disappeared under simple treatment. We would strongly advise you to lay aside your false modesty and consult a physician.

J. McC.—Two months is entirely too soon to expect a return to normal. In such an injury to the leg escape from at least some lack of perfect function would be exceedingly fortunate. We feel sure the injections are not the cause of the pains.

In loving memory of our darling baby, Evelyn Kuechenmeister, whom the Lord called home one year ago, March 4, 1919, aged 2 years 6 months:
We have lost our darling Evelyn,
She has bid us all adieu;
She has gone to live in heaven
And her form is lost to view.
Oh, that dear one, how we loved her;
Oh, how hard to give her up.
But an angel came down for her,
And removed her from our sight.
The God who gave has taken.
And heaven our darling has won.
Although our hearts are sad,
The will of God is done.
Sacred of the thought that again we will meet,
Kneeling together at Jesus' feet.
Our loss was great and we always complain,
But we trust in the Lord to meet again.
Sadly missed by PARENTS AND GRANDPARENTS.

Why I May Join Sir Oliver's Lodge

By RING W. LARDNER

TO THE EDITOR:

Though they couldn't nobody hardly call this a medium winter I guess they never before was so much talk about spiritualisms and etc. running amuck and a specially since Sir Oliver Lodge come acrost the old pond and begin telling us what he seen and heard and etc. but I don't genally take other peoples hear says as they are libel to let their imagination run away with them so at 1st. I didn't pay much tension to the talk but when a person's own personal friends tells you about haveing experiences to say nothing about haveing a few of them yourself why you can't help from beginning to think that maybe after all they's something to it.

So where as I was a ceptic a few wks. ago you might say why lately different things has came up that has kind of made me turn turtle you might say wile I haven't as yet came right out and joined the ranks of the occults why still and all they's a few things that I don't see how they could of happened on natural grounds and I thought maybe my army of readers might maybe be interested in hearing about them.

Well in the 1st. place they's been a couple of funny incidences in regards to the telephone like for inst. the other night I was setting in the liveing rm. monking with a deck of cards when I thought I heard the telephone bell ring and I went out to answer it and says hello and they wasn't nobody answered me so I kind of jiggled the hook up and down and finely a lady's voice says number and I says I don't want no number, you rang here. "Well," says the voice, "they's nobody on the line."

Well for a minute I didn't know what to think but finely I puled myself together and went back in the liveing rm. and I hadn't no sooner than got there when my Mrs. says who was it, so I said "Did you think you heard the telephone bell ring?" So she says "I didn't think so. I know so." So I says "Well I heard it too but when I went there they wasn't nobody on the line." So here my friends was a incidence where TWO PEOPLE agreed that the telephone bell had rang and yet when I come to answer it they wasn't nobody there so how can you acct. for a incidence like that only on a occult basis you might say.

Another incidence connected with the telephone come off in this same house a few wks. before the above. They's a friend of ours lives in New Rochelle but haven't lived there long enough to get their name in the suburban dream book so 1 day my Mrs. wanted to talk to this party so without thinking she called up and says Information please and it wasn't only 5 or 10 minutes when a voice come to her over the wire and says "This is Information" and my old lady fainted away as it was the 1st. time she had ever had direct communication with the dead.

"I heard a strange male voice talking somewheres in the house and then a kind of dull hammering."

Well she finely got hold of the people in New Rochelle and ast them over to dinner 1 night and we hadn't no sooner than got up from the frugal meal when all the electric lights in the house went out and stayed out pretty near 4 minutes. Well we laughed and joked about it and past it over with a smile, but the next night when WE DIDN'T HAVE NO GUESTS the lights went out about the same time and THREE NIGHTS LATER they done the SAME THING AGAIN.

It is the gen. belief that most of these signs and incidences comes off in the night time, but once in a wile they's 1 of them happens in day light like for inst. I got up the other A. M. and like usual the 1st. thing I done was grab a glass and went for a drink but when I turned on the cold water faucet NOTHING HAPPENED. Not wanting to alarm nobody I went back to bed without saying nothing and a couple of hrs later I heard a strange male voice talking somewheres in the house and then a kind of a dull hammering and when I got up again a little wile later and went for a drink the WATER RUN. That same P. M. wile I was down in the basement looking over my securitys I discovered that they was only 6 bottles left in a case where they had been 7 the LAST TIME I COUNTED.

Another day time incidence come to my tension down in the New Haven station here in Greenwich about 5 wks. ago. On this occasion I was figureing on going down to N. Y. city on the 9.55 train so I got to the Greenwich station at 10.30 but I noticed they wasn't no big crowd there like usual and the ticket window was shut up so I went out and seen the baggage man and ast him what was the matter with the 9.55. "Its gone" was his reply. "Yes" I says "but what about the 10.20?" "THAT'S GONE TOO" he says.

I can't count the number of times I come downstairs in the A. M. and find that all the ash trays has disappeared from where I left them the night before and some times tables and chairs has shifted around and of course its common knowledge that 1 of the spirits favorite sports is moveing furniture though heaven knows they never lift a hand to help a family thats moveing from 1 house to another.

These is some of the personal incidences that has made me look at the occult in a new light and besides witch I have heard testimony from personal friends that I know wouldn't tell me nothing that wasn't true and I only wished I had space to numerate all these evidents but suffice me to say that they's a friend of mine in N. Y. city that swears he has seen a couple of members of last year's Yale football team WALKING ON THE STREET in New Haven the other day and another friend of mine Kid Howard in Chicago gives me his word that he SEEN AND TALKED WITH Jess Willard THREE DAYS after Dempsey hit him for a home run in Toledo last July.

So as I say wile I haven't joined Sir Oliver's Lodge as yet I don't laugh out right no more when people springs talk of the supper natural and it wouldn't only take a few more incidences like the above to make this baby a believer.

A MAN CAN'T SHOP

BY JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WOMEN, as novelists and philosophers have said, have a way with them. I have often noticed it—particularly in stores.

Women know how to shop. Men don't. I used to believe the comic-paper jokes about women going from place to place, pawing over everything on the counters and not buying anything. I don't any more. I have seen them at their work, and I know that eventually, if not right at the moment, they do buy something, and buy what they want. And they usually get it at the price they intended to pay when they started out.

I have tried shopping myself, with results which may be called neutral. And my experience is still fresh in my mind.

It happened that the household was out of lettuce, and its general manager being otherwise employed, I was sent out to get it.

"Don't get any of that slazy, faded lettuce," I was told. "Feel the heads yourself. Peel off the outer leaves, and see if they are large and firm before you buy them."

I had seen this done when carrying parcels for the general manager, and I supposed it could be accomplished without difficulty.

I went into a vegetable market near by. The proprietor was busy, for which I was grateful. I wanted to feel the lettuce, as instructed, but I didn't have the nerve to do it before his eyes.

In a bin close at hand were 10 or 15 heads. I punched one of them tentatively. It seemed to yield to my prodding finger.

Picking it up, after a furtive glance at the proprietor, I divested it of one of its outer leaves. But I wasn't quick enough. The proprietor left the customer on whom he was waiting and leaped to my side.

"You buya?" he inquired, lowering at me.

"I—I'm not sure; I wanted to see if it was good."

"You no buy, what for you teara all to-hell? Twenty cent."

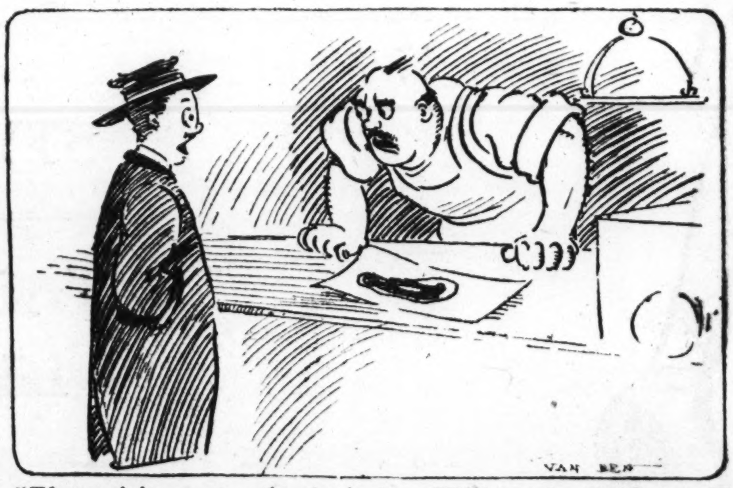
"Too much!"

"You spoila. You buya."

His aspect was menacing, I boughta.

I also bought two others, wholly on ocular evidence that they were sound.

When I got home I found that they were not sound.



"There ain't no more in the icebox. Will yez have this wan?"

I found further that far better lettuce could be bought for 15 cents a head; that they would always cheat you if you didn't examine them, and that it was perfectly ridiculous to let an ignorant foreigner scare you out of your wits when, if you had the least bit of courage, you could make him give you the kind of lettuce you wanted at a reasonable price.

But I didn't learn anything—about shopping, that is.

A few days thereafter I had to go to the butcher shop. Again I received exact instructions as to how to proceed, instructions so exact, in fact, that they were insulting to my intelligence, and deeply resented.

"I know, I know," I grunted. "I guess I can be trusted to buy a little meat."

There was no reassuring response.

At the butcher shop I found the steaks, already cut, under a glass counter, where I could not get my hands on them.

I had been told not to get one of these, but to insist on having one cut from the large hunks that hang somewhere back in the icebox.

"I want," I said, a "a porterhouse steak of about three pounds, cut thick, with considerable fat and a large tenderloin."

The butcher reached under the case, drew out a thin, rangy steak and slapped it before me.

"I should prefer to have one cut," I said.

"This is cut, ain't it?"

"I mean cut off the bigger piece."

"This wan was cut off the biggest piece in the cow."

"I mean one of those in the icebox."

"There ain't no more in the icebox. Will yez have this wan?"

The Name and the Game - -

the sharp, thin air. On the crosstown street the shops were full of light and activity, crowds wedging in and out. Marjorie Clark pulled at her strength and ran.

At the Twenty-ninth street corner she paused for the merest moment for breath and for a quick glance into the dark lane of the diverging street. The double row of stone houses, black-faced and shouldering one another like paper dolls cut from a folded newspaper, stood back indistinctly against the night, most of the high stoops cushioned in untrod snow, the fourth of them from the right, lean-looking and undistinguished, except that the ashcan at its curb was a glorified urn of snow.

As she stood there the ache in Marjorie Clark's throat threatened to become articulate. She took up her swift pace again, but onward.

Ten minutes later, within the great heated mausoleum of the Grand Union Station, she bought a ticket for Glendale. On track 10 the 8:18 had already made its first jerk outward as she made her dash for it.

In the spick swaddling clothes of new-laid snow, its roadways and garden lanes all of one identity, Glendale lay in a miniature valley beneath the railroad elevation; meandered down a slight hillside and out toward the open country.

Immediately removed from the steep flight of stairs leading down from the gabled station, small houses with thatched roofs that wore the snow like coolies' hoods appeared in uncertain ranks forming uncertain streets. Lights gleamed in frequent windows, throwing squares of gold-colored light in the snow.

Here and there where shades were drawn, the grotesque shadow of a fir tree stood against the window; silhouettes moved past. Picket fences marched crookedly along. At each intersection of streets a white arclight dangled, hissing and spreading its radiance to the very stoops of adjoining houses.

Two blocks from the left of the station Marjorie paused in the white shower of one of these arclights. The wind had hauled around to the north and its raw breath galloped across the open country, stinging her.

Across the street, diagonal, a low house of too many angles, the snow banked in a high drift across its north flank, stood well back in shadow except that on the peak of its small veranda, and clearly defined by the arclight, a weather vane spun to the gale.

Marjorie Clark ducked her head to the onslaught of wind and crossed the street, kicking up a fine flurry of snow before her. A convoy of trees stood in military precision down the quiet avenue, their bare branches embracing her in immediate shadows. The gate creaked when she drew it backward, scraping outward and upon the sidewalk a hill of loose snow. Before the small house a garden lay tucked beneath its blanket, a scrawny line of hedge fluted with snow inclosing it and a few stalks that would presently flower. The hood of the dark veranda surmounted with its high ruche of snow seemed to incline, invitationally.

Yet, when Marjorie Clark pulled out the old-fashioned bell handle her face sickened as she stood and she was down the steps again, the tightness squeezing her throat, her gloved hands fumbling the gate latch and her knee flung against it pressing it outward.

In the moment of her most frenzied attitude a golden patch of light from an opened door streamed out and over her. In its radiance a woman's wide-bosomed, wide-hipped silhouette, hand bent in a visor over her eyes, leaned forward, and rushing past her and down the plushy steps, the bare-headed figure of Mr. Charley Scully, a red and antiquated wool indoor jacket flying to the wind, and a forelock of his shiny hair lifted.

"Marjie!"

She backed against the gate.

"Marj! Marjie!"

"I—no, no—I"——

"Why, little one. Marjie! Marjie!"

"I—no—no"——

But her inertia was of no moment, and very presently, Charles Scully's strong right arm propelling her, she was in the warm, bright-lighted hallway, its door closing her in, and the wide-bosomed, wide-hipped figure in spotted silk fumbling the throat fastenings of her jacket, and the stooped form of Charley Scully dragging off her thin rubber shoes.

"Why, they're soaking wet, ma. Get her a pair of Till's slipper or something."

"Don't jerk the child like that, son. Pull 'em off easy."

Through glazed eyes Marjorie Clark, balancing herself first on one foot, then on the other, the spotted silk arm half sustaining her, could glimpse the scene of an adjoining room—a fir tree standing against a drawn window blind and half hung in tinsel fringe, abandoned in the very act of being draped, a woman and a child stooping at its base. Above a carved black walnut table and from a mother-of-pearl frame, a small amateur photograph of Marjorie Clark smiled out at herself.

The figure in spotted silk dragged off the wet jacket and hurried with it toward the rear of the hallway, her left foot dragging slightly.

"Just a second, dearie-child, until I find dry things for you. Son, stop fussing around the lamb until she gets rested."

But on the first instant of the two of them standing alone there in the little hallway, Charley Scully turned swiftly to Marjorie Clark, catching up her small hand. His eyes carried the iridescence of bronze.

"Marjie," he said, "to—why, to think you'd come! Why—why, little Marjie!"

"I—oh, Charley-boy, I"——

"What, little one? What?"

"I—I dunno."

"What is it, hon? Ain't you as glad as I am?"

"I dunno, only I—I—I'm scared, Charley—scared, I guess."

"Why, you just never was so safe, Marjie, as now; you just never was."

She could not meet the eloquence of his eyes, but his smile was so near that the tightness at her throat seemed suddenly to thaw.

"Charley-boy!" she said.

But at the sound of returning footsteps she sprang backward, clasping her hands behind her. A copper-haired woman with a copper-haired child in the curve of her arm moved through the lighted front room and toward them. Her smile was upturned, with a dimple low in one cheek, like a star in the cradle of a crescent moon. Charley Scully turned his vivid face toward her.

"Till," he cried, "she's come, anyway. Looka, she's come!"

"Yes, I—I've come," said Marjorie Clark. There was a layer of hysteria in her voice.

Cured His RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 149F Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

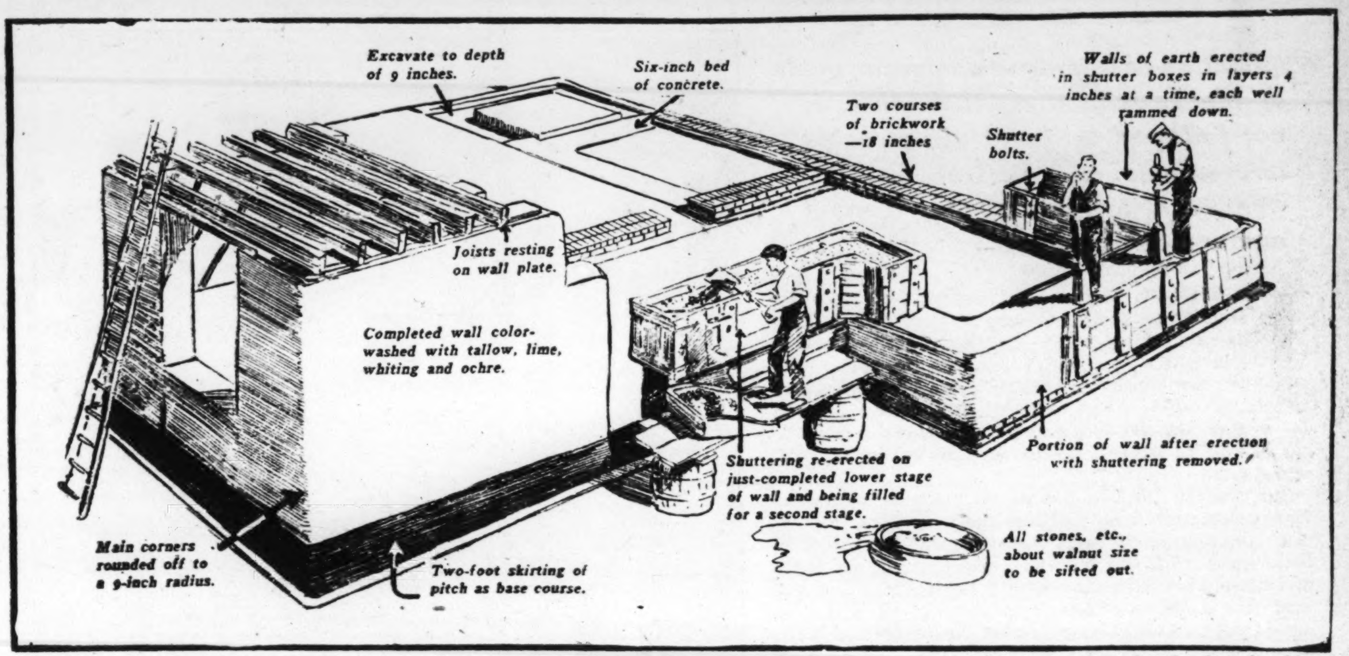
St. Louis Architect Suggests Building Homes of Dried, Rammed Earth to Solve Housing Problem

England is doing it, and buildings are declared to be durable and inexpensive — Tests being made in St. Louis to determine practicability of the scheme in this climate —Details of construction :: :: ::



Excavate to depth of 9 inches.
Six-inch bed of concrete.
Walls of earth erected in shutter boxes in layers 4 inches at a time, each well rammed down.
Two courses of brickwork —18 inches
Shutter bolts.
Joists resting on wall plate.
Completed wall color-washed with tallow, lime, whiting and ochre.
Portion of wall after erection with shuttering removed.
Shuttering re-erected on just-completed lower stage of wall and being filled for a second stage.
All stones, etc., about walnut size to be sifted out.
Main corners rounded off to a 9-inch radius.
Two-foot skirting of pitch as base course.

Method of construction—The foundations for the walls are made by first excavating to a depth of nine inches and then laying a band of concrete six inches thick, upon this placing two courses of brickwork. The wooden frames are than adjusted and packed hard with the mixture of dirt, clay and fine straw. This mixture hardens so that it is difficult to penetrate it even with an augur. The outer surface is then waterproofed.

THOMAS CRANE YOUNG, whose views on the housing problem and the remedy looking to its solution are here presented, is a member of the St. Louis architectural firm of Eames & Young and a former Mayor of Webster. He has had a wide experience in residence planning, and his suggestion that St. Louis consider the method adopted in parts of England is therefore worthy of serious consideration. He is giving the plan his most earnest study, and when local experiments are completed he will be in position to give exact figures showing what a modern dwelling of 'pise" construction would cost in this city. That the clay dirt obtainable here would answer as well as that used in Europe, he has little reason to doubt. With the mounting costs of building materials of common usage and the steadily advancing rents, any experimentation along the lines he suggests will be watched with compelling interest.

By THOMAS CRANE YOUNG.

WHAT has blocked the progress of every housing project in this country, as well as in Europe, is the hard fact that under present prices of labor and commonly used materials, it has proved impossible to build even the smallest and most modest six-room cottage for a sum which, with the cost of the necessary land, would make the total investment for a home economically possible for the ordinary workman or moderately salaried individual. Houses which five years ago could easily be built for $4000 or $5000 will now cost $8000 or $10,000.

A congressional committee, reporting on the war housing activities of the United States Housing Corporation, states: "Single houses in Bridgeport, Conn., cost $7263. The average for all houses was $5673.78."

It is not stated whether these houses represent a complete house or whether such necessary items as weather stripping, electric fixtures, sidewalks, etc., were omitted. Probably no profit for the contractor nor cost of architectural service were included in these figures. And since the time when these houses were constructed the cost of building has advanced possibly as much as 25 per cent. If one takes the average quoted price of $5263.78, plus 25 per cent, it makes the cost of the house $7093. Add average price of 40-foot lot at $30 per foot ($1200) and the cost of the house and lot is $8293.

It can readily be seen that to pay rent or to own this home the occupant should have an income of at least $3500 per year. At $1 per hour and working eight hours a day for 300 days a year, one could earn only $2400, which is inadequate income for above basis of cost for rent.

So far as one can learn, every new housing project yet planned or constructed either in this country or in Europe has been based on some form of tenement or the traditional story-and-a-half cottage, usually containing five or six rooms and constructed in the customary way of either brick, hollow clay tile or wood. It would seem, therefore, if it is possible to beat the building game it will be necessary to evolve an entirely new type of house or find some cheaper material as a substitute. It might be possible to evolve the former if architects and builders could rid themselves of tradition and study the matter as though isolated in a country without the usual facilities of civilization and depend only upon their ingenuity and the materials which nature locally provides.

In this way the Eskimo invented a cheap and comfortable dwelling built of ice; so did the early settlers in this country, who built of logs; and the early Spaniards and Indians of our Western states, who built of unbaked clay, or adobe. There are abundant examples of these earth dwellings in our own country which compare favorably with the usual forms of construction for durability, looks and comfort. The mission buildings in California are constructed of this material, as well as many dwellings still in use after more than a century of wear. In this connection, one wonders why no one thought to construct our war cantonments and barracks of this material instead of the unsightly, uncomfortable and costly wooden shacks universally used.

Adobe is a Spanish word from adobar (to plaster). It is nothing but air-dried brick, weatherproofed with plaster, and any traveler in Mexico or California knows that these buildings are as beautiful as any we produce in the same class.

Many excellent plans for small cottages of the conventional American type have been developed by the United States Shipping Board and also by private architects, but as all of these have proved too costly to build, at least from a commercial standpoint, some new type of home will have to be devised in which every superfluous square inch of area and any unnecessary feature must be eliminated. Other possible economies may yet be found in new processes or materials as substitutes for present methods. Some years ago Mr. Edison led us to hope for much from his concrete house, but so far all forms of concrete have proved as costly at least as other forms of masonry.

A recent number of the London Sphere calls attention to an old form of masonry called "pise" or "cob," the use of which in housing projects is now being considered in England and might be equally well applied to this country as an emergency substitute. The picturesque cottage in the illustrations produced are of this construction.

Sturgis' Dictionary of Architecture and Building describes it thus: "A cheap masonry of compressed earth. The most suitable solid for the purpose is clayey, somewhat sandy loam and vegetable earth. It is mixed with straw or hay to prevent it from cracking when it dries. The wall is built in sections by means of a movable frame about three feet high and 10 feet long, the two sides of which are of boards kept apart the thickness of the wall. This frame is placed on the wall and between the sides of the earth is rammed or beaten in four-inch layers. When this sort of box is full it is taken apart and set up in another place—in some parts of France houses of two or three stories are built of "pise."

The Sphere states: "The earth hardens to an astonishing extent in the process of drying off; so much so that it is sometimes difficult to bore into it with an augur. * * * The outer surface of the pise wall can be color-washed or treated in various ways. Spraying with hot liquid tar has been tried successfully. The natural wall weathers in course of time to a very attractive color, and the outer surface itself withstands ordinary rain action and bad weather"

When properly waterproofed, there is no reason why these earthen buildings should not stand one climate as well as another, and certainly our variety of climate is not more severe than that of the British Islands or of France.

At my suggestion a firm of testing engineers of this city has agreed to make a few experiments concerning the use of earth masonry of this sort, which should prove much cheaper than any other, because it can be made by common, unskilled labor, of material found in nearly every community.

Of course, there is no data extant indicating the cost of earthen masonry, but in the present housing emergency it would seem worth while to make an experiment in constructing a real building with earth walls.

With other advances connected with the building of a home the item of excavating for the cellar and fur-don't hear me throwing it up to you, do you? Ain't I got Checkers on you?"

"You"——

"But I ain't blaming you. Come, Marj, let's swap our real names."

"What?"

"Sure, I ain't blaming you. Only be on the level, girl—be on the level. If it's big fry you're after, and we don't measure up down here, say so."

"You—I think you're crazy, Blink."

"I know life, kiddo. I've used up 30 years of my lease on it getting wise to it. Come, now, is it Checkers, Queenie? What's your game?"

She leaned forward, looking him evenly between the eyes, but her lips seared as if from his hot insult.

"You take that back."

He laughed and flecked his fingers for a waiter, flinging out his legs at full length alongside the table.

"You're a clever little girl, Marj, and I've got to hand it to you. Another stein there, waiter, and one for the girl; she needs it."

"I'll spill it right out, if it comes."

"Lord, what you so sheety-looking for? White with temper and green at the gills, eh? Gad, I like you that way. I like you for your temper, and, if you want to know it, I like you for every blamed thing about you."

"You—quit! Let go. Let go, I say! Ug-gh!"

Her lips, with the greenish auro about them, would only move stiffly, and she pushed back from the table only half articulate.

"Let me pass—please."

"Where you going, peaches?"

He reached for her hand.

"You mad, Marj? I didn't mean to get you sore."

"N-no, Blink."

"You beauty, you."

"Sh-h-h!"

"Gad, but I like you. Sit down, Marj; I got a new proposition to put to you. I can talk big money, girl."

"Don't—Blink."

"Sit down girl. Harry don't stand for no stage stuff in here no more."

"I"——

"I got a new proposition, girl. One that'll make Checkers look like 30 cents. A white proposition, too, Marj. A baby could listen to it."

"Yes, yes, Blink, but not now. When you get lit up you—you oughtn't begin to dream about those millionaire propositions, Blink. Try and keep your wits."

"A baby could listen to this here proposition, Marj. And big money, too, Marj. It's diamonds for you."

Somehow with her lips she smiled down at him and did not tug for the release of her hand. Dallied for the instant instead.

"You're lit up, Blink."

"Some big guns in Wall street, Marj, are after me, Marj, with a million-dollar proposition. I"——

"Yes, yes, but wait a minute, Blink. I'll be back."

She even lay a pat on his shoulder and slid past him lightly. "In a minute, Blink."

"Hurry," he said, his smile broken by a swift twitch of feature, and raising his fresh stein.

Once out of his vision she veered sharply and in a bath of fear darted toward the small hallway, with its red bead of gaslight burning on and flickering against the two panels of colored glass in the dingy brown door.

Outside the flakes had ceased and the sinister looking side street lay in a white hush, a single line of scraggly footsteps crunched into the snow of the sidewalk. A clock from a skyscraping tower rang out 8, its echoes singing like anvils in

Right and Wrong Methods in Farming

Why Not Get Out of Your Farm ALL the Profits That Lie Hidden There? Read Here How 100 of America's Greatest Farmers Got Their Sensational Results—and How You Can Learn Their Secrets

Mail Coupon for This Booklet

IF everybody did things the same way year after year there would be no progress except through accident. Fortunately for the world, there are people who try new things, and even if only one new thing out of a hundred succeeds we have gained something well worth the experiments that failed.

And fortunately for you, the best new methods of farming, the successful methods which have stood the test for all experiment, are now put before you by more than 100 of America's greatest farmers. You do not have to experiment; you do not have to learn through costly personal experience the right methods from the wrong. America's greatest farming authorities have done it for you. They show you the methods which have proven best—the right methods in all branches of farming which have actually boosted yields and profits besides saving time and labor.

Take corn production, for example. There are 3556 hills of corn on an acre planted 3 feet 6 inches apart. Many farmers by following the methods of the country's leading corn growers as told in Farm Knowledge, are increasing their corn production by an average of two ears to every one of these 3556 hills and are getting 90 bushels of corn to the acre. And not only is this true of corn, but is equally true of every other farming operation. There are certain methods in every branch of farming which are right—and which bring the maximum amount of profit at the minimum amount of expense and labor. And now, through Farm Knowledge, more than 100 of our most successful farmers have put before you the complete results of their specialized experience in each branch of farming. The right methods which took them years to discover they now reveal to you.

What Other Farmers Say:

Every Volume Paid Him a Profit.

Bessemer, Mich.

I have used Farm Knowledge and like it very much, because it has helped me a lot. Volume I has helped me to raise hogs more profitably, and one of my cows has been restored to health also. Volume II has helped me a lot with the crops; by using Farm Knowledge I got bigger and better yields than ever before. Volume III has helped me to equip my farm with some new machinery. Volume IV has helped my wife a lot in her housekeeping and all the other work there is for a woman to do on a farm.

Frank Poremski.

Has Doubled the Usual Yield of His Corn Crop.

Evington, Va.

For my own personal use as a farmer I do not think the real value of Farm Knowledge can be estimated in dollars.

Just to note one instance—by following what your Farm Knowledge says on corn, my corn crop will almost if not quite double its usual yield for this year.

I would not take twice the amount I paid for mine if I could not get another set.

Thomas Hogue.

Made His Work on the Farm Easier, Quicker and Better.

Milton, Iowa.

Being on the lookout for points that would make work easier, quicker and better, your books, Farm Knowledge, have filled the bill. If an animal were sick, they gave me the cure. It also showed me how to pick an animal with good points. It told me the good machines and how they operated. It answered all my crop and soil problems and showed how to make a home. Farm Knowledge is the best investment for the farmer today.

F. E. Parr.

The Discoveries of Specialists

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. At a cost of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the successful farming experience of more than 100 of these specialists in every branch of farming is put within the covers of Farm Knowledge. Each is a "practical experience" expert and not a theorist. Each is a specialist who has made one branch of farming his life work. One grew corn, studied all about corn, went all over the country investigating corn crops and corn growing methods, and after many years of experience and study became recognized as an authority on corn, to whom many farmers came from far and near for advice.

And so it goes—in Farm Knowledge every single branch of farming is covered by a specialist who knows his business—a farming expert who has spent as much time and effort on one branch as you have to devote to your whole farm. In crop raising, live-stock producing, soil improvement, selection of farm machinery, irrigation, domestic work on the farm, and in farm work of every kind the help of an expert is given you.

100 Experts on Your Farm

Just think of having at your finger tips the help of Hugh G. Van Pelt, one of the foremost authorities in the country on dairy matters—or the help of Prof. F. C. Minkler on hog raising; Minkler, who is Live Stock Commissioner of New Jersey; think of having the advice of Prof. C. B. Hutchinson on corn, the man who organized the Corn Growers' Association of Missouri, and was head of the department of farm crops at Missouri College of Agriculture. Think of having at your beck and call the help of Dr. A. S. Alexander on the diseases of live stock, of Prof. Eckles on the handling of milk, of Alva Agee on soil fertilization of J. M. Evvard, Dean Curtis, E. H. Farrington, W. S. Corsa, and Dean Jardine. Think of the help your wife will receive from Ruth M. Boyle, the Household Editor of "Farm and Fireside;" Mrs. Helen Johnson Keyes, an expert on the farm home and Household Editor of the "Farmer's Wife," formerly Associate Editor of "Good Housekeeping," and many other prominent, practical farm women.

A farmer raised 90 bushels of corn per acre; his neighbor across the road got only 25. The difference in yield was due to different methods of seeding, of preparing the soil, of harvesting. One man adopted the newest successful discoveries of farming authorities—the unsuccessful farmer depended entirely on his own experience.

And in every other branch of farming, Farm Knowledge gives you the help of an expert who knows not only how to secure unusual results but also how to show you how to get them.

Valuable Booklet Free

Farm Knowledge contains over 2000 pages in all, 128 full page photographs, frontispiece in each of the four volumes in color, and over 3000 other illustrations scattered throughout. The volumes are 9¾ inches high by 7¾ inches wide and each book is nearly 2 inches thick. The green buckram binding is both handsome and durable.

It is impossible to describe so important a work in this space, but we have prepared a special booklet which shows the complete list of contents, names of authors, with brief descriptions of each, and shows sample pages to give you an idea of how the subjects are treated.

Everyone interested in farming should send for this booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming." It not only describes Farm Knowledge thoroughly, but is also chock-full of helpful facts and valuable pointers about each branch of farming—and tells how, for the mere cost of a few bushels of corn, you can profit by the help of the country's most successful farmers. Joking With the Surgeon While He Operates
Marvels of the Newly Invented Anesthetic

With the new ether the patient sees and hears everything that transpires in the operating room, and if the surgeon is willing, he may carry on a conversation while the scalpel seeks the abscess, or strong arms repair the fracture.

Application of improved analgesic, made of highly refined di-ethyl ether, is not followed by usual disagreeable after-effects and patient can administer it to himself, only a small amount being required :: ::

IN THE 120 years which have elapsed since Sir Humphrey Davy, experimenting with nitrous oxide—the so-called "laughing gas"—found a clue to its anesthetic properties, the early work of the pioneers in this field has been developed and improved and perfected until science reached a point where it was believed there was nothing left to be done in relieving pain during surgical operations.

But now Dr. James Cotton of Toronto is credited with finding the means of inducing conscious insensibility to pain—analgesia, it is called—and starting with Dr. Cotton's discoveries the perfection of his basic principles have been brought to the point where the idea is made available to surgical, medical and dental science everywhere through the efforts of a corps of American chemists associated with the firm of R. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of Wilmington, Del.

Not only does this new analgesic, which is composed of highly refined di-ethyl ether, render a patient insensible to pain without destroying consciousness, but in cases where it has been tried it shows that its application is not followed by the usual nausea so familiar in the use of previously known anesthetics. It is now possible for the patient not only to administer the pain-deadening ether to himself but also to watch, fully conscious and without any sensation of pain, the reduction of an abscess, the extraction of a tooth, the sewing of wounds and other similar minor surgical operations wherein total anesthesia formerly was necessary.

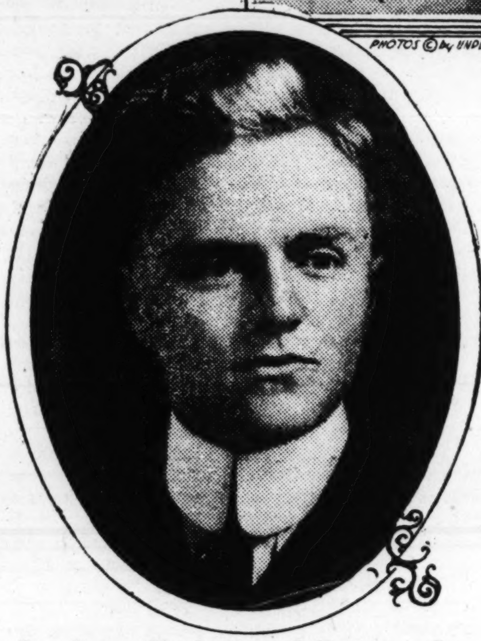
In the realm of short emergency operations the usefulness of the new ether is circumscribed only by the number and variety of such cases wherein its application may be considered advisable and desirable.

It is probable that in obstetrical cases and in dentistry the analgesic properties of this ether have been most appreciated so far. In obstetrical operations only a small amount of this special type of ether is required to relieve the pain, while in dental surgery it not only replaces nitrous oxide in extractions but also is used to render painless such operations as nerve treating, removal of roots and drilling and filling of teeth, which heretofore have been performed without an anesthetic.

The reports of cases in which the new ether was used are interesting. One case was that of a boy, aged 16, who underwent a dental operation. "Patient took 16 inhalations," says the dentist's report; "exposed pulp was removed and two cavities were prepared; patient positively felt nothing, in spite of the fact that this is one of the most sensitive operations which can be performed in the mouth."

Another case was that of a man 28 years old, the operation on whom consisted of the reduction of a fracture of the elbow. The report says: "Time of induction, eight minutes; time of operation, five minutes; amount of ether used, two ounces, by open cone; patient awake and talking while bandage was being applied; there was no after nausea; patient afterward said he liked taking ether and had no ill sensations."

An official of a state medical association cited a number of cases in which the new ether was used with satisfactory results. Referring to three operations for the removal of tonsils and adenoids, he said: "No morphine was used in these cases, and, consequently the patients awakened immediately after the flow of ether was shut off, as quickly as do patients who have taken gas. It was a surprising phenomenon. In those cases, apparently enough ether was given to induce unconsciousness.



Dr. James H. Cotton of Toronto, Canada, who has discovered an ether preparation which completely deadens pain without rendering the patient unconscious or subjecting him to the nausea attending the use of other anesthetics.

A Massachusetts dentist reported as follows: "I took the ether myself, had a wisdom tooth removed, and was conscious all the time. In fact, I told the dentist exactly when to remove the tooth. I did not feel any pain whatever. I then administered the ether several times to volunteer patients for excavating sensitive cavities, for which it proved very satisfactory. At the dental convention at Swampscott I had four patients, all cases of excavating, to use the ether, without pain or loss of sense. The method of administration was from a four-ounce bottle, with by-pass and glass tubes for insertion in the nostrils, connected with the bottle by rubber tubing. The analgesia lasted long enough for the preparation of one cavity. I think perhaps a nose mask would be better, as the patient could inhale while the work was being done on the tooth. I think it only a matter of time before the new ether will be universally used."

Another case was one of laparotomy. In this instance there was an open mask administration direct from the container. The report on this case says: "Patient, male, age 18; weight, 180 pounds; operation, adhesions and resection of tubercular mass from abdomen; time of operation, 1 hour and 10 minutes; patient remained very clear mentally and cracked jokes throughout the operation; patient was given a small meal while the surgeons were operating; abdomen was completely relaxed; eyes slightly dilated and pulse remained at 80; amount of ether used, three ounces."

Still another case was an arm operation on a returned soldier. The report says: "Operation consisted of opening the arm; patient complained of feeling dull; otherwise he was normal; time of operation, 45 minutes; while under the influence, patient stated he did not want merely to lose sensation to pain but wished to go to sleep, as he was tired; amount of ether used, three and one-half ounces; at two previous operations it was impossible to induce the patient with commercial ethers and chloroform had to be used."

In another case the operation consisted of the amputation of part of a thumb, the operation lasting about 15 minutes. The patient was a young boy and was given the ether by means of the semiclosed inhaler. He went back to his work in an hour or so and suffered no nausea.

Another report had to do with the case of a woman who had been knocked down by an automobile and her collar bone fractured. She was prejudiced against taking any anesthetic until informed she could give it to herself if she desired. She talked throughout the entire operation and was entirely without pain until six minutes after the anesthetic was stopped. She then said she wanted more of it as it made her happy. There were no objectionable after effects.

After successfully experimenting, Dr. Cotton made his findings public and also gave demonstrations of the new ether. The development of the ether in a commercial way was taken up by the du Pont company, the production of sulphuric ether, or, as it is technically designated, di-ethyl ether being one of the important branches of the manufacturing activities of that chemical in vast quantities as an essential material in the manufacture of smokeless powder, and, for a somewhat shorter period, in large and continually increasing volume expressly for anesthesia purposes. Although the same chemical compound is used as an industrial solvent and as an anesthetic, it is known to everyone in any way familiar with the subject that there is a great difference in refinement between the two ethers. In fact, the difference is so great as to require radically different methods of manufacture, the transition from one field of application to the other having called into service the best experts and skilled factory operators.

St. Louis Architect Suggests Building Homes of Dried Earth

nace layout has reached astonishing proportions. The earth has to be taken out and in most cases hauled away. With the "pise" plan it would not be necessary to haul away any of the earth, since it would be used to supply the walls of the structure. In further elaboration of his plan, Mr. Young said that even though it was not deemed advisable to dig the cellar, enough soil could be taken off the lot to yield ample material. There would necessarily be some grading and terrace arrangement that would produce a goodly supply of earth.

Another point brought out by the author was that the houses might be built in groups and heated from one central plant. This would do away with the necessity of digging a cellar and providing a heating system for each home.

New Light on the Tragedy of Meyerling

Vetsera, the mother, in what way she had lost her daughter. There was a tremendous row between the two ladies, during which Marie Larisch confessed that Mary had met the Crown Prince at her house, and that there might be just the beginning of a love affair between them. Mamma Vetsera, with her Southern temperament—she was of Greek descent—declared she should go to the Empress immediately and ask for her daughter. She was advised to wait a day, and in the meantime the secret police were set to find her.

At the palace, doubts were expressed whether Rudolph had spoken the truth when he excused himself on the plea of being ill. Stephanie declared that he had been in perfect health in the morning. But the imperial parents tried to persuade her that a man out hunting might easily catch a sudden cold. Stephanie, however, made her brother-in-law, Philip of Coburg, promise, before he took his leave, that he would drive to Meyerling in the night and if possible force an entrance to the hunting box.

Though the Countess Larisch had no doubt furnished the Crown Prince some opportunities for meeting Mary alone in the roomy palace of the Larischin in the Johannesgasse, still we may take it for certain that Jan. 29 was the day on which this dainty, refined and carefully reared young girl, daughter of a noble house, decided to yield her future life into the hands of the man she rapturously loved, to leave her mother and enter upon a life of hazard.

There is no knowing what plans the Crown Prince had for the future. He had left his wife and parents in high dudgeon. He was rebelling against others arranging his life for him. He must have told himself that the girl could not go back to her mother, once she had eloped with him to Meyerling. Bratfisch, who had brought Mary in his carriage, was sent back to Vienna. The valet, Loschek, had prepared a supper, which the lovers shared with the adjutant, Count Hoyos. Two bottles of champagne were emptied. The two men were in high spirits, and the girl, though a little shy, seemed supremely happy. The Crown Prince, no doubt, considered this his wedding supper.

Count Hoyos had withdrawn to the forest guard's lodge, where he had his room. In the hunting box only the valet Loschek had his quarters.

At midnight the assault took place. How many were there? Who knows? Only two names were pronounced—Mary's uncle, H. Baltazzi, her mother's brother, whom she was engaged to marry, and Dom Miguel of Braganza.

The valet rushed to warn the lovers, but the assailants followed him closely. The Crown Prince must have found time to meet and resist them, since the scuffle took place in the dining room, where the most enraged assailant had his skull broken with a champagne bottle.

When the premeditated purpose of the assault had been attained—the Crown Prince overcome and unmanned—the assailants ran to their vehicles and drove away. Count Hoyos and a forest guard who came out of the guard's house in alarm, were just in time to see the whipped horses turn into the road. Loschek had orders not to let the adjutant enter the house. What happened during the next half hour can be guessed from the events of the following two days.

The adjutant and the valet were discussing the night's events in the forest guard's house. Neither of them dared disobey the Crown Prince's orders and re-enter the house. At 4 o'clock a carriage came with Prince Philip of Coburg, who had kept his promise to his sister-in-law, Stephanie. He insisted upon being admitted to the house, and when he had heard of the assault, he declared that he must see his brother-in-law. The two told him there was a lady with the Prince. "All the same!" he insisted.

The door of the dining room was locked, and when knocking and calling elicited no answer, the three men smashed the panels and unlocked it from the inside. The room was quite dark, but from the opposite open door of the bedroom a dim light shone through. The Coburger crossed the dining room and stood stockstill at the door of the bedroom.

On the night table one of the candles of the chandelier was still burning and threw its pale light on two corpses which lay in each others arms on the bed—Crown Prince Rudolph and Mary Vetsera. The right hand of the Crown Prince still clasped the weapon with which the deed had been done—a small "bulldog." In his left hand—the arm around poor Mary's neck, he held a toilet mirror. Both corpses were covered with blood. The top of the Crown Prince's skull was gone; his brains had been scattered all over the room. Mary did not offer quite so grewsome a spectacle. She must have been shot through the head from a slight distance.

When lights had been lit in the dining room, the body of Baltazzi was found on the floor.

As there was no knowing who might be the first person to arrive from Vienna, Coburg gave orders for the bodies of Mary and her uncle to be removed.

The Coburger undertook to watch with Loschek, and Hoyos was sent to Vienna, to bear the news to the imperial palace. At noon Prof. Widerhofer came to Meyerling, and with his own hands ministered to the body of the Crown Prince sufficiently to allow the imperial parents' eyes to look upon their son.

The report of the station master of Modling on the events of the night of Jan. 30 had roused the curiosity of his chief, Director Friedrich von Schuler. He wanted to know what the numerous night journeys that had been observed had to do with the tragedy of Meyerling, and besides he wanted to talk over the awful event with his old friend, the abbot of Heiligenkreuz, with whom he often passed a pleasant evening in the convent. The abbot welcomed him warmly and said he had a great deal to tell him.

On the afternoon of Jan. 31 an officer had come to Heiligenkreuz and had asked to be allowed to speak to the abbot. He introduced himself as a messenger from the Emperor. He came to ask burial for a young lady, who had died at the same time as the Crown Prince, and for whom the Emperor begged indulgence and discretion of the abbot and canon of Heiligenkreuz. There was to be no question asked, no talk of any kind. The body would be brought, it was to be buried according to Roman Catholic ritual in sacred ground.

The abbot most decidedly refused. He could not take upon himself to bury a girl, of whom he knew nothing and who possibly had died by her own hand, in consecrated ground. The officer became very pressing in his entreaties. But the abbot said: "I cannot! As soon as our peasants find out that a suicide lies among the dead of the Heiligenkreuz Cemetery, they will dig her out in the night and throw her over the wall of the church yard. You would not like that? Tell that to your imperial master." The messenger returned to Vienna.

Late that same evening Count Bombelles—who had been the Crown Prince's tutor—came with the baptismal certificate of Mary Vetsera, which proved her a Roman Catholic, and with the Emperor's word of honor in writing that the girl had met her death by a strange hand. The Count added that it was the special wish of his grief-stricken Emperor that the young girl should be buried in Heiligenkreuz.

The abbot now consented, and went into the village to give orders to the carpenter for a coffin, "such as would suit for a small, delicate person."

In Meyerling the detectives remained even after the reporters had left. They had orders to carry the body of Mary on a litter into the neighboring wood. A devious path to Heiligenkreuz was sought by the detectives and forest guards in the night; the journey lasted two hours. At 3 a. m. the body was set down outside the carpenter's workshop. He had worked at the coffin all night. The black covering of the litter was spread on a bed and the body laid upon it. The three women of the carpenter's family undertook the task of dressing the body.

The following are the words of the abbot of Heiligenkreuz, as repeated to me by the railways director:

"I am a soft-hearted old man, and I confess when word came that the body of the beautiful young girl lay on the bed, ready for the prayers to be spoken over her, I was afraid of the strong emotion which might last me for the rest of my life. So I sent one of my canons, a man whom I can trust and who knows no fear. What he told me when he returned made me feel thankful that I had stayed away."

There is little to add.

Soon after the burial of the Crown Prince, the furniture of the bedroom at Meyerling was privately offered for sale, and Director von Schuler bought it—not that he had any great desire to possess it, but because he was afraid that some showman would get hold of it, and with the wax figures of the dead lovers, exploit a sensational attraction. The bed and the other pieces stood many years in the loft of Schuler's villa in Modling. The carpet on which the brains of young Rudolph von Hapsburg had been scattered was not sold—it was sent to the cleaners, and then placed among the other imperial carpets in a storeroom in Schoenbrunn. It was a real Smyrna.

The hunting box was made into a small nunnery for Carmelites, the death chamber being the chapel.

"I don't think so."

"All right," and back it went into the case.

"But I want a steak!"

"Well, didn't I show yez a steak?"

"But I want a"——

" 'Twas a good steak. Take it or lave it."

I took it.

It did not prove satisfactory when I arrived home with it.

My explanations were received coldly. At last I got mad, and suggested that it was the best steak to be had, and that anybody would have taken it.

The general manager put on her hat and coat and departed down the street. She returned with a "porterhouse steak of about three pounds, cut thick, with considerable fat and a large tenderloin.

I don't know how she did it. If I did I would do the same thing myself next time.

But to hope to do so is idle.

If I go into a department store and begin fingering things on the counter, as dozens of women around me do, the saleswoman signals to a large, flat-footed man in the aisle, who comes and stands behind me.

I always buy something then in a hurry, to cover my embarrassment, but he usually accompanies me to the door as I go out.

Shopping is an art. There may be men who have mastered it, but if there are I never met any of them.

WHEN HEALTH BECOMES A DISEASE

THE following editorial from the Gary Times is printed by the Journal of the American Medical Association as a lesson to health faddists:

There is a great deal of truth in the satirical story of Jiggins, who had the health habit. Jiggins lived 20 years ago, and health was a disease with him. The Dallas News says that Jiggins took a cold plunge every morning. He said it opened his pores. After it he took a hot sponge. He said it closed the pores. He got so that he could open and shut his pores at will.

Jiggins used to stand and breathe at an open window for half an hour before dressing. He said it expanded his lungs. He might, of course, have had it done in a shoe shop, with a boot stretcher; but, after all, it cost him nothing this way. And what is half an hour?

After he got his vest on, Jiggins used to hitch himself up like a dog in harness and do shadow exercises. He did them forward, backward and hindside up.

He could have got a job as a dog anywhere. He spent all his time at this kind of thing. In his spare time at the office he used to lie on his stomach on the floor and see if he could lift himself up with his knuckles. If he could, then he tried some other way until he found one that he couldn't do. Then he would spend the rest of his lunch hour on his stomach, perfectly happy.

In the evenings, in his room, he used to lift iron bars, cannon balls, heavy dumbbells and haul himself up to the ceiling with his teeth.

He liked it.

He spent half the night slinging himself around his room. He said it made his brain clear. When he got his brain perfectly clear he went to bed and slept. As soon as he awoke he began clearing it again.

Jiggins is dead. He was, of course, a pioneer; but the fact that he dumbbelled himself to death at an early age does not prevent a whole generation of young men from following in his path.

They are ridden by the health mania.

They make themselves a nuisance.

They get up at impossible hours. They go out in silly little suits and run marathon heats before breakfast. They chase around barefoot to get the dew on their feet. They hunt for ozone. They bother about pepsin. They won't eat meat because it has too much nitrogen. They won't eat fruit because it hasn't got any. They prefer albumin and starch to huckleberry pie and doughnuts. They won't drink water out of a tap. They won't eat sardines out of a tin. They won't use oysters out of a pail. They won't drink milk out of a glass. They are afraid. Yes, sir, afraid. Cowards!

And after all their fuss they presently incur some simple, old-fashioned illness and die like anybody else.

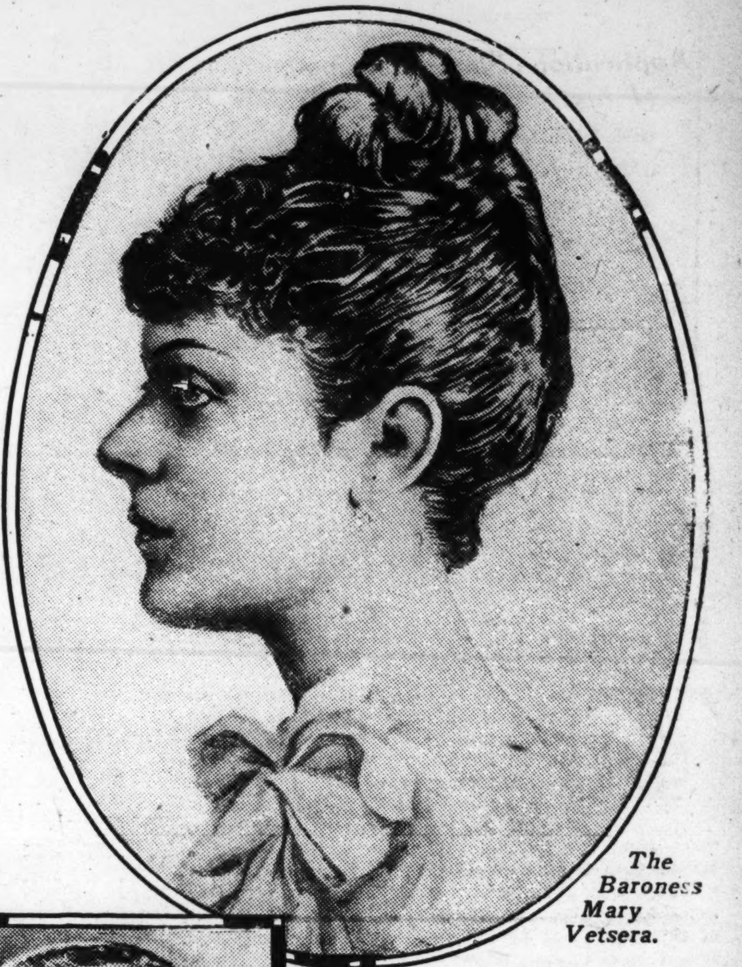
boat to handle the loaded barges from New Orleans to Memphis. This corporation at first planned to run steamers direct to Cuba from Memphis, but changing stages of the river necessitated a change in the plan when the first steamer was halted just above New Orleans. The steamer, James Moren, home port Cincinnati, was purchased quickly and hurried to New Orleans with two barges in tow. The first trip up the river was made the first part of February and the cargo transferred from the barges direct into tank cars for distribution from Memphis by rail. The tank is to be used to hold the reserve supplies, once regular trips have been put into effect.

- New Light on the Tragedy of Meyerling - Europe's Most Baffling Mystery in Royal Life

Tragic love story which culminated in death of Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria and the beautiful Baroness Mary Vetsera on January 30, 1889, surpasses fiction in thrilling dramatic actuality — Hitherto secret details are related :: :: ::



The Baroness Mary Vetsera.

ON THE night of Jan. 30, 1889, Rudolph of Hapsburg, heir apparent to the Austrian imperial throne and—to paraphrase the priest who stood by Marie Antoinette at the guillotine—"son of a hundred Kings," died a bloody and mysterious death in his small hunting lodge at Meyerling, near Vienna. In the morning his body was found, and lying by him in death was Baroness Mary Vetsera, his beautiful young inamorata.

The old Emperor, Franz Josef, in whose somber life this affair provided one of the darkest episodes, immediately closed to the scrutiny of the curious world all the evidence. Those who had knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the deadly drama were called into solemn conclave about the Emperor and his wife and made to swear their silence.

Accordingly, the affair of Meyerling, involving the most popular royal Prince in Europe, and heir in the oldest mundane line, touched with the romance which hedges the loves of the exalted, passed at once into the rank of great enigmas. The dead Prince became another Man in the Iron Mask, another lost Dauphin.

The following article bearing on the Meyerling mystery comes through the London correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World. Its author is not identified, presumably for state reasons. The authority is undoubtedly excellent, however, making the narrative worthy of perusal.

IT IS true, the secret of that night of Jan. 30, 1889, was well kept. The 21 persons who took the oath have kept their word. But if the testimony of those who knew only a portion of the truth, is put together, very little is left for guesswork—only what during a very short space of time passed between the lovers—and that, of course, will never be known.

When friends, who had been in a position to observe, told me what they had seen and heard, I stored everything in my memory; and when there was nothing more to be told, I made notes in a little book for fear of forgetting. As long as there was an Austro-Hungarian monarchy and a Hapsburg Emperor, it would have gone hard with the teller.

During the forenoon of Jan. 31, 1889, the news began to circulate in Vienna that Crown Prince Rudolph was dead. He had suffered a heartstroke while out hunting, there was no medical aid near, he had succumbed, so it was explained.

The news made a deep impression upon Vienna. Hundreds hastened to the imperial palace as if they wished thereby to express their sympathy. But the public feelings were with the Emperor and Empress, more than with the Crown Princess Stephanie. It had been rumored that the marriage was not a happy one—through the fault of the wife, people said. The Crown Prince was known to be a liberal and "could do no wrong."

Crown Princess Stephanie.

During the day it came out that he had died at Meyerling, where he owned a small hunting box and where he had gone to spend a day and night with sporting friends. It was reported that he had stumbled over his rifle and the shot had pierced his forehead.

Next day old Count Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, appeared before the Emperor in Vienna and declared that he could not tell lies to his Hungarians. Out with the truth! He wanted to know how it had all happened. And on the following day he returned to Budapest with permission to publish the news of the Crown Prince's suicide. The cunning old Hungarian fox certainly did not believe this version, either; for, like others, he must have said to himself: If the bigoted Emperor admits suicide, which precludes a meeting after death, there is something worse than suicide behind.

The part played by Empress Elizabeth after the catastrophe was noble and makes her appear in a very different light from that reflected by her life of self-contemplation. The adjutant of the Emperor, and her own master of ceremonies, Count Nopesa, introduced Count Hoyos, adjutant of the Crown Prince, to her breakfast room. He came direct from Meyerling, and told her as much of what had happened as he thought she could bear. She sat silent a couple of minutes, then rose and went straight to the Emperor's room, where she stayed half an hour; then both crossed over to the apartment of the Crown Princess, who was taking a singing lesson from Frau Kauf-Essenthem. The teacher was summoned into an outer room and as the doors of the living rooms in the palace were never closed, she could hear excited voices, crying and sobbing. Still, she did not dare to take her leave. At the end of half an hour a lady in waiting appeared and with a gracious nod informed the artist: "Her Imperial and Royal Highness will not sing any more today!"

Crown Prince Rudolph.

Count Hoyos returned to Meyerling with Prof. Widerhofer, the trusted physician of the Empress. It was four hours before anyone besides the two and the valet, Loschek, was admitted to the death chamber. In the afternoon the post mortem examination took place in the presence of Prof. Meynert, who added to the report that suicide had been committed in a state of temporary insanity. Toward evening a metal coffin came to Meyerling, in which the body was taken to Vienna at midnight.

The body was prepared for the lying-in-state. I saw the dead Prince on his bed in his own room first, and in his coffin in the chapel afterward. I put down my impression in these words: "Rudolph lay on his bed in his white uniform, a purple velvet cover over the lower part of his body. The buttoned tunic was very tight across the breast, the sleeves seemed empty and on the folded hands were gloves stuffed with cotton wool. The skull was quite covered with a white bandage. The face was of deadly pallor, but the expression quiet and grave. The Crown Prince in those days had shaved his beard and wore only a moustache. On the right temple, just below the bandage, there was a small circular wound. The entire right side of the face had been painted by an artist, and wax had been applied to give the features their normal form. At the lying-in-state in the church the catafalque was too high for anything unusual to be noticed, flickering wax tapers and clouds of incense aiding the illusion.

No one in Vienna had any doubt that the Crown Prince would be laid beside his fathers in the vault of the Capucine Church. But the pious fathers thought otherwise. An old ceremonial, which had become obsolete, was announced as unavoidable; the Emperor must knock at the door of the convent and ask for permission to place his son's coffin in the vault. Then the fathers would ask had he died by his own hand? and if the answer was affirmative, permission would be refused. Only a direct order from the Pope would be obeyed.

I wonder if the telegraph official is still alive, who, after taking the oath of secrecy, telegraphed the 2000 words in which the Emperor asked the Pope's permission to bury his son in hallowed ground? Permission was given; and the Emperor, alone, his hand tightly grasping the corner of the coffin, went down into the vault with his son.

Before daybreak on Jan. 31 the station master of Modling, on the Southern Railway line, telephoned to his highest chief, the Director-General, Friedrich von Schuler, that there were great doings in Meyerling. He was ill abed, and had given the service over to a young subaltern, but had asked his wife to watch the road to Meyerling, so he might be prepared in an emergency.

* * * * * * * *

Early in the afternoon Crown Prince Rudolph had passed in a hunting phaeton, and somewhat later, his personal aid, Bratfisch, drove in the same direction, with a veiled lady in a closed carriage. In the course of the evening more closed carriages followed.

There was a "family dinner" in the imperial palace, and the Crown Princess sulked when the Empress told her Rudolph had excused himself and would not dine.

Outside the elegant bric-a-brac shop of Dodeck on the Kohlmarkt the carriage of Countess Marie Larisch—niece of the Empress—was waiting, the fashionable lady having some purchases to make with her young friend, Baroness Mary Vetsera. A long table on which beautiful things were built up high, the Christmas exhibits, still occupied the center of the shop. The Countess was on one side of the table, the diminutive Baroness on the other.

Countess Larisch paid her Christmas bills and took some time over it. When she looked round for the Baroness, that young lady had disappeared and was sought in vain. She had passed from the shop into the crowded street, and though unaccustomed to walk out alone, she had hurried to the Michaelerplatz, where, at the corner of the Herrengasse, stood Bratfisch with his fiacre, into which she mounted, and was driven rapidly away. She was going to Meyerling.

Countess Larisch immediately drove to tell Baroness little kid out of the clutches of a mother that's pulling her down to hades with her. Take it from me, if there wasn't something in me that's just sorry for you, I wouldn't walk these here blocks with you. Sometimes when I look at you right hard, Blink, honest, it looks to me like the coke's got you, Blink."

"Now, Marjie"——

"You wouldn't tell me if it had. But you got the twitches, all righty."

"It's me nerves, Marj; me nerves and you."

"Bah, you got about as much backbone as a jellyfish. Blaming things on a girl."

"You took the backbone out of me, I tell you."

"Oh, no, I didn't; it's been missing since your first birthday."

"Eating out my heart and vitals for you and your confounded highfalutin amen notions."

"Before you ever clapped eyes on me you was more famous for your arm muscles than your backbone. I guess I don't remember how your own mother told me, the very day before she died, how she tried on her old knees to keep you out of a marriage with that woman. All that happened way back in the days when you had your muscles and was head rubber-down at Herschey's. You knew her kind when you did it, and now why ain't you man enough to blame yourself for what you are instead of blaming a girl? Gee!"

"I didn't mean it, Marj. It slipped. S'help me, I didn't. Sometimes I don't know what I'm saying, Marj; that's how my mind kinda gets sometimes. All fuzzed over like."

"What's the odds who you say, Blink? You're just not man size, I guess."

She was a bleak little figure bowing into the wind, her tippet flapping back over one shoulder.

"I ain't, ain't I? I ain't gone through a living hell sitting on the water wagon for you, have I?"

"Try and keep from twitching that way, Blink; you give me the horrors."

"I ain't cut out playing stakes, have I? Gad, I can live from Sunday to Sunday on a pickup from a little gamble here and a little gamble there. But when you hollered, I didn't cut it and begin to work up muscle to get back on the job again, did I? I didn't, did I?"

"You can't pump that into me, Blink."

His voice narrowed to a nasal quality.

"I didn't send her and the kid a whole Christmas box like you wanted me to, did I? I didn't stick a brand new fiver in the black silk dress pattern, knowing all the while she'd have it drunk up before she opened the creases out. I didn't, did I?"

They were approaching a convergence of the two great avenues. The snowfall had lightened. Marjorie Clark let her gaze rest for the moment upon her companion and her voice seemed suddenly to nestle deep in her throat.

"Gee, Blink, if I thought any of the—the uplift stuff I've tried to pump into you had seeped in. Gee, if I could think that, Blink!"

Tears lay close to the surface of her words and his lean face was thrust further forward in affirmation.

"It has, Marj. All I got to do is to think of you and those big black eyes of yours shining, and I could lead a water-wagon parade."

"It's the habits, Blink, you got to watch most. For a minute tonight you looked like coke and—and it scared me. Don't let the coke get you, Blink; for God's sake, don't."

"I sent her a fiver, Marj, and a black silk and a doll with real hair for the kid. Y'oughtta seen, Marj, real hair on it."

"That was fine, Blink. Fine!"

"Where you going? Aw, come, Marj; for the love of Mike, you're not going."

"Yes, yes. I got to go. This is Twenty-ninth street, my corner. That's where I room; that fourth house to the right. That dark one. I got to go."

"Where?"

"Where do you s'pose? Home."

"What's doin' there?"

"N-nothing."

"Whatta you going to do Christmas eve? Sit in your two by four and twiddle your thumbs?"

Immediate sobs rose to her throat.

"Lord," she said, "I dunno! I dunno!"

He set up the jangling again.

"It's Christmas eve, Marj."

"That's right, rub it in," and she looked away from him.

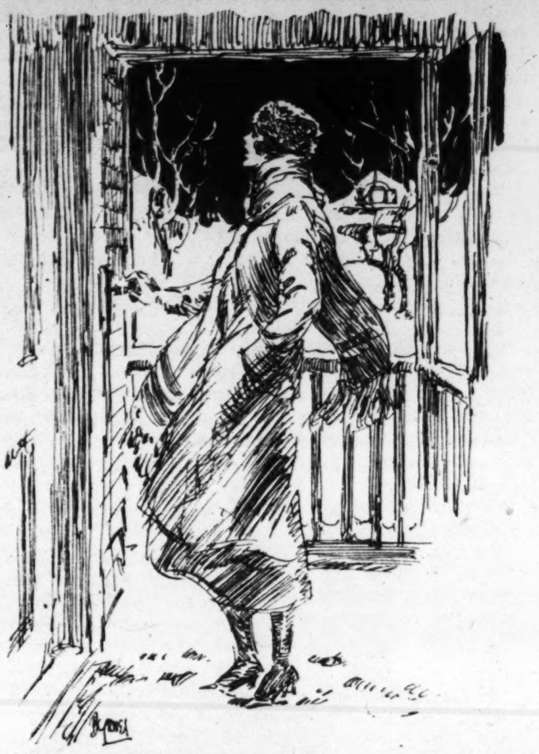
"Come, Marj; don't leave me high and dry like this. Come, I'll blow you to a little supper, kiddo. I got a couple of meal tickets coming to me down at Harry's on some ivories I threw last night."

"Dice! And after the line of talk you just tried to make me swallow. Did I believe it? I did not."

"No stakes, Marj. Just for a couple of meal tickets we tossed. Come, girl, you ain't been down to Harry's for months; you won't get your halo mussed from one time. It's Christmas eve, Marj."

"I heard you the first time."

"If I got to go it alone tonight, Marj, it'll be the wettest Christmas I ever spent, it will. I'll pickle this Christmas eve like it was never pickled before, I will."



As she pulled the old fashioned bell handle her face sickened.

"Aren't you no man at all, threatening like that? Just no man at all?"

"I tell you, if I got to go it alone tonight, I won't be. I'm crazy enough to tear things wide open."

"A line of talk like that will send me home quicker than anything, if you want to know it." She turned her face away and toward the dark aisle of the side street.

"I didn't meant it, Marj."

"I hate whining."

"Don't go, girl. Don't. Don't give me the horrors and leave me alone tonight, Marj."

She moved slowly into the gloom of the crosstown street. Solemn rows of blank-faced houses flanked it. Wind slewed as through a canyon, whistling in a high pitch.

"Gee!"

"Fine little joy lane for your Christmas eve, eh? Don't go, Marj. Have a heart and be a sport. Let me blow you to a supper down at Harry's for old times' sake. Didn't you promise my old woman to keep an eye on me? Didn't you? For old times' sake, Marj. It's Christmas."

She stood shivering and gazing down into the black throat of the street.

"It'll be a merry evening in that two by four of yours, won't it? Look at it down there; cheerful, ain't it?"

Tears formed in a glaze over her eyes.

"Be a sport, Marj."

"All right—Blink!"

At the family entrance to Harry's place, and just around the corner from the main entrance of knee-high swinging doors and a broadside of frosted plate-glass front, a bead of gas burned sullenly through a red globe, winking, so to speak, at all who would enter there under cover of its murk.

Women with faces the fatty white of jade, and lips that might have kissed blood, slipped from the dark side of the side street into the entrance. Furtive couples rose out of the night—the men, lean as lathes, collars turned up and caps drawn down; girls, some with red lights and some with no lights in their eyes, and most of them with chalk-colored powder laid on over the golden pollen of youth.

Within Harry's Place, Christmas found little enough berth except that above the great soaped-over mirror at the far-end of the room a holly wreath dangled from the tarnished gilt frame and against the clouded-over glass a forefinger had etched a careless Merry Christmas.

At tables set so close that waiters side-stepped between them, the habitues of Harry's Place dined—wined, too, but mostly out of uncovered steins or two-inch stemless glasses. And here and there at smaller tables a solitary figure with a seer's light in his eyes sipped his greenish milk!

An electric piano, its shallow tones undigested by the crowded room, played in response to whomsoever slipped a coin into its maw. Kicked-up sawdust lay in the air like flakes.

From her table near the door Miss Marjorie Clark pushed from her a litter of half-tasted dishes and sent her dark glance out over the room. A few pairs of too sinuous dancers circled a small clearing around the electric piano. Waiters with fans of foam-drifting steins clutched between fingers, jostled them in passing. At a small table adjoining, a girl slept in her arms. Two more entered elbow in elbow, and directly a youth in a wide-striped wool sweater muffled high to his teeth and features that in spite of himself would twitch and twitch again.

"Hi, Blink," he said in passing.

"Hi!"

Reader, your heart lifted up and glowing with Yuletide and good will toward men, turn not in warranted nausea from the reek of Harry's Place. Mere plants can love the light and turn to it, but have not the beautiful mercy to share their loveliness with foul places. The human heart is a finer work. It can, if it will, turn its white light upon darkness, so that out of it even a single seed may take heart and grow. A fastidious olfactory nerve has no right to domain over the quality of mercy. The heart should keep its thousand doors all open, each heart-string a latch-string, and each latch-string out.

Marjorie Clark met her companion's eyes above the rim of his stein.

"Looks more like hell on a busy day down here than like Christmas eve, don't it?"

He was warmed, and the tight skin had softened as dried fruit expands in water.

"Ah-h-h, but I feel better, kiddo."

"That's three steins you've had, Blink. And there's no telling what you filled up on those three times you went out."

"It's Christmas eve, kiddo. What kind of a good time do you want for your money? A Christmas tree trimmed with tin angels?"

"Do I? You just bet your life I do."

"Then let me get it for you, sugar plum. You just stick to me tonight and you can have any little thing your heart desires. Here, waiter." And he jingled again in the depths of his pocket.

"If you want to lose my company double quick, just you order another stein. Just look at you seeing double already."

"I'm all right, baby! never felt better in my life."

"You caught me when I was down and blue, didn't you, and pumped me full of a lot of Sunday school talk, that's what you did. And I was fool enough to get soft and come down here with you, I was! But I felt it in my bones you was lying. I knew I was right about the coke. I seen you throw a high sign to that twitching guy in the striped sweater. I knew I was right. God, I—I just knew."

He leaned for her hand.

"Little bittsie, black-eyed baby, you got me wrong."

"Ugh-h, quit. Let go;"

He straightened, regarding her solemnly and controlling the slight swaying of his figure.

"I'm a gentleman."

Her laugh was more of a cough.

"There ain't no such animal."

"There ain't? I seen you trying to rope one today, all righty. I seen you."

"You what?"

"Sure I did. The slick guy in checks."

"You"——

"Sure, I seen you. I was loafing around the Grand Union a whole hour before you seen me today, baby doll. I seen the whole show. Grabbed the slick little checkers right out the line, didn't you? Bowled him over with those black eyes of yours. Went for him right like he was a stick of candy and you was licking it, eh? Pretty slick to take in a big eyeful like that, wasn't I? Some little Checkers, he was."

Red leaped to her face.

"Cut that!"

"Gad, what you mad about, kiddo? Gentleman friend, eh?"

"You just cut that talk, and double quick, too."

"After bigger game, eh, kiddo?"

"Fine chance."

"Not good enough down here, eh?"

"No, if you want to know it. No."

"He liked you, kiddo."

"Yes, he liked me. He liked me, all righty, like they all do. God, if I'd ever run across a fellow that was on the level with me, I'd get the hysterics right in his face, I would. Right in his face!"

"I'm on the level, Marj, only"——

"You try to begin that, now."

"I am, and you know it."

"You're about as straight as a horseshoe."

"I may backslide now and then, sweetness, but"——

"There's no backsliding for you any more, Blink. After that Gregory raid business you slid back as far in my mind as a fellow can slide."

He drained his glass and this time caught his sway a bit too late.

"Forget that, kiddo."

"I can't. It was that showed me plainer than all that went before how I was wasting my time working over you."

"Ain't I got something on you, too, peaches; but you

The old way of handling river freight along the levee at Memphis.

What Other Cities on the Mississippi Are Doing to Boom River Transportation

Thirty-five hundred carloads of mixed freight already in the warehouses at Memphis, where net profit for city has already been earned on terminal property—First shipload of cotton for foreign export left in February —Progress in other river cities ::

THE ink was hardly dry on news dispatches telling of the enactment of a rivers and harbors bill carrying an appropriation for improvement of inland waterways scarcely adequate to really improve a negligible part of even one stream, before river navigation advocates from the Mississippi Valley were en route to Washington to renew the fight.

What, then, is to become of river navigation? During the war there was much talk about development of this vital part of the transportation possibilities, and it looked for a time as though all of the rivers in the country would be made navigable as a war measure.

Then came the signing of the armistice and already it is feared that the rivers are to be left to their own devices and a means of transportation that it is admittedly needed neglected for another period of years.

The action of Congress in cutting the rivers and harbors appropriation for improvement of inland waterways from $40,000,000 to $12,000,000 was a keen blow to river transportation advocates. It will be a severe setback to business in the Mississippi Valley, unless Congress is persuaded to remedy the situation through the Newton bill or other similar measure.

St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans and other cities along the lower Mississippi River, Kansas City on the Missouri and cities along the Ohio River, all showed good faith by actually installing boat lines on the rivers in consideration of Congress promising to make proper improvement provisions.

They were told that unless they got busy and put in adequate river terminals along the river route, no further money would be spent by the Federal Government. So they got busy. Memphis has under way the construction of a modern river terminal to cost, with warehouses, railroad tracks, wharf and floating docks complete, approximately $500,000. St. Louis has elaborate plans for the utilization of her river resources. New Orleans has selected a site for her river terminals and is proceeding to construct them on a scale commensurate with the possibilities of the traffic, and to provide proper facilities for transferring river freight to ocean bottoms and vice versa.

Greenville, Miss., has spent $200,000 on a modern concrete wharf and has plans drawn and estimates prepared for the construction of a terminal. The Greenville wharf is being used as a model by Government engineers in the construction of the new wharf at Cincinnati. Helena, Ark., has purchased a site for the river terminal and has formed an improvement district to carry on the work. The laws of Arkansas prohibit a municipality issuing bonds, and as the formation of an improvement district for river betterments is a new project, the matter is being held up pending an opinion by the court on its validity. "Shippers here are enthusiastic over the prospect for a resumption of river traffic," according to George A. Sandford, secretary of the Helena Business Men's League.

Memphis having completed her warehouse plant, has begun using the river to a far greater extent than in years past. The first shipment of cotton to leave the city by water for export destination in 20 years, left the Memphis terminal the first week in February. The only real trouble in navigating the river is found between St. Louis and Cairo and it has been hoped that Congress would furnish the money required to remedy that condition. Memphis has an active river commission which has in charge the construction of the new terminals.

The people of Memphis some time ago authorized the issuance of $1,000,000 in bonds to provide funds for warehouses, floating docks and all equipment for a modern terminal. Of this amount $500,000 has been issued and sold and $230,000 expended in the purchase of site and warehouses on the river front. Work is now under way to cut down the lofty bank at the site of the terminal and to construct there a modern concrete wharf, with tracks and chutes and other machinery required for the expeditious loading and unloading of river craft. Because of the frequent changes in the river stage, floating docks will be used. In this way, no matter how high or how low the river gets, it will be possible to handle incoming or outgoing freight at Memphis. When completed the river terminal will have 300,000 square feet under cover and electric trucks will convey the freight to and from the loading platforms.

Perhaps the best informed man locally on river subjects declares that the completion of the terminal facilities here will see a real revival of river traffic. Until then he does not believe there will be any appreciable increase in the amount of tonnage handled in or out of Memphis. An experienced river freight officer has been put in charge of the Memphis office of the Government barge line and is actually engaged in soliciting business for the barges. Up to the present, however, his work has been handicapped by lack of conveniences to handle the freight.

Whether the Government barge lines operate or not, after the railroads are returnd to private owners and the railroad administration passes into history, members of the Memphis River Terminal Commission feel that the city made a good investment when bonds were issued for the purchase of the present plant. A net profit of $6000 above interest charges has been earned since the property passed into the city's hands. This amount was turned into the city treasury on Jan. 1. At present there are approximately 3500 carloads of steel goods, farm implements, automobiles, feed and package goods stored in the warehouses.

However, after the city has invested the remaining $270,000 available, it will be necessary that the river business earn a return, because the warehouse is receiving capacity patronage now and the investment is less than half the amount to be expended in modernizing the terminals.

Plans contemplate the construction of a platform 16 feet wide to extend entirely around the warehouses to accommodate electrically operated trucks. New railroad tracks to accommodate additional cars are to be constructed. The contract calls for the completion of the Memphis terminal by May 1.

Private capital is displaying unusual interest in plans for the restoration of river navigation. The Standard Oil Co. has nearly completed a large crude oil tank at Memphis, from which it is proposed to supply river craft with fuel, and the Sugar Products Co. of New York, importers of black strap molasses, are building a huge holder to store 750,000 gallons of molasses and have purchased three barges and a steam-

I was born yesterday? Well, I wasn't, or the day before or the day before that. Honest to God, if I was a nice appearing fellow like you I'd be ashamed, I would. I go out in the garden and eat worms, I would."

He retreated before her scorn, but smiling.

"I'll get you yet, you little vix," he said; you pretty little black-eyed vix, you, I'll get you yet."

"Like hell you will."

"If you change your mind, come out on the 8:18, girlie. Two blocks to the left of the station; the corner house, with a little weather cock over the porch. Can't miss it. I'll be drapin' the tree in tin fringe and wishing you were there."

"Oh," she cried, her voice cracked spang across with a sob, "I—I hate you."

"No you don't," he said, smiling and gathering his parcels.

"Do."

"Don't."

"Do."

"What's that on your wrist?"

"Where?"

"There. I thought you said you threw it away."

Her right hand flew to her left wrist as if a welt lay there.

"This, I—huh—I—I forgot I had it on. This—this little old bracelet you said you found in the subway. It—it's nothing but red celluloid, anyway. I—I nearly did throw it away."

"You look just like a little gypsy, you do, with that red comb in that black hair of yours and that red bracelet on your little brown arm. I'll swear if I didn't miss my train by 10 minutes the first time I seen you standing here at this counter with those big black eyes of yours shining out."

"You'll miss it again if you don't run along, Charley-boy."

"Dare you to come along! I'll wait for the 5:18."

"Don't hold your breath till I do."

"Dare you to come out on the 8:18. Say the word and I'll be at the station."

"I'll see myself crazy with the blues first."

"You might as well come, kiddo, because I'll get you yet."

"Try the soft-pedal stuff about the kid and the Christmas tree on the girl at the Glendale station. Maybe she hasn't cut her eyeteeth yet."

A flush swept his face like a quick wind.

"You're a bum sport, all righty."

"And you! Gee, if I was to tell you what I think you are. If I was!"

She sank her teeth into her lower lip to keep it from trembling, but smiled.

"But I wouldn't take the trouble, Charley-boy—honest, I wouldn't take the trouble."

"I'll get you yet, you little vix," he insisted, his white smile flashing, and retreating into the crowd.

"You—oh—oh, you!"

She stood looking after him, head backward and hip arched forward, in the pose of Carmen's immortal defiance. But behind her flashing attitude her heart rose in her throat and a warm gush of blood to her face, betraying it.

When the illuminated hands of the illuminated tower clock swung to the angle of 5 o'clock, Miss Marjorie Clark and Miss Minnie Bundt, from the fancy fruit stand opposite, cast off the brown cocoon of their workaday for the trim street finery which the American shopgirl, to the stupefaction of economists and theorists, can somehow evolve out of $8 a week.

In the locker room they met, the placid sky-colored eyes of Miss Bundt meeting Miss Clark's in the wavy square of mirror.

"Snowing, ain't it?"

"Yep."

"Gee, that's a nifty little hat, Min. Where'd you get the pompom?"

"Five and Ten."

"If it ain't got the avenue written all over it."

Silence.

"Want some of my powder, Min? Pink?"

"Nope."

"Want to—want to go to a movie tonight or—or bum around the stores? It's Christmas eve."

"Can't."

"Date?"

"Yep."

Silence.

A flush rose to Miss Clark's face, darkening it. She adjusted her dyed fur tippet and a small imitation fur cap at just the angle which doubled its face value. Something seemed to leap out from her eyes and then retreat behind a smile and a squint.

"Say, Min, if my voice hurt me like yours does, I'd rub salve on it," and went out, slamming the door behind her. But a tear lay on the edge of her brown-curved lashes, threatening to ricochet down her smoothly powdered cheek. She winked it in again. The station swarm was close to her, jostling, kicking her ankles in passing, buffeting.

From out the swift tide a figure without an overcoat, and a cap visor pulled well down over his eyes, locked her arm from the rear so that she sprang about, releasing herself.

"For God's sake, Blink, cut the pussy-foot tread, will you? I've jabbed with a hatpin for less than that."

"Merry Christmas, Marj."

"Yes. I'm merry as a crutch. What brought you around, Blink?"

"Can't a fellow drop around to pick you up?"

"Land that job?"

"Not a chance. What they want down there is a roughneck, not a gentleman rubber-down. Say, take it from me; after a fellow has worked in the high-class Turkish baths, Third avenue joints ain't up to his tone no more. I got to have class, kiddo; that's why I got such a lean toward you."

"Cut that."

"Come down tonight, Marj?"

"Where?"

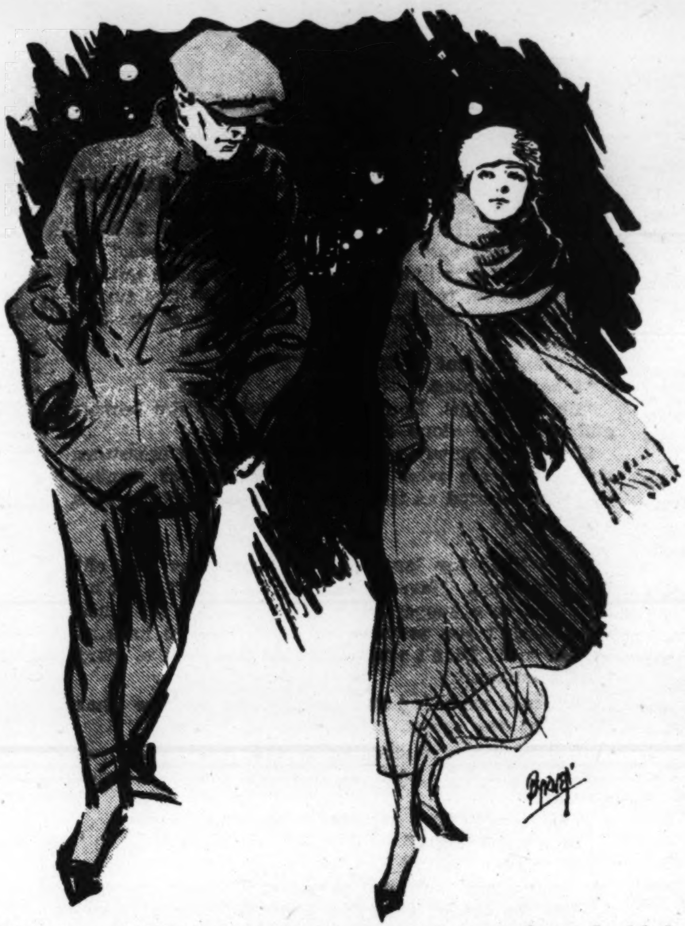
"Harry's."

"Well, I guess not."

"Buy you a dinner."

"But you're flat as your hand."

He set up a jingling in his left pocket.



"You're a little quitter, you are, and sometimes I think you're out for bigger game."

"I am, am I?"

"Well, I'm not going."

"When you going to cut this comedy, Marj?"

"I'm not. I'm just beginning."

"Breaking into high society, eh? Fine chance."

"Yes, with the gang of you down there hanging on like the plague I got a swell chance, nix."

"It's because we know you too well, Marj. Knew you when you had two black pigtails and used to carry a bucket into the family entrance of Harry's place, crying with madness every time your old man sent you. Gad, I can see you yet, sweetness, with your big black eyes blacker than ever, and steering home your old man from off a jamboree."

"God, sometimes I wake up in the night, just like him and ma was still alive and me and her was sitting there listening to him creak up the stairs on his bad night. I wake up, I can tell you, in a sweat—right in a sweat."

"I knew you in them days, kiddo, just like you knew me. That's why you can't pull nothing over on a fellow, kiddo, that's had as many pulls on your all-day suckers as I have. You're a little quitter, you are, and sometimes I think you're out for bigger game."

"It don't mean because a girl was born in the mud she's got to stick there, does it?"

"No, but she can't pretend she don't know one of the old mud turtles when she sees one."

"Mud turtle is the right name."

"The crowd has got your number all right, kiddo; they know you're out after bigger game. You're a little turncoat, that's what they say about you."

"Turncoat! Who wouldn't turn a coat they was ashamed of? I guess you all don't remember how I used to say even back in those years, when I was taking tickets down at Lutes' old Fourteenth Street Amusement Parlors, that I was going to breeze away from the gang down there."

"I remember, all righty."

"How I was going to get me a job uptown here, where I could get in with a decent crowd of girls and not be known for the kind down there that you and all of 'em knew, I—I wasn't."

"Sure we knew."

"Yes, but what good does that do me? Can a dirty little yellow-haired snip over in the fancy fruits give me the once-over and a turn-down? She can. And why? Because I ain't certified. I come from a counterfeit crowd, and who's going to take the trouble to find my number and see if it's real?"

"Aw, now"——

"Didn't a broken-down old granny over in the Thirty-fourth street house where I roomed give me notice last week, because Addie Lynch found me out one night and came to see me lit up like a Christmas tree."

"That's why I say, Marj, stick to the old ones who know you."

"Like May Pope used to say, a girl might as well have the game as the name."

"If I was a free man, Marjie, I'd"——

"Where has the straight and narrow got me to, I'd like to know? Sometimes I think it's nothing but a blind alley pushing me back."

"If I was a free man, Marj"——

"Let me meet a slick little up-stage fellow that doesn't have to look two ways before he walks the wrong beat in daylight; let me meet a fellow like that, and where does it get me?"

"I'm no saint, Marj, but there ain't a beat in town I'd have to look two ways on. Ask any cop"——

"Does the slick little up-stage fellow get my number? He does not. I'd like to see one of them ask that dirty little yellow head over in the fancy fruits to go home with him. A little nobody-home like her, just because she was raised in the amen-corner of the Bronx and has a six-foot master mechanic brother to call for her every time she works 15 minutes later, she can wear her hands crossed on her chest and a lily stuck in 'em and get away with it, too."

"You're right, kiddo; you got more sand than 10 of such put together."

"I'm as good as her and better. I'm not so sure by a long shot that any of those baby faces would say no if they was ever invited to say yes. Watch out there, that cab, Blink. Gee, your nerves are as steady as gelatin."

They were veering through the crowds and out into the soft flurry of the storm. Flakes like pulled out bits of cotton floated to their shoulders, resting there. Seventh avenue, for the instant before the eye left the great Greek facade of the Grand Union Station, was like a dream of Athens seen through the dapple of white shadows. Immediately the eye veered, however, the great cosmopolis formed by street meeting avenue tore down the illusion. Another block and second-hand clothing shops nudged one another, their flapping wares for sale outside them like clothes wash on a line, empty arms and legs gallivanting in the wind. A storm car combed through the driven snow, scuttling it and clearing the tracks. Down another block the hot spicy smell of a Mexican dish floated out between the swinging doors of an all-night bar. A man lurched out, laughing and crying.

Marjorie Clark's companion steered her past and turned toward her his twitching features, suddenly, and even through their looseness, softened.

"Poor kiddo," he said. "Just send them to me for reference. I can do some tall vouching for you."

"The way I feel lately sometimes, honest, I think if I get to getting the indigoes much deeper, there's no telling where they'll land me. The game as well as the name ain't all poetry, let me tell you that."

Through the fall of mild snow he could see her face shining out darkly, and his bare, eager fingers moved toward her arm, and except when the spasmodic twitch locked his features, his face, too, was thrust forward, keen and close to hers.

"I've been telling you that for five years, girl."

"Now, don't go getting me wrong, Blink."

"If I was what the law calls a free man, Marj, you know what kind of a proposition I would have put up to you five years ago, when I had my health and my looks and"——

"If you want to make me sore, just tune up that old song. You ain't man enough to even get your own

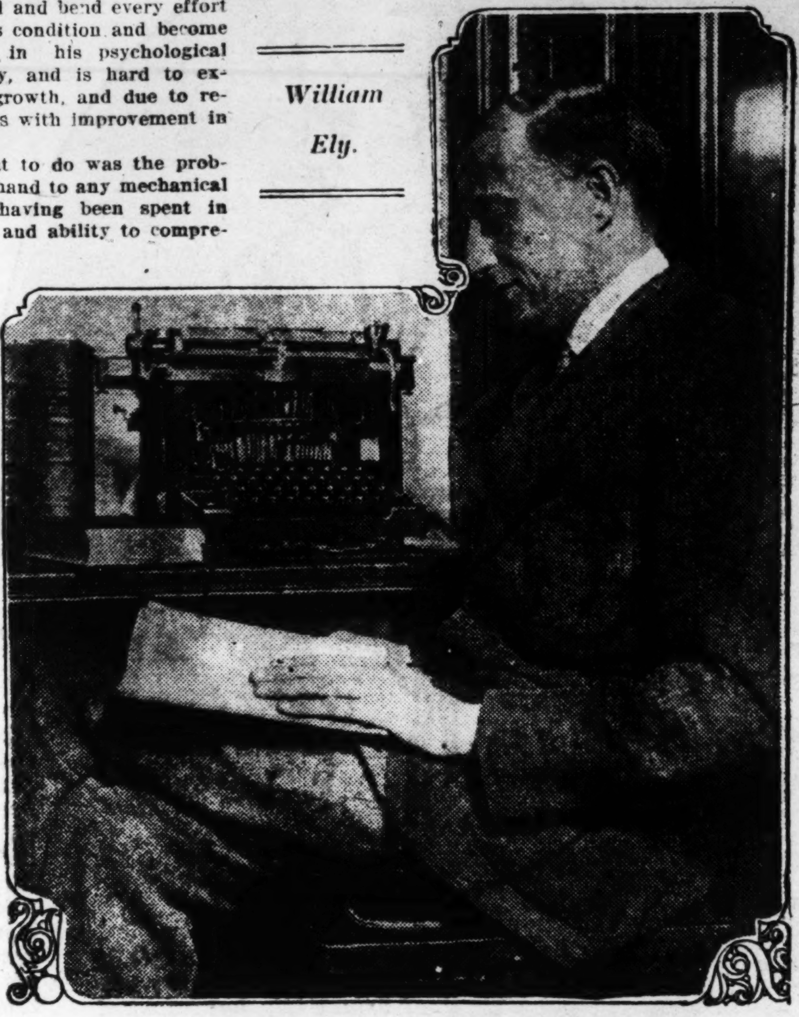
THE YOUNG MAN YOU SEE, ONCE IN A WHILE, SELLING BROOMS

He is St. Louis University's most interesting law student—Lost wife, only child and his eyesight all in a space of a few months—Yet, with these handicaps, he has readjusted himself to a new world and will soon be a member of the bar with special talents for the practice of law ::



William Ely.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN read his law books by the uncertain, flickering light of a log fire when he was preparing for admission to the bar, and the history of American jurisprudence is laden with examples of young men who worked and studied under almost insurmountable obstacles to become lawyers. In fact, the majority of men in this country whose accomplishments have truly counted for the lasting benefit of their fellow men in the branch of law practice, have come from the ranks with the sweat of heavy toil upon their brows.

In the general course of things now it is easier than of old to acquire a legal education, or fit one's self for any specialty. Books are more plentiful, and there are more schools. Besides talent and ambition almost invariably attract attention and patrons. But all these advantages of the later-day civilization count for little if one is prevented by blindness from taking advantage of them.

Under the handicap of sightless eyes and the necessity of earning his living, William Ely, 32 years old, a native of St. Louis and Central High School graduate, is completing a course in law at the St. Louis University Institute of Law. He has finished three years of the course, and in September will take the bar examination at Jefferson City, and in June, 1921, will receive his "sheepskin" and become a full-fledged lawyer.

Ely was not always blind, the affliction having come to him relatively late in life. This fact, in a measure, makes the deficiency the more keenly felt, as with adults it is difficult to attain proficiency in the things which so materially aid sightless persons who have learned them in early childhood. Withal, he has done wonders in that direction, having mastered the Braille system of raised letters and the ordinary typewriter.

Up until about six years ago Ely possessed his sight, and was a prosperous and promising business man. After leaving high school he entered the employ of a national bank in St. Louis, and showed unusual talent for accounting routine. Later he specialized in credits and auditing and was engaged in that capacity by several firms here. He married, and his family life was ideally happy, he having one child, a girl, who was the absorbing and central point of interest in the parents' lives.

The corporation for which Ely was working assigned him to take charge of its interests at the town of Augusta, Ark., which lies about 18 miles west of Memphis, Tenn. It was there that the hand of fate seemed to single him out for hard blows and the bestowal of unusual and heavy misfortunes. First of all, in March, 1914, his little daughter died, and in August of the same year his wife contracted typhoid fever and succumbed to the disease.

Not satisfied with these evidences of its vicissitudes, the pursuing fate reached still further and struck down the young man with nervous prostration, which culminated in a paralytic stroke that deprived him of his eyesight. He was weeks recovering, and when a relative degree of health was regained, Ely discovered that he had been deprived permanently of the power to perceive objects in the light of day.

In the expenses connected with the illness and deaths of his wife and child and his own long sickness virtually everything which Ely possessed in the way of accumulated resources were consumed. He returned to St. Louis, where his sister lived, and for two long years was sunk in the deepest depression, bordering on absolute despair. Life seemed to hold nothing for him, and he made no effort to rescue himself from the grasp of mental and physical inertia.

During those months, however, there was working a saving influence in the form of the bright and cheering disposition of his sister, Mrs. Virginia Ely Weber, whose home is at 3687 Blaine avenue. Her indefatigable good humor and untiring attentions proved a material help to renew the lagging ambition and energy of her brother.

Gradually it dawned on the afflicted young man that he must still live, possibly for many years, and that he was getting nowhere in his condition of lassitude and depression. He determined to rescue himself from his unhappy state of mind and bend every effort to do something to improve his condition and become self-supporting. The change in his psychological status, he says, came suddenly, and is hard to explain, but doubtless it was a growth, and due to reawakening of his mental powers with improvement in his health.

Which way to turn and what to do was the problem. He had never turned his hand to any mechanical occupation, his working life having been spent in banks and offices, where sight and ability to comprehend figures and their meaning were more essential than digital dexterity. He talked to and consulted with other blind persons and persons whose philanthropical effort is devoted to assisting the blind. These talks were not encouraging, but finally he determined to learn the trade of making brooms.

For a while Ely worked in the school where broom making is taught, making fair progress. He found, however, that he could not bring this undertaking to the success he desired, and decided to try somthing else. Different occupations were canvassed, and a trial was made at piano tuning. Here, too, Ely made some headway, but was handicapped by having never studied music and lack of a practiced ear for comparing sounds. So piano tuning was abandoned, and in an inspired moment the seeker hit upon the study of law. Other blind men had mastered this long and arduous study, why not he?

With certain misgiving, it must be said, he applied to the law school and matriculated. The very first day of his first term, however, banished all doubts. The thing seemed possible—it could and would be done. Professors and fellow students were to a man interested in the much-hampered student and disposed to go out of their way to aid him. Being obliged to work days, he attends the night classes and lectures. Certain students study with him, reading the books aloud and aiding him in seeking references and in other details which lack of sight prevents his attending to.

Ely proposes to specialize in commercial law, thereby being able to take advantage of the experience gained when he was in business. He does not plan to do much actual work, though he will be equipped and fully able to appear and plead should occasion require him to do so. He is well versed in collections and credits, in which specialty he hopes to build up a practice. He feels certain that when once his shingle is hung out, business will build up and develop and numerous things will present themselves which he will be capable of handling. In any event, he has successfully solved his problem and faces the future with optimism and a stanch heart.

By way of temporary occupation, and to pay for his daily living and tuition through the law school, Ely sells brooms. Each morning he sets forth with a bundle of them under his arm, and does not return until all are disposed of. In his merchandising the blind student covers all parts of the city and is able to find his way around with astonishing skill. He is an expert on the quality of brooms, and knows the good from the poor far better than the average person wielding them.

Ely says he meets with varied experiences in his peregrinations about town. He could fill a book with an account of them, and some would form the basis for short stories, comic as well as in the opposite vein. As a rule he is kindly received, but sometimes, he declares, he is most emphatically not given notably courteous consideration. When it is appreciated that he is blind, there is almost invariably consideration paid him, but in his face there is no evidence of the young man's afflication.

He is a bit sensitive about having his wares purchased as an act of charity on the part of the purchaser. He is dealing in a good quality of necessary merchandise, and wishes to transact business on that basis. However, he is quick to appreciate any kind or sympathetic word. His smile is illuminating and a pleasure to see, and is ample reward for any act which brings it into play. Ely has many friends who are devoted to him, and doubtless would extend him pecuniary aid were it not for his well known preference for making his own way instead of proceeding in a seemingly smoother one paved gratuitously.

It requires but a short personal exchange with Ely to realize that he has solved his problem. There is a genuine quality in his smile and conviction in his voice. He lives at 4033 Washington avenue and has for roommates two friends, afflicted as he is. Most of his spare moments are spent in study, and for recreation he goes to visit his sister. Sometimes he attends a concert, he being passionately fond of music, and at still rare intervals, goes to a play at the theater. He says he gets much more out of a play than one would suppose. His favorite dramas are those of Shakspeare. But nothing competes with the pleasure derived from visiting his sister, whom he calls "the most wonderful little 'sis' who ever lived."

Edison's Assistant Tells Stories About Him

THOMAS A. EDISON'S business assistant and biographer, William H. Meadowcroft, chatting the other day about his chief, told of a snapshot of Edison which he showed to the latter and asked him what he thought of it. His reply was:

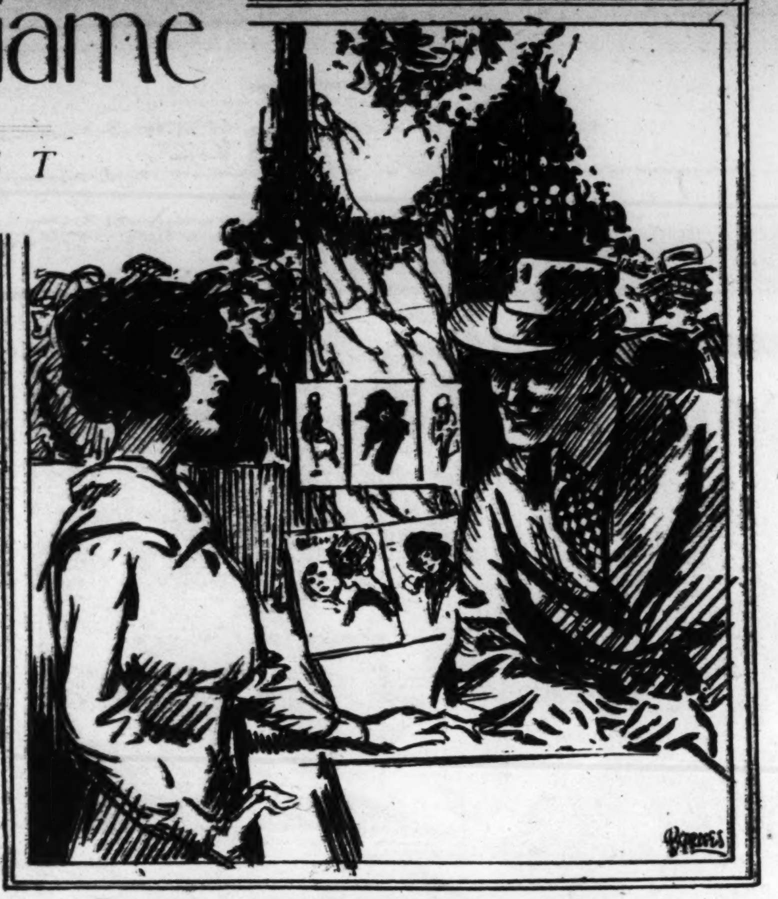
"It is almost impossible to get a really good photograph of a person. A difference of a thousandth of an inch in lens will produce a different expression in a person's face. If you will take this photograph and compare it with a half-dozen others taken at different time, you will scarcely realize it is the same person.

"The other day," continued the biographer of Edison, "a boy came in with a memorandum from one of the heads of the departments. Mr. Edison read it and then gave the boy a verbal message. The boy went out, and Mr. Edison turned to me with a humorous twinkle in his eye and said: 'When that boy has gone 50 feet he will be absolutely unable to remember that message correctly. There is one boy around here who can carry a message about 200 feet, and another about 300 feet, and I have seen only one lately that could carry a message all the way to the other building down the yard. So I very rarely send an oral message, but I write it.'

"One day, when talking on the subject of food, he mentioned the fact that some explorers in Labrador perished from starvation and contended that it was through ignorance, as at their feet there was an unlimited supply of food that would have kept them alive until they could reach supplies of regular food. He referred to a peculiar kind of moss that grows in Labrador, which, when boiled, yields a jelly-like food capable of sustaining them."

The Name and the Game

By FANNIE HURST



"You're one funny little girl; but, gee, I like you."

AT CHRISTMAS-TIDE men and women with soiled lives breathe alcoholic sighs and dare to glance back into the dim corridors of their long agos.

Cronies, snug in an age of steam heat, turn their warm backs upon today, swap white-Christmas stories and hanker with forefinger laid alongside of nose for the baseburners and cold backs of the good old days.

Not least upon the busy magnate's table is his shopping list.

Evenings, $2-a-week salesgirls sit in their $5-a-week hall bedrooms, with their aching feet in a tub of hot water and their aching fingers busy with baby ribboned coat hangers and silk needle-book tokens of Yuletide affection.

Even as it flowered in a manger, the Christmas spirit, a perennial lily upon the sooty face of the world, blooms out of the slack heap of men's rife and strife.

In the hearts of children it is a pod filled with their first happiness.

Down from a sky the color of cold dishwater a cloak of swift snow fell upon the city, muffling its voice like a hand held against its mouth. Children who had never before beheld a white Christmas leaped with the joy of it. A sudden army of men with blue faces and no overcoats sprang, full-grown and armed with shovels, from out the storm. City parks lay etched in sudden finery. Men coming up out of the canyon of Wall street remembered that it was Christmas and felt for bauble money.

At early dusk and through the white dance of the white storm the city slid its 4,000,000 packs off its 4,000,000 backs and turned homeward. Pedestrians with the shopper's light in their eyes bent into the flurry and darted for surface cars and subways. Commuters, laden with bundles and with tickets between their teeth, rushed for early trains.

Women with bearing-down bundles and babies wedged through the crowd, fighting for trains and place. Boys in cadet uniforms and boarding-school girls homeward bound, thrust forward their shining faces as if into the tomorrow. A tight tangle of business men passed single file through a trellised gateway and on down to a lower level. A messenger with a tipsy spray of holly stuck upright in his cap whacked a folded newspaper at a fellow messenger's swift legs and darted in and around the knees of the crowd. A prodigal hesitated, then bought a second-class ticket for home. Two nuns hurried softly on missions of Christmas.

The low thunder of a thousand feet, tired feet, eager feet, flat feet, shabby feet, young feet, callous feet, arched and archless feet. Voices that rose like wind to a gale. A child dragged by the arm and whimpering. A group of shawled strangers interchanging sharp jargon.

Within the marble mausoleum of a waiting room, its benches lined with the kaleidoscopic faces of the traveling public, a train announcer bellowed a paean of tracks and stations.

At the onyx and nickel-plated periodical stand men in passing snatched their evening paper from off the stack on the counter, flopping down their pennies as they ran. In the glow of a spray of red and white electric bulbs, in a bower of the instant's pretty-girl periodical covers, and herself the most vivid of them all, Miss Marjorie Clark caught a hastily flung copper coin on the fly, her laughter mounting with it.

"Whoops, la-la!"

"Good catch, kiddo."

"Oh, you Charley-boy, who was you pitching for last season?"

"The Reds, because that's your color."

"Say, if you're going to catch that 4:18 you've got to break somebody's speed limit between here and track 10. Run along, Charley-boy, and Merry Christmas."

But Mr. Charles Scully swung to a halt, poured his armful of packages into a wire basket of six-city post-card-views for 10 cents, swung open his overcoat, with a sprinkling of snow on its slick-napped velvet collar, lifted his small mustache in a smile.

"Black-eyes, I'd miss three trains for you."

"There's not another until the 4:40."

"I should worry. Anyway, for all I know you've changed your mind and are coming out with me tonight, little one."

The quick blood ran up into her small face, dyeing it and she withdrew from his nearing features.

"I have not! Gee, you're about as square as a doughtnut, you are."

"Jumping Juniper, can't a fellow miss his train just to wish a little beauty like you a Merry Christmas. But on the level, I want to take you out home with me tonight; honest, I do, little spitfire."

"Crank up there, Charley-boy; you got about 30 seconds to make make that train in."

"Gets you sore every time I ask you out, don't it, black-eyes? Talk about your little tin saints!"

"Say, if you was any slicker you'd slide."

"You can't scare me with those black eyes."

"Can't I, my brave boy! Say, you'd want to quarantine the dictionary if you found smallpox in it, that's how hard you are to scare."

"Well, of all the lines of talk, if you ain't got the greatest. Cute is no name for you."

"And say, the place where you clerk must be a classy clothes parlor, Charley-boy."

"Right-o, little one! If you ever pass by the Brown Haberdashery, on Twenty-third street, drop in and I'll buy you a lunch."

"Tra-la, where did you get that checked suit, and I'll bet you flag the train out at Glendale where you live with that tie. Oh, you Checkers!"

"Some class to me, eh, kiddo?"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that."

He leaned closer. His smile had an uplift like a crescent and slight depression in his left cheek, too low for a dimple, twinkled when he smiled, like an adjacent star.

"Take it from me, Queenie, these glad rags are my stock in trade. In my line I got to sport them. At home I'm all to the overalls. If my boss was to see the old red wool smoking jacket I wear around the house, he'd fire me for burlesquing the business."

"Well of all the nerve. Let go my hand."

"Didn't know I had it, little one."

"And say, you give back that kodak picture you swiped off me yesterday. I don't give my photographs out promiscuous."

"That little snapshot of you? Nix, I will! I took that home and hung it in a mother-of-pearl frame right over the parlor table."

"Sure! And above the family Bible, huh? I had a fellow once tell me he was a bookmaker, and I was green enough then to beg him to take me out and let me see him make 'em. But I've learned a thing or two about you and your kind since then, Charley-boy."

"You come out tonight and I'll show it to you myself."

"Haven't you got my number yet, Cholly; haven't you?"

"What is it, little one, number scared-cat?"

She flung him a glance over the hump of one shoulder. Nineteen summers had breezed lightly over her, and her lips were cherrylike, but tilted slightly as if their fruit had been plucked from the tree of sophistication.

"You bet your life I'm scared."

"Why, out there in Glendale, little one, you won't meet your own shadow, if that's what's hurting you."

"You bet your life I won't."

"My old woman will fix you up all right."

"Ah, come on, kiddo; we're going to have a tree for the little brother, and the old woman will be rigged up like a mast in her spotted silk. Come on; who'll be any the wiser?"

Laughter and mockery rose to the surface of her eyes, bubbled to her lips.

"Huh, what's that only son stuff you gave me yesterday? All about how you had to land a job in the city and make good after your old man died, eh? How about your yesterday's line of talk?"

"I"——

"All about how mother's wandering boy found himself all plastered over with the mortgage and worked nights to get out from under. All about—aw, say, what's the use. Don't I always say to you fellows, 'Boys, cultivate good memories; you need 'em.' Little brother! Ha, joke!"

"I—aw—I—— Little brother's what we call my sister Till's little red-headed kid. Aw, what—what you want to put me in bad for, sister? I'm not so easy to trip up as you think I am."

"Little brother! And say, that's a bottle of malted milk there in your pocket, that you're taking out to him, ain't it? Sure it is."

"This—aw, this—say, you haven't got those snappy black eyes of yours for nothing, have you? This bottle here in my pocket, aw, this—this is a—a bottle of brandy for my old woman. First snow flurry and her left foot begins to drag like a rag with rheumatism."

Her laughter rose and his confusion with it.

"Sure," she cried.

"Aw—aw, come on, Marjie."

"Well, of all the nerve! My name's private property, it is."

"It slipped. It said itself. But, gee, I liked it. Marjie! Some little name."

"Well, of all the nerve!"

"Come on, black eyes. You're off at 5 and we'll catch the 5:18. Who's going to be any the wiser? I got something out there I want to tell you."

"My hearing's all right in the city."

"It's something I want to whisper right where I can get next to that little ear of yours."

"You got a swell chance at that little ear of mine, nix."

"Stingy!"

"You bet your life I'm stingy."

"It's a white Christmas for sure out where I live. Come on out and let me show you a good time, little one."

"I wish you was half as white as this Christmas is. Honest, sometimes I says to myself, ain't there just none of you white? Has a girl like me got to keep dodging all her life?"

"Come, sister, let's catch the 5:18."

"You better run along before you get me all rubbed the wrong way. At 5:18 I'll be buying my own meal ticket, let me tell you that."

"Then buy your own meal ticket, if that's what's hurting you, little touchy, and come out on the 8:18. It's only a 30-minute run; and if you say the word I'll be at the station with bells on to meet you. Come on, I'll show you the Christmas eve of your life. Be a sport, Marjie."

"Yes, I always say inviting a girl to be a sport is a slick way of inviting her to hades. I've seen where being a sport lands a girl, I have. I ain't game, maybe, but, thank God, I ain't. Thank God I ain't, is what I always says to them."

"Well, of all the funny little propositions."

"Well, there's nothing funny about your proposition."

"You're one funny little girl; but, gee, I like you.

There was that in his glance and the white flash of his teeth and the pomaded air of geniality about him that sent a quick network of thrills darting through her; all her perceptions rose, and her color.

"Come on, little girl."

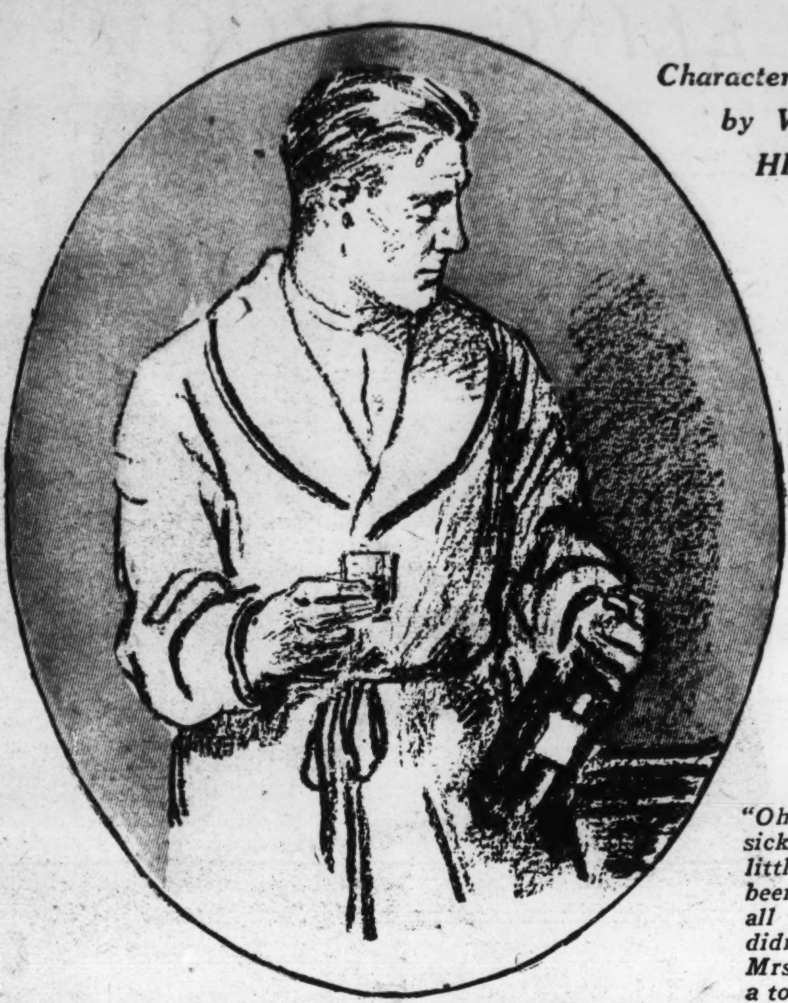
"Oh," she cried, clenching her small tan hand, and a tempest of fury flashing across her face, "you—you fresh fellows uptown here think just because you wear good clothes and can hold down a decent job, that you—you can put up any kind of a proposition to a girl like me. Oh—oh, just every one of you!"

"Well, of all the little spitfires."

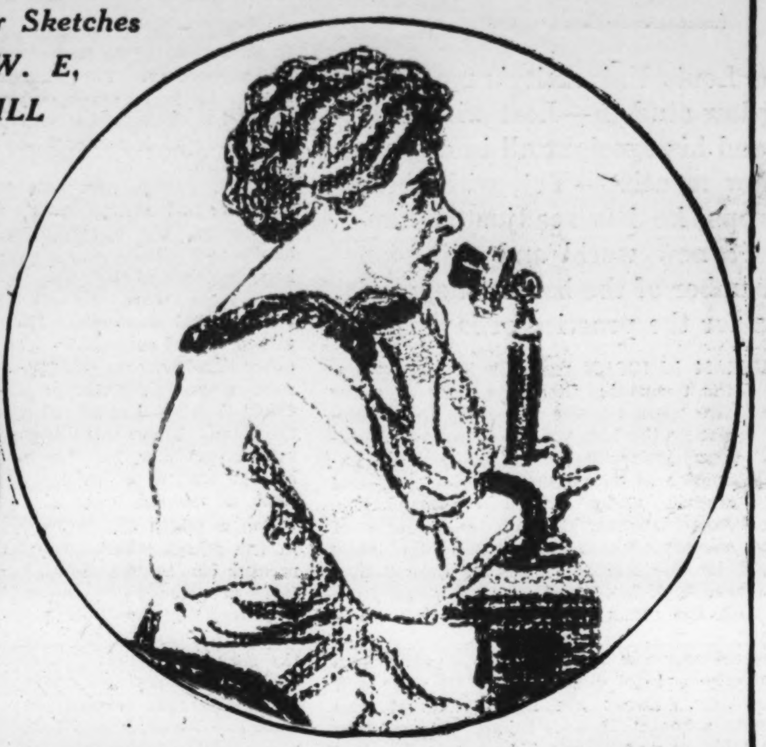
"What do you think I am? What does every one of you, up and down town, think I am? Do I look like

Reminiscences of the "Flu"

Character Sketches
by W. E,
HILL



There was just enough left of Eddie's private stock for one good fishing trip, but it looked as though he would have to use most of it up warding off influenza.



"Oh, Miss Basket, do say you'll come out to us—she's not very sick and it won't be a hard case—in fact what we want is a little visit from you—we've been meaning to ask you out all winter, but somehow we didn't get around to it," etc. Mrs. Peter Newt's sister had a touch of the "flu" and Mrs. Newt, who couldn't find a nurse in the suburbs for love or money, happened to remember a nurse in town who once took care of her.

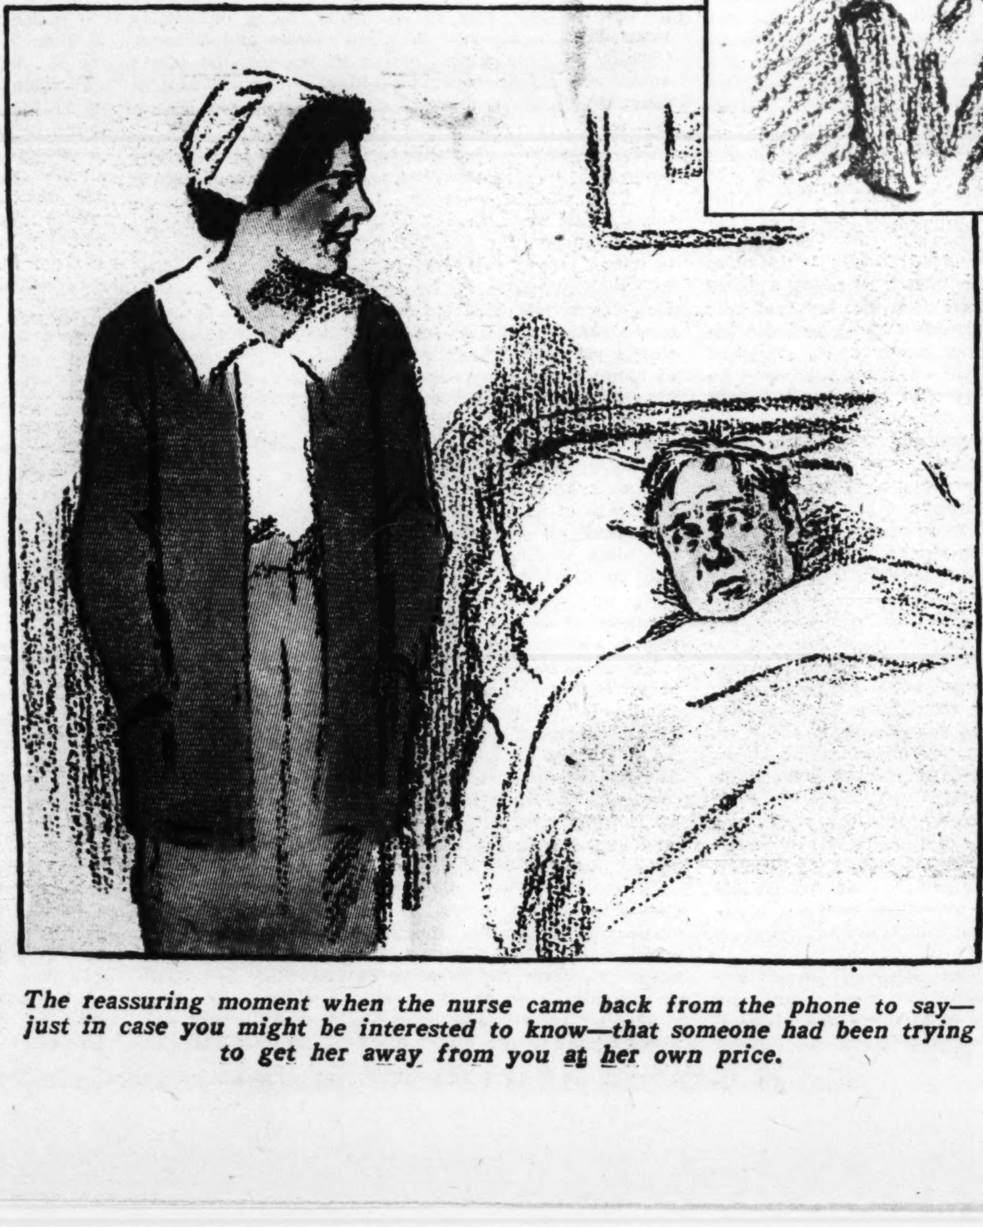
Pity the sad plight of Reina, who, not being dressed for warmth, simply couldn't make up her mind whether to stay out in the cold and get pneumonia or board a crowded street car and risk the influenza germs.



The reassuring moment when the nurse came back from the phone to say—just in case you might be interested to know—that someone had been trying to get her away from you at her own price.

"Avoid all crowds" urged the Board of Health as a safeguard against influenza. Office workers going to and from work — well, you know how it was.

Joe was of the Spartan ype. He went around in he early stages of influenza, sneezing and snuffing, and expected you to pat him on the back and praise him up to the skies or not knowing enough to go home.

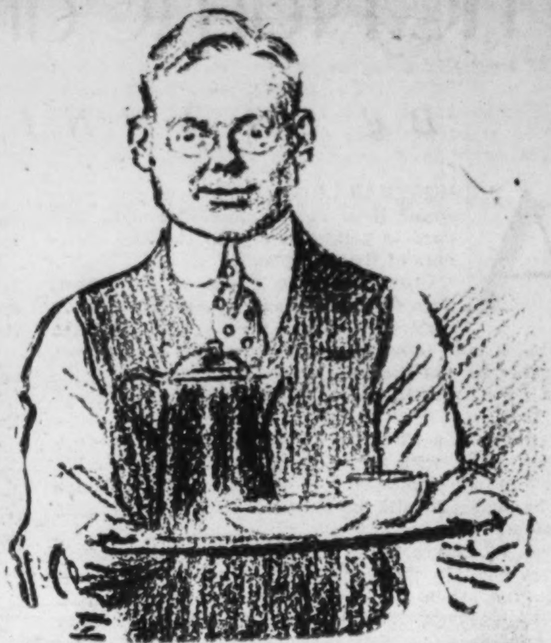
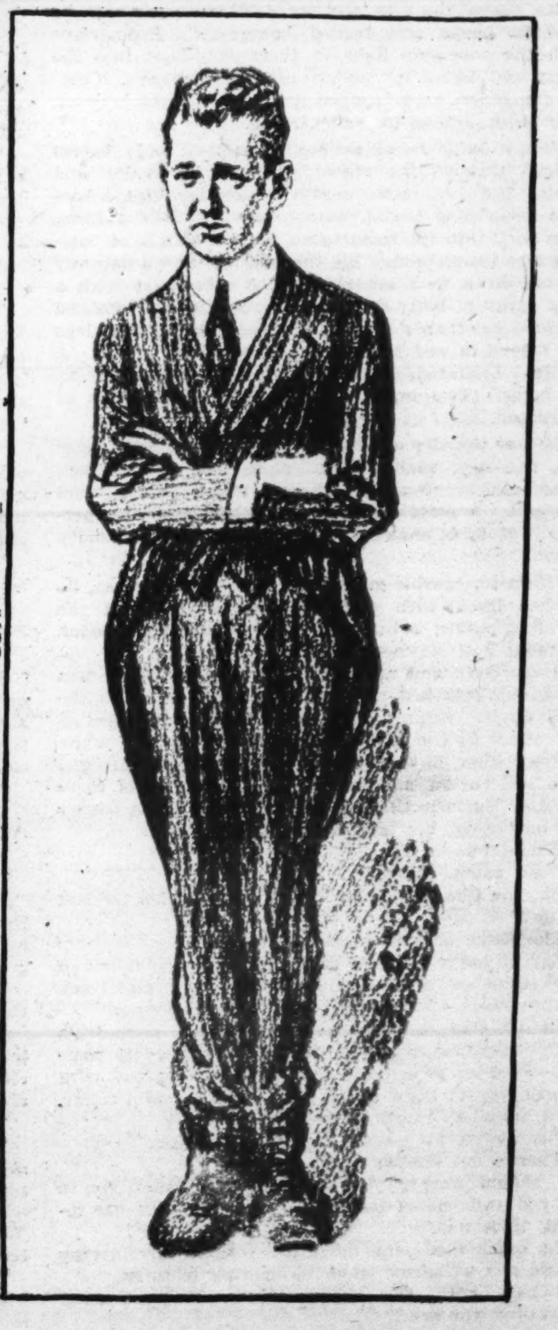
Dear Aunt Eloise had just stepped in to cheer up poor Mabel, who was up and around again after the influenza. "Of course I know," explained Aunt Eloise through her handkerchief, "there's no danger really from infection," etc.



Dearie was down with the "flu," so Pettie got breakfast, bringing in a trayful of burnt oatmeal and very pale coffee. Pettie, who had been singing loudly over his work in the kitchen, was going to be very cheery and tell Dearie she wasn't sick at all. Then he made her eat every bit of the oatmeal "to keep her strength up," and Pettie inwardly mourned the hour Dearie first came into his life.



Harry, the tea hound, mindful of the fact that wet feet and the "flu" go together, had forgotten all about his arctics.

Framingham, Mass., with a population of about 18,000, went through the winter without a case of "flu." The reason generally given is that Framingham is a sort of "Spotless Town." In butcher shops, for instance, foods like meat and fish must be kept in glass cases, as shown above. The same rule applies to bakeries and fruit shops. All soda fountains must use paper cups. The anti-spitting ordinance is enforced. Factories are super-hygienic. So are the schools, with rigid inspection of the health of pupils. The town has one of the finest public bathing pools in the State. Even the watering troughs for horses are hygienic.

Oily skin and shiny nose

How to correct them

Do you know that the oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple? This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. When it is too abundant the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment as frequently as is necessary.

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap (large enough for a week of any Woodbury treatment) together with the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch," giving all the famous Woodbury skin treatments. Or for 15c we will send, in addition, samples of Woodbury's Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream.

ALERT to the least movement of fashion, in touch with every movement of the mode, our own dress designing organization in Paris is definitely confirming in this collection that the vogue for Dresses of Tricolette will receive new impetus this Spring and Summer—will be stronger in fashion than ever before.

Dresses of Tricolettes in many original forms, Tricolettes in the smartest of new shades, portray the new French silhouette, cleverly adapted to American needs, in these original creations, delivered to us direct from aboard ship but a few days ago.

Keen merchants are using to excellent advantage the authentic information that this showing presents of what is THE style in THE season's fabric—Tricolette; of what will be the correct and smartest use of Satins, Wool Jerseys, and every other fabric Paris-sanctioned and Maison Haas-interpreted for the smart women of America.

Your Type!

A natural Emphasis of its Charm

You Golden Blondes, here so delightfully portrayed by Penrhyn Stanlaws! You will remember—always—will you not, that your natural charm is your greatest charm? Yet, it is necessary at times, if you would preserve the natural beauty of your type, that you add a simple, a natural emphasis to its charm.

You will use Djer-Kiss Rouge and Djer-Kiss Face Powder, of course!

An artist, after much study, has prescribed for Golden Blondes, a delightful shading of the cheek with Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday Rouge, to be finished with a soft touch of Djer-Kiss Chair Face Powder.

The result: A natural emphasis of your golden blonde complexion!

If you are not of this Golden Blonde type, you will find your type in the Djer-Kiss Chart—a chart compiled by well-known artists — with the artists' own selection of Formula for the tint of rouge and face powder suitable for that type.

Remember! your Natural Charm is your Greatest Charm

Use Djer-Kiss Rouge and Face Powder naturally—in the way Nature employs the charm of blended color so exquisitely—from the faint pink of the blush rose to the crimson of the deep velvet rose.

Send for Djer-Kiss Color Cards today

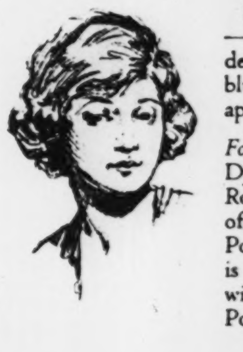
ROUGE CHART

Djer-Kiss Vanishing Cream — pure, soft, fragrant — furnishes a wonderfully refined, adherent base for both Rouge and Face Powder,

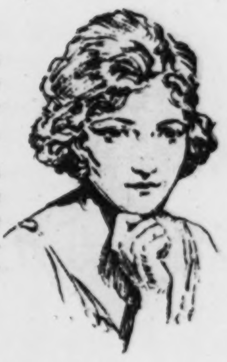
Select your own type—the type which most nearly includes your own beauty of coloring



SILVER BLONDE

—the Poet's type. Thin delicate skin, flaxen hair, blue eyes limpid and wide apart.

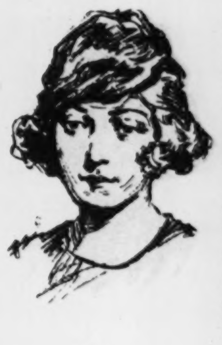
Formula: Delicately shade Djer-Kiss Duchesse Marie Rouge. Finish with touch of Djer-Kiss Blanche Face Powder. If a rose glow is desired, finish lightly with Djer-Kiss Rose Face Powder.



GOLDEN BLONDE

Golden Hair. The skin of warmer tint than the Silver Blonde. Rosy color in cheeks and blue eyes.

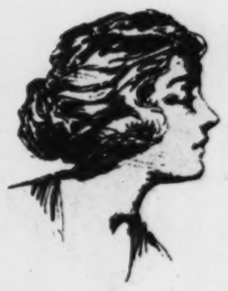
Formula: Use Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday Rouge shading carefully into the coloring of the skin. Finish with Djer-Kiss Chair Face Powder.



ASH BLONDE

Grayish Blue Eyes. A skin less colorful than the Golden Blonde. Brownish glints and gleams in hair.

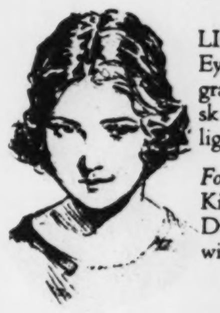
Formula: Brighten the cheeks skillfully with Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday Rouge. Soften with final touch of Djer-Kiss Chair Face Powder. Or if a deeper rose-glow is desired, finish with Djer-Kiss Rose Face Powder.



TITIAN TYPE

—the Painter's type—with hair of wonderful shades of burnished gold and reddish tints.

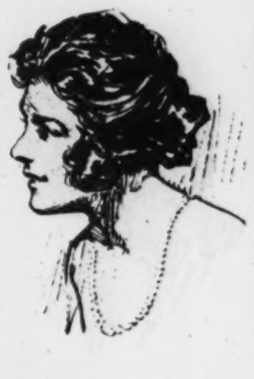
Formula: Daintily apply Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday Rouge. Finish with Djer-Kiss Chair Face Powder.



LIGHT BRUNETTE

Eyes of gray or bluish gray. A fine strong white skin contrasting with light brown hair.

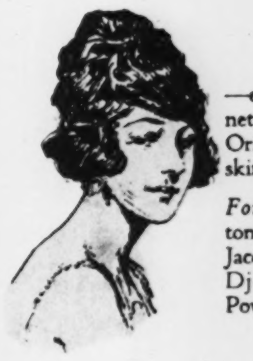
Formula: Either Djer-Kiss Charlotte Corday or Duchesse Marie Rouge, with Chair Face Powder.



AMERICAN BRUNETTE

Brilliant Brunette. A fine vibrant skin. Dark brown hair. Sparkling brown eyes which call for lively color.

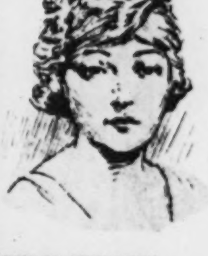
Formula: Use Princesse Jacqueline Rouge. Finish with Chair or Blanche Face Powder.



SPANISH BRUNETTE

—embraces darker brunette types with deeper Oriental coloring of hair, skin and eyes.

Formula: Use ruddy-toned Rouge Princesse Jacqueline. And with it, Djer-Kiss Rachel Face Powder.



GRAY-HAIRED TYPE

This cannot actually be called a type—as no one is born with gray hair. The gray-haired woman is the distinguished woman—the type of Grande Dame.

Formula: If the gray-haired type possesses blue eyes or gray eyes, the Duchesse Marie Djer-Kiss Rouge should be used, with Blanche Face Powder. If dark eyed, use Princesse Jacqueline or Charlotte Corday Rouge with Chair or Rachel Face Powder.

Who Was In It That You Knew?

In the ranks of those who marched to victory or death only a couple of years ago, was there brother or son or relative of yours? Would you like to have a record of the wonderful things he did? Would you like to keep the story of the splendid fight he made?

If he was in France, if he was one of the gallant lads that stopped the German rush at Chateau-Thierry—that smashed the Hindenburg line—that won through the Argonne Forest to Sedan—you will surely want a permanent record of the things that he did, of all that he saw and heard, of everything that went on around him.

If he was one of those who were unable to get over, but gave unstintingly of their time, of their efforts—who helped the fighters fight—you will want to see how much his efforts contributed to the victory, how his work helped to win the war.

All of this—the whole story, from beginning to victorious end, is now yours in

FRANK H. SIMONDS'

History of the World War

Five Large Volumes, Size 10¼x7¼x1¾ Inches—1000 Illustrations

Once in a generation—perhaps—there appears one man with a gift for writing history in a way to make it interesting to everyone—to make it vital, compelling. Such was Ridpath; such, in a larger degree, were Macaulay and Plutarch. Such a genius combines a natural gift for language, a natural gift for history, a natural gift for facts with great vision and the ability to make you see and be thrilled by his vision. This greatest war has brought Simonds. His tale is simple and direct enough to captivate children, yet so profoundly true as to hold scholars.

So great is Simonds' fame as a Historian, so pre-eminent is his standing, that famous statesmen and soldiers everywhere---men who have played big parts in this war---who from intimate personal knowledge know better than anyone else some part or some phase of the conflict---have been glad to contribute their knowledge to and proud to have their names associated with Simonds' "History of the World War."

Great Causes bring forth Great Men. This War has brought many brilliant writers—and one great historian—Frank H. Simonds. The French Revolution had its Carlyle—the British Macaulay—the World War has Frank H. Simonds.

Roosevelt Said—

"Mr. Frank H. Simonds' History of the Great War is a very remarkable work. It is not too much to say that no other man in this or any other country can quite parallel the work that Mr. Simonds has done. It is hard to say what most to admire: the really extraordinary grasp of the essential facts of the war which is shown, or the transparent clearness with which the facts are brought out or the entire fairness and impartiality of the conclusions."

© Underwood & Underwood.

Chas. M. Schwab says:

"From the beginning Mr. Simonds has developed a peculiar insight with regard to the Great War. No doubt there will be other striking records, but as yet I have seen none quite like that which Mr. Simonds has written."

Lord Northcliffe says:

"I do not know of a better guide to the War than Mr. Frank H. Simonds."

Dr. Hugh Black says:

"I know no one in America who has more knowledge and more insight into the great War than Frank H. Simonds."

President Thwing of Western Reserve University says:

"Simonds has for all these years seemed to me the wisest interpreter of all the minds that have tried to learn or to tell the meaning of this tremendous time. I rejoice that his contemporary interpretations are followed by the historical ones. Concerning the nearness of the events about which Mr. Simonds is now giving us these timely volumes, it should be remembered that Thucydides wrote his history of the Peloponnesian War while the War itself was going on."

General Pershing Sent for Simonds

Just as soon as possible after the armistice, General Pershing sent for Simonds and placed at his disposal his records of America's part in the War. He sent him over the battlefields; he let him talk with commanding generals, with officers and with privates. Even Colonel House, that Sphynx of the political world, talked with Simonds for hours and hours about phases of the war that are known even now only to a select few.

And these two great Americans did this not out of any favoritism for Simonds, but because they realized that his history would be the standard History of the World War and they wanted to be sure that all his facts were right—that they came direct from the fountainhead.

Famous statesmen and generals from all the Allied countries felt the same, and those who from intimate personal knowledge know better than anyone else some part or phase of the conflict, have gladly contributed that knowledge to Simonds' "History of the World War."

Here are a few of these contributors. There are many others almost equally famous:

Just a Farmer Boy From County Cork

Michael O'Leary—age 25—the same Michael who looked after the pigs on the little farm in the County of Cork—crept up on the enemy single-handed, and before they could swing their deadly machine gun around, shot the crew of five in five seconds—dashed to another trench—shot three more Boches—captured two—took two barricades—saved his whole company from certain destruction—then came back with his prisoners, as cool as if he had been for a stroll in the park.

This is only one of the 200 true adventures of the Great War, which you may now have free.

200 TRUE STORIES OF THE GREAT WAR FREE

Six Volumes

It happens that we have left from a huge edition a few hundred copies of a wonderful set of books—the real experiences of real people.

These few hundred sets are not enough to sell in our usual way, so we have decided that to the first few hundred people who send this coupon we will give, entirely free of charge, one of these sets.

In Frank H. Simonds' History you get the larger aspects of the War. In this set of books you get the intimate, personal aspects.

Each and every one of these two hundred tales is a story of romance almost beyond belief. Here are unexpected endings. Here is suspense—here terror and despair—here glad tidings—here happy endings. Sometimes the escaped spy tells his own story. Now the woman who fell into the hands of the Turks tells her story. Now a man in the Foreign Legion tells unbelievable tales of those glorious blackguards—those heroic rascals; there is the story of a beautiful Englishwoman of title who ensnared German spies; the story of the disgraced officer who fought his way back.

There are only a few of these sets to be given away—just a remnant of a huge edition that was snapped up by eager readers.
